vol. VIII, no. 22 | 383-6731/545-7060 | thursday, february 27, 1986 | 2 sections | 35 cents

Selectmen object to phone changes

Selectmen will write a letter to New England Telephone, expressing their objection to a plan to sever Cohasset from the 617 area code.

The utility company recently announced plans to change the area code for the entire South Shore. Sen. William Golden, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, and members of the South Shore Coalition reacted strongly against the proposal.

The objections stem from the telephone company's decision to segregate the South Shore from the Boston area. Sen. Golden has been vehement in his condemnation of the proposal, saying it is another example of prejudice against the South Shore.

Selectman Diane Sullivan, Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Coalition, requested that selectmen join other Coalition towns in expressing the town's objections in a letter to the company.

Sullivan, who attended last week's Coalition meeting when the proposal was discussed, noted that "no one in the Coalition thought this was a good idea. The entire North Shore would be left with the 617 number, and the entire South Shore will have a new area code if the telephone company stays with this plan."

The selectman said the feeling of the Coalition members was that that it would disenfranchise the South Shore from the Boston industrial and commercial area. "I feel very strongly this should not happen," she said Tuesday night.

Sullivan explained that the utility company needs no public approval, hearings or permission to change the towns' area codes. When Chairman Frank England asked how the area code change should be divided, Sullivan answered, "they should come up with a more equitable division."

Selectman Clifford Mitman suggested that selectmen "maybe hooking onto the wrong star" by joining the South Shore Coalition's fight against the telephone company. He suggested that Cohasset selectmen write an individual letter to the company, explaining their personal disatisfaction with the planned change.

Selectmen agreed to forward a copy of the letter to the telephone company, Sen. Golden and Rep. Murray.

After a stinging attack on New England Telephone Co. plans to implement a new area code here in 1989, state Sen. William Golden and members of the South Shore Coalition urged company officials to include six coalition towns in the new 617 area code.

Golden (D-Weymouth), who said proposed changes have a "direct effect" on the region's identity as part of the Boston metropolitan area, threatened "action in both the legislature and in court" to oppose the company's plans to split the South Shore into two new area codes.

Emissions from landfill may force more restrictions

An engineering firm is reviewing lab results of groundwater monitoring tests conducted at Cohasset Heights Ltd. A hearing on those results and recommendations to limit the expansion of the landfill will be revealed during a public hearing the Board of Health hopes to schedule within a month.

The call to limit the site assignment for the commercial landfill was made by the Board of Health last week. Continuous laboratory tests conducted by the landfill's engineers have shown that leachate is flowing from the dump's protective liner into the underground and surface water surrounding portions of the Cedar Street landfill.

Leachate is the liquid refuse which is a natural emission from a landfill. The Board of Health is concerned that contaminated leachate, containing chemical solvents and gasoline by-products, are leaking from the landfill's protective liner into the town's underground water supply.

A review of previous lab tests conducted by GHR Engineering Corp. reveals that for the past two years, chemicals such as acetone and organic Benzene -25, mythylene chloride, 1,2 Dichloroethane, Benzene, and gasoline components, tetrachlorethylene, toluenem and ethylbenzene, have been found in the underdrain tests.

According to Health Agent Joseph Godzik, laboratory tests are conducted quarterly at the landfill. The latest tests were completed in December, 1985, or January, 1986 and "showed pretty much the same thing" as the previous reports, he said.

The most recent tests results have been incorporated into the landfill's request for expansion of its site assignment, Dr. Godzik said. The results have been consistent, he noted, in the type of leachate found in the groundwater tests.

Last week, the health board voted to hire Camp, Dresser and McKee to conduct its own monitoring tests and to make recommendations on the request by Cohasset Heights to expand its operation.

No tracings of leachate have ever been found in the town's public water supply at Lily Pond, Dr. Godzik said. "But it's certainly a problem when leachate is found off the site.

"The Board of Health has looked at this situation for a long time," he continued. "We had hoped the landfill operators would deal with this in a timely fashion. But it's been dragging on now for a couple of years."

The health agent emphasized that although no leachate has been found in the town's water supply area, "the Board of Health has said this situation is not okay. The threat is there because not all the leachate is being contained in the landfill. That's what we are concerned about."

The landfill contains a leachate liner which is designed to contain all refuse within the site. GHR Engineering recently designed a new leachate-treatment facility for the landfill. The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) allowed the landfill owners to temporarily expand the operation while plans for the treatment facility were being devised. The state has also required that

Cohasset's week . . .

Gjesteby attends conference

Recently Martha K. Gjesteby was among the officers of regional planning agencies who gathered in Washington, D.C. to attend the National Association of Regional Council's Federal Briefing Conference.

Ms. Gjesteby attended many of the workshops and discussions, including an address by Neal R. Pierce, founder and contributing editor of the National Journal and a syndicated columnist for the Washington Post. Pierce spoke about the infrastructure crisis and presented innovative ways to deal with the nation's decaying public transportation system. Pierce was speaking particularly to the manner in which state and local government relate to the federal government's policies on the transportation issue.

Other workshops attended by Ms. Gjesteby include the membership legislative committee meetings, discussions on the Clean Water Act and Groundwater Protection, a hearing on the National Council on Public Works Improvement, and a foreign policy briefing that discussed terrorist activities against the United States and expressed concern for American citizens traveling abroad.

Ms. Gjesteby is the assistant treasurer of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), where she has been a member of the council's executive committee for the past three years.

Who are these men? Bring your guess to the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy by Tuesday noon. For the answer to last week's Peek at the Past, see page 25.

Five Democratic delagates

At a meeting of the town Democratic party held last Saturday at town hall, five members were selected as delegates to the state convention. Fred Koed, Ned Tebbitts, Nancy Bettinger, Patricia Laugelle and Priscilla Tebbitts will be attending the Democratic state convention to be held in Springfield in May.

Dump study progresses

The Cohasset Disposal Area Study Committee is scheduled to meet with members of the South Shore Coalition in March.

A meeting between the local committee and the regional coalition is being scheduled to discuss the specific goal of regionalizing efforts for a resource-recovery disposal plan.

According to committee chairman Sharon Becker, the town has definitely dismissed SEMASS as a disposal option. Other alternatives have been reviewed and discussed, Becker said, and it appears a regional approach is the best solution for Cohasset.

After attending a South Shore Coalition meeting last month, it was decided that a session will be held in March to discuss the concept of a regional disposal resource-recovery facility with several South Shore communities.

Government Committeee to meet with assessors

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

The Town Government Structure Committee continued its look at the warrant article for a full-time town assessor at their meeting Tuesday night.

At its last meeting the committee decided to go ahead with plans to submit an article to Town Meeting despite a lack of support from the Board of Assessors.

According to Chairman John McNabb Jr., the Board of Assessors has since submitted their own article, requesting $30,000 for salary and $5,000 for an expense account.

McNabb plans to invite the Board of Assessors or representatives from it to the next Government Structure meeting to discuss in detail the need for an assessor.

McNabb told the committee he had spoken to assessors Chairman Thomas Duggan last week.

"At that point the assessors had not fully discussed or voted to do it," he said.

McNabb also stated that the Board of Assessors had found no fault in the rationale for a full-time assessor. McNabb listed the following reasons for creating the position: to update figures, prepare court cases, negotiating and managing outside contracts for 100 percent revaluation, informal hearings, maintaining collections, getting bills out, updating records, work with commercial properties, and to maintain a good set of assessors' maps.

McNabb compiled the list from reports by Osborne Ingram and John O'Donnell on the policy of other towns in Massachusetts.

O'Donnell and Ingram concluded that most towns find it necessary to have a full-time assessor in the office. They also found most towns also use an outside contractor to help in the 100 percent revaluation process.

The committee agreed to check into the efficiency of the assessing system by comparing the number of callbacks per 1,000 pieces of property to the number in other communities.

"The better a system is, the more smoothly it runs," said O'Donnell. "The more inefficient and incompetent, the more callbacks."

"I think a professional in that office would help the office's performance," Ingram responded.

The committee's next meeting will be Wednesday, March 12.

Chemicals in landfill leachate. . .

"Camp, Dresser and McKee are taking a good hard look at the situation," Dr. Godzik said. "The Board of Health will press forward with a hearing on their recommendations.

"We were hoping that the DEQE would step in, but they haven't. In September they wrote a letter to Cohasset Heights saying their time frame wasover, but nothing has happened."

In the meantime, Cohasset Heights will appear before the Zoning Board of Appeals in March for a special permit. Zoning Enforcement Officer Edward Poskus ruled two weeks ago that a 1976 permit to the landfill is not adequate for the type of operation currently conducted at the site.

The 1976 permit allowed for commercial debris to be dumped at the landfill, Poskus ruled. Recent inspections of the landfill revealed that commercial refuse, including gasoline by-products and tires, were being brought to the site.

Poskus threatened to close the site unless the owners applied for the special permit. Application for the permit was made, and a hearing with the zoning board will be scheduled next month.
the landfill sign a contract for the disposal of leachate.

According to Dr. Godzik, wastewater treatment facilities have been contacted by the landfill operators, but thus far there has been no agreement to haul the leachate from the Cedar Street site.

Selectmen approve preliminary change to King Street

With no timetable set for construction, selectmen approved the state's preliminary plan to reconstruct the lower King Street - Route 3A intersection.

As presented by state Department of Public Works engineer Frank Thompson, the reconstruction would include a smaller radius into King Street so the two streets will meet at a 90 degree angle. That change will help reduce the speed of vehicles entering the residential street from the state highway.

A small island would help channel the traffic between the two streets, he explained.

With selectmen's approval of the preliminary geometric drawing, the engineer will present it to the DPW project and district engineers. Once funding is allocated for the plan, a final design and construction timetable can be established.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, who attended Tuesday night's meeting, said the legislature has been working hard to secure funds for state highway projects. She assured selectmen there would be money available for the redesign of King Street, which she said, was "the worst traffic intersection when I was a selectman."

Lee Cisneros of 312 King Street, suggested that the speed limit along the state road be standardized. He suggested a limit of 35 m.p.h. be established along the entire highway. Currently, the limit is 35 m.p.h. in the business areas near Cushing Plaza, but is increased to 50 m.p.h. near King Street.

He said the change in speed limits is confusing to motorists.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle objected to the idea, saying a standardized limit of 35 m.p.h. is too slow in many areas of Rte. 3A.

Engineer Thompson explained that the town may make suggestions, but speed limits are set by the average speed of motorists in that area. "It's been proved that putting up a sign will not set the speed," he said.

The intersection redesign was prompted by a letter last fall to selectmen and Rep. Murray from King Street resident Daniel Cotton. Cotton and neighbor Arnold Jenks have witnessed several severe accidents in the v i cinity, caused by speeding cars turning into King Street from Rte.3A. Several persons have been injured in recent accidents near the intersection.

Late last year, a vehicle sped along the intersection and collided into Cotton's home. It was after that accident that Cotton informed selectmen of the need to rectify the traffic problem.

After reviewing the proposed state plan, Cotton said "it's exactly right."

Jenks suggested that the state create "an even sharper turn into King Street" to help reduce speed further.

Thompson told selectmen there was no way to predict when the project would begin. Funds for the plan must be approved by the state legislature before the DPW begins final preparation of the design.

"We can expedite that quickly," Rep. Murray assured selectmen. "It's been started in the legislature already."

When questioned by Cotton how long it would be

Whatever happened to?

Arthur Clark, Log'n Line & veteran town politico lives in N.H.

It was after he retired from public life in 1982 that Cohasset's Arthur Clark decided to move to "the boonies."

Settled within 20 acres of wilderness, Clark and his wife Eunice, are now living in a new home built on the shores of the Contookok River in Concord, N.H.

"We actually live in Concord (the state capital of New Hampshire)," Clark said in a telephone interview this week. "But it's in the boonies."

Since he retired from his duties as the town's first executive secretary, Clark moved permanently to the area he had summered in for 20 years. He cleared much of the woodland himself and a home was constructed on the property. "It's smaller than the home we owned in Cohasset, but it's nice," he commented.

Since he was "a young man" Clark was involved in politics and public life in Cohasset. Prior to his service as executive secretary in 1981, he was a selectman for 14 years. He had been a water commissioner for three years, a school committee member for 12 years and on the advisory committee for six years. "I was on a lot of other committees, too," he noted.

Of his year and a half as executive secretary Clark stated, "I never intended to stay there long. When I was a selectman, I had been more or less a fulltime selectman. I was always around. In the meantime, I got out and no one was in charge.

"Way back, I was opposed to the idea of an executive secretary. I liked it when the local selectmen could put in the time. But I guess now you have to have an executive secretary. I liked a three-man board better. It seems there's too much clerical help these days. If you look at the town's expenses then, and now, you'd see that."

All together, Clark served the town in various offices for more than 30 years. He was a selectman during the blizzard of 1978, helping to secure federal and state funds for rehabilitation work following the devastation. As a water commissioner, he obtained a HUD loan for the construction of the water treatment plant and the reservoir. As a selectman he worked to secure a grant for those projects. And when he was first elected "as a young man," Clark was instrumental in obtaining funds for the construction of housing for the elderly.

He was a member of the Cohasset Rotary and the Lodge of Masons. He was also a longtime member of the Beechwood Congregational Church.

"I've had my share of politics," he said in explaining his reasons for retiring. "I had more than 30 years of it. But I'm still interested. I'm anxious to see how the elections will turn out, and what will happen to the sewer issue."

The former owner of a local plumbing and heating business, Clark was a regular for a morning cup of coffee at the Log 'n Line. "I miss my friends. I'm in communication with some of them, and I try to get down once a month or so," he noted. "In the good weather, I get down about once a month."

Arthur Clark

After summering in Concord for 20 years, Clark said he made many friends there. He and his wife wanted a smaller home, and decided the picturesque location of the New Hampshire property would be the perfect place.

The Cohasset Boy Scouts still continue to camp on the Clark's property each summer. For two or three days, the boys set camp along the river in the thick woods surrounding their home.

The 77 year-old Cohasset native said the town has changed in the past few years. "It's a Yuppie town now, I guess," he commented. "The natives are a minority now. It was entirely different when I was a young man. In those days, the natives were the majority."

Clark has sold the family's homestead. He spends his days "putting around the house, helping my friends here. I do a little snow shoveling when I can, and I cut my wood."

When asked what he's been doing since his retirement four years ago, Clark responded, "taking life easy."

Although now a resident of New Hampshire, Clark's three sons have stayed closer to home. Sons Donald and Jimmy reside in Hingham and Bobby is in Braintree. His daughter Betty lives in Salem, N.H.

Court case on mooring

The town has moved to dismiss a lawsuit filed against Harbormaster Harry Ritter.

Gregory Small has filed suit in Plymouth County Superior Court, alleging that Ritter denied him a mooring space in the harbor last year. Small has claimed that Ritter did not properly notify him that a mooring was available, and when he did not accept it, the mooring space was given to the name next in line on the waiting list.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson has filed a motion to have the case dismissed, saying the complaint does not properly belong in the jurisdiction of Plymouth County.

A hearing on that motion is scheduled for Feb. 27.

School officials discuss programs & scheduling

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

School budget discussions Monday night focused on the expansion of the gifted-and-talented program and scheduling conflicts in the junior high school.

Dorothy Wondolowski, director of the gifted-and-talented program made a presentation to the committee, outlining her different responsibilities.

Currently Mrs. Wondolowski is at 60 percent of full time. However, she says she is in the schools five days a week. Putting her position to 100 percent would mean an $8,000 budget increase.

Superintendent Eugene Crowell urged the board to "fund this thing and make it legitimate."

The school committee did not put it to a vote. Instead Chairman Dr. Joseph Nedrow appointed a sub-committee to look at it.

"I want the budget to be defensible no matter who asks the questions," Dr. Nedrow explained.

Wondolowski began the program teaching gifted 5th and 6th graders at the Deerhill School four years ago, at 40 percent of full time.

In the past few years she says her role has changed and she sees herself more as an enrichment coordinator.

Some of the programs she has incorporated include a "Grade Books" program at the Osgood School and mini-courses at the Deerhill.

Mrs. Wondolowski maintains that the program reaches more than just the academically gifted and talented. Her courses draw students from both in and out of the "talent pool."

"Teachers are looking at children differently. It is not just for children who do well academically," she said.

Wondolowski also teaches social studies one day a week in the junior high in which she tries to develop specific thinking and research skills.

She would like to see a program continued into the high school.

"I don't see it as a separate class at all," she explained. "It would be like a mentorship program."

Mrs. Wondolowski estimates that 235 students in grades 2-11 have received some direct enrichment service.

"I cannot give you a specific number for those who have received enrichment indirectly," she said.

"My role is like that of a physical education teacher," she continued, "who is also a varsity coach. I am responsible for all in the school as well as my own group of talented athletes."

High school Principal Richard Streeter presented projections of next year's class sizes in English, math and foreign language.

Member Jack Langmaid noted that scheduling problems arise because of the many requirements of students in the seventh and eighth grades.

Supt. Crowell who supports the modified eight-period day, told the committee, "Unless you solve major scheduling problems I think you've got $18,000 to save in the instrumental music instructor."

Supt. Crowell added later that he did in fact support the music program.

The committee did not make any decisions and will meet again on Monday night.

Selectmen discuss King Street change

before residents see a change in that intersection, Thompson replied. "It depends on what Boston says about the funding. We have a stack of requests that high," he noted, spreading his hands over an imaginary pile of papers.

In other action Tuesday night, selectmen did not approve a change in the town's cemetery fees, although they will discuss the town's policy for grave digging with the executive secretary.

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle explained that the town's grave digger, Herbert Marsh, is paid per grave. The cost for having a grave dug is $125, unless there are extenuating circumstances and extra personnel and machinery are necessary.

Laugelle suggested that because Marsh earns $45 whether he digs a grave on the weekends or holidays, the town is saving more money than if a private contractor was hired for the job.

Fourteen percent of all grave diggings are done on weekends or holidays, he said. "If you wanted to pay time and a half, it would be a hell of a lot more than you're paying now," Laugelle told selectmen.

Although selectmen agreed to support the superintendent's recommendation, Selectman Sullivan noted that the recent Fair Labor Standards Act may complicate the situation. She suggested that because the employee is paid straight time for weekends and holidays, there is a possibility he could bring a labor complaint against the town.

Selectmen decided to have Executive Secretary Donald Andrew look at the situation, and perhaps suggest employing a private contractor for weekends and holidays. Sullivan suggested that Marsh could be hired for those times as a self-employed contractor.

In other action, the board voted to send a letter to Sen. Golden and Rep. Murray stating that all towns should be reimbursed by the state for 90 percent of the money they will lose this year in federal revenue sharing funds. Under Gov. Michael Dukakis' proposal, Cohasset will receive only 10 percent of the lost revenue sharing funds from the state. Other "poorer" communities, such as Whitman and Abington, will be receiving 90 percent of the total amount.

Selectmen increased the plumbing inspection and permit fee to $13 from the previous $12 level. They also voted to appoint architect Robert A. Stansell to the Police and Fire Station Renovation Committee. Firefighter Arthur Pompeo will represent the firefighters' union as an ex officio member.

A gala celebration recently took place at the Osgood School when the third grade celebrated the publication of their newspaper, the "Osgood Scoop." Under the direction of Mrs. Barbara Hislop, Carol Bishop and Tanna Kasperowicz, the journal has earned praise from its many readers.

☐ Tom Wigmore had a super trip, he just returned from the Daytona 500! He was gone for ten days, and only managed to think about home when he heard the reports that we were getting snowstorms here. Can't you just picture his grin as he is soaking up the rays while someone else is doing the plowing? Anyway, he loved the race, he was one of 125,000 people that attended the event. No wonder we couldn't pick his face out in the crowd when the cameras scanned the people!

☐ Welcome home to Jimmy ("Roso") Rosano! After 39 days at South Shore hospital, we are happy to say that Jimmy is on the mend, and will soon be back "around town".

☐ Meanwhile, John Replogle won't be home for a while. John, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Replogle, is in England as a Hansard Scholar for Parliamentary Government. He is interned to the head Shadow Opposition Party (the Labor Party as we know it) in the House of Commons. He is having a marvelous learning experience, as well as being able to travel in his spare time. John will be home in April for a while, then he's off to France in the Fall. John is enrolled as a sophomore at Dartmouth College.

☐ Congratulations to Susan R. Killilea, who was recently appointed to Financial Services Representative by the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank FSB. Susan will be on hand to discuss personal banking needs and keep depositers aware of investment and savings opportunities. Mrs. Killilea is a former teacher with the Hingham public schools, and a long-time resident of Cohasset.

☐ Hats off to Dan Leahy for winning the King Award. He is the first recipient of this coveted award that is to be an annual event for the business community of Cohasset.

☐ Glad to hear that Ann Crawford's leg is on the mend! Ann suffered a broken leg on the ice we had recently, but she reports that she is getting stronger daily.

☐ For all of you skiing enthusiastics, don't forget to take advantage of the Cohasset Recreation Department's Ski trip to Kings Ridge in New Hampshire. It will take place on Sunday March 16, with buses leaving the Town Hall at 5 a.m. and returning at 7:30. The cost for the trip is $27 per person, with rentals and lessons available for additional fees. You must be in the 17 or younger age bracket, and 45 people is the limit. Call the Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more details and to register.

☐ Congratulations to the boys basketball team on their big win over Andover last Saturday. Let's hope that we can keep congratulating them all the way to the end of the States, as the Boston Globe predicted that they would do!

☐ While on the subject of sports, Jon Anderson will surely be missed as our Soccer coach next fall, its hard to imagine the gents without him at the helm. It is certain that our loss is Babson College's gain, and we wish him much success and happiness.

☐ Congratulations to Liam Stanford, who finished in the top 10 in the States wrestling tournament that was held last weekend. The best news is that Liam is only a junior, so watch out for him next year!

☐ Robin DeVito 10, and her sister Lauren, 7 of King Street swim for the Greater Boston Swim Club.

On the weekend of Feb. 15, they qualified in Attleboro for age group finals to be held at Brown Univeristy March 7-9.

Both girls also swim for the Dorchester YWCA; on Feb. 22 they swam the district YWCA Championship. Robin finished fourth and Lauren placed 13th for eight and under girls.

They will now go on to the New England Championship Mar. 15.

☐ Joann Egan of Cohasset was among 46 Jack Conway Company associates and guests who attended an eight-day real estate conference in Jamaica. Members of the President's Gold Club, top producing associates of the Jack Conway Company, qualified for the company sponsored conference.

Egan joined the Hingham office in 1973. She has qualified for the President's Silver Club. She is a member of the Eastern Air Lines' Silverliners Stewardess Alumni, the "Conway-Country" Golf League and a former member of the Florence Crittenton League.

☐ That's the news for this week. If you have any of your own to report, please don't forget to do so.

Cohasset sports roundup . . .

By Lisa Shumaker

HOCKEY

The hockey team concluded their season with a commendable 10-10 record. Coach Dennis Walsh was pleased with the year and felt his team showed much improvement, especially in the second half of the season. Cohasset won four games in a row toward the end which turned its season around. Among the team's achievements this year were beating Scituate three times, Duxbury twice, and Sandwich easily the second time around. Walsh feels the boys could have very easily had a winning record, but unfortunately a few bad breaks and close games went against them.

Next year, Walsh believes if his players work hard in the off season, Cohasset will be a tough competitor. Walsh feels that his young team will greatly benefit from this year's experience and should post a winning record. Cohasset will be looking toward Jeff Hartwell, Philip Mahoney, Bob Durkin, and Kevin Leary for leadership next season.

Walsh also expects goalie, Peter Sandblom, high scorer, Danny Pompeo, Todd Fitzpatrick, and Craig Mulcahy to contribute greatly next year. Craig Mulcahy's efforts as defense will undoubtedly give Cohasset the boost it needs for he was elected to the All League Team this year.

Overall, Walsh was happy with his team's progress, and he hopes this progress continues and spurs Cohasset on to a greater success next year.

Boys' Basketball

Once again, the boys astounded all by beating a presumably superior team handily last Saturday. Not only did Cohasset defeat Andover 74-68, but they won at Boston College. Many teams would have crumbled under the pressure of playing in such a huge arena, but Cohasset played with the poise and confidence of any Big East team.

Coach Ed Minelli was obviously pleased with the win which was sparked by a "great team effort." Minelli also said the final score of the game was deceiving, for the Skippers led by at least 10 throughout most of the second half.

Brian Edwards led all scorers with 26 points followed by James Creed who had 16 points along with 12 rebounds and six blocks. Tony Bogary pumped in 13 points and dished off 12 assists. Tommy Larson who had 13 points and Matt Maloney both had outstanding rebounding games and played extremely well under pressure.

Bobby Shultz and David Shumaker both played well defensively converting steals and deflections into baskets. Minelli was especially impressed with Tommy Larson, Matt Maloney and David Shumaker whom he thought played their best game of their seasons.

Minelli thought this victory was a great way to go into the tournament which begins Tuesday. If Cohasset wins this game against Blue Hills, they will play Saturday against either Chatham or Sacred Heart. The Skippers must win their next five games in order to make it to Worcester and the State Championship.

Minelli is planning on winning these last six games to fulfill Cohasset's final goal this season.

A fortunate choice

The buzz around town is . . . elections.

With more than a month to go, and the deadline for filing nomination papers a week away, people are already busily debating the pros and cons of potential candidates.

It is indeed the most interesting election to hit Cohasset in some time . . . at least since we gained notoriety as having the first election in Massachusetts municipal history result in a tie vote.

Along with the chatter about our likely candidates, is the question - why are these people running for office? What has inspired these people to start up a costly campaign, debate the issues, hold fundraisers, meet and greet strangers, and work harder than they've ever worked for a part-time non-salaried position in which their every public utterance is held up to scrutiny?

We'd certainly like to hear some answers. What makes this year's elections so popular? Is it the glory, the ambition, the willingness to sacrifice spare time and family commitments? Is it the need to repay a community that has been a good home for its residents?

It's probably a mixture of all possible answers. A good public servant should be devoted, knowledgeable, compassionate, broad-minded, capable, interested and aware.

Whether seeking election for a position on the library board of trustees or the sewer commission, a candidate should understand the issues, but be willing to listen to opinions from all viewpoints.

We are fortunate that so many have accepted the challenge and will seek elected office.

While they work hard to earn our vote, it is our duty to listen attentively. It is a fortunate circumstance indeed that we have the opportunity to select among many choices.

Housing authority vacancy

There is a four-year unexpired vacancy on the Cohasset Housing Authority because of the recent resignation of member Marguerite Libby.

Anyone interested in election to that office, must obtain nomination papers by 5 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 27.

Nomination papers for all elected town offices are due back for certification by the Town Clerk on March 3 at 5 p.m. No one has yet obtained nomination papers for the unexpired four-year term on the Housing Authority.

Humane Society needs contributions

Letters

To the Editor:

In 1984 Standish Humane Society set up a fund to help dogs and cats in the area pounds that needed special care and veterinary treatment before they could be adopted.

Standish has helped so many needy dogs and cats during the past year that the fund is now depleted and we need your help to continue. Animal control officers in the area are caring, humane persons, most of whom will hold animals for long periods of time in order to find them homes, but have very limited budgets and cannot afford extensive veterinary bills or other types of special care.

"Taffy," "Pal" and "P.C." were a few of the pound animals that Standish helped in 1985.

"Taffy," a smooth haired terrier-type dog was picked up as a stray by a local animal control officer. Taffy was not adopted after her 10 day holding period. Still at the pound, a month and a half later, she gave birth to three puppies. Taffy was a wonderful mother and the puppies were quickly adopted when they were weaned. Poor Taffy remained in the pound.

After Taffy had been in the pound for six months, a Standish volunteer took her home. When the Standish volunteer took her to the veterinarian, Taffy was found to have heartworm. Standish Humane Society paid to have Taffy spayed and her heartworm treated. A loving family has adopted Taffy.

Recently "Pal," a very pregnant shepherd-husky was picked up by another animal control officer. Standish Humane Society found a foster home for "Pal" and within a few days she gave birth to seven adorable puppies.

There were, however, some complications with the delivery and the mother needed veterinary care. Standish paid for the food for the mother and puppies, placed the puppies and spayed the mother. The foster family loved the other dog and are keeping her.

The Pound Rescue Fund is also used for any needy cats in the pounds. "P.C.," a shorthaired grey and white cat came to the pound very pregnant with a badly injured eye. Standish Humane Society had her eye treated. The veterinarian theorized that a cruel person had jabbed her in the eye with a stick. P.C. gave birth to seven adorable kittens that Standish had photographed and quickly placed. Standish had P.C. spayed and she has recently been adopted into a loving home.

If you would like to contribute to the Pound Rescue Fund and enable Standish Humane Society to help more needy pound dogs and cats, please send your tax deductible donation to Standish Humane Society in care of the treasurer, SueEllen Conlon, 98 Old Forge Road, Scituate, 02066.

Standish Humane Society is an all volunteer, tax exempt, non-profit organization, founded in 1969, operating without a shelter, and dedicated to the welfare of dogs and cats in this area.

For more information on Standish Humane Society you may call the main line at 545-3671.

Sincerely
Sue Ellen Conlon

The true story of the Cohasset sewer plan

To the Editor:

In the past, the Town of Cohasset could have had a wastewater treatment plant of one million gallon capacity for the cost of Two Million Dollars. This plant would have been capable of taking care of our town's sewerage disposal needs forever. NOW, the cost is too high, thanks to the actions of our present Board of Sewer Commissioners. What choices do we have?

Choice NUMBER ONE is to go to Hull with a 300,000 gallon flow. The present plant in Cohasset is capable of handling 100,000 gallons, which means we can only add 200,000 gallons to the current flow. Where will that leave a large portion of the streets that should or have been requested to be sewered? I'll tell you, NO WHERE; and, a continuance of the Sewer Ban that is in existence today. And, the cost per home owner will be five times what they are paying now, if they are so "fortunate" to be connected.

It is certainly obvious that the Town of Cohasset will require exceeding the maximum 300,000 gallon flow which will be contained within the contract with the Town of Hull. At that point, the contract calls for our town to pay for any new additions or improvements to the Hull Sewer Plant. The consumer costs in Cohasset will be at the mercy of the Hull board. So, we have saved nothing. In fact, we will pay more than if we had our own plant!

Our OTHER CHOICE is to enlarge the present sewer plant to 300,000 gallons or better at a cost of One Million Dollars. Current regulations allow for 90% funding by the state and federal governments, reducing the actual cost to the town and its taxpayers to $100,000 (for a town-owned, town-controlledplant). We then can have a mixture of gravity sewers in areas such as the Hillside and low pressure sewers.

The technology of sewage treatment systems has changed a lot. Three engineering firms have said that the enlargement of the Cohasset Sewer Plant is the least expensive way to go without an outfall. Our present engineer, Ward Engineering, has a plan on file to enlarge the present plant to 300,000 gallons or better. Why not implement this plan and use the balance of our monies to install the sewers in the streets, helping the homeowner and the businessman instead of flushing an ever increasing stream of our hard earned dollars down the sewers into Hull?

Vote NO on the proposal to send our sewage to Hull.

Vote YES to redesign the present plant into the largest feasible size to meet our town's needs and the EPA and DEQE requirements.....This will give us control over our own pocketbook and future decisions on the disposal costs of sewage.

Think about it, this is our last chance...Funding is rapidly being eliminated for projects such as ours. Do we want to spend more or make the OTHER CHOICE now?

Fitting together pieces of the puzzle in 'The Hollow'

Denise Ripley is the picture of innocence. Or is she? The answer to this question will be uncovered during the Dramatic Society's performance of the Agatha Christie murder-mystery, "The Hollow."

Gari Glennon looks suspiciously cool as she awaits her turn upon the Town Hall stage. Could she be the murderer?

Joan Paquette appears a bit apprehensive. What is she so concerned about — why is she so nervous? Her fate is decided at 8 p.m., Feb. 28 and March 1, with a matinee at 4 p.m. March 2.

Bonnie Haley appears to be going about her business as usual — but is she as innocent as she looks? Find out Friday night at Town Hall.

David Barrett contemplates "who dun it" during rehearsals for "The Hollow" by the Cohasset Dramatic Society.

Suspicion, mystery and intrigue surround the cast members of "The Hollow" as they prepare for Friday's prformance. Join the fun and solve the mystery at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Eighth grade gift

David S. Weiner, President of The Children's Medical Center, Boston, sent the following letter of 'thanks' to Cohasset's eighth grade class for its donation to the Medical Center in memory of their classmate Seanna O'Leary:

Dear Friends:

I send greeting from Children's Hospital and our special thanks for your generous gift that will touch the lives of thousands of children and their families who seek our help this year.

Through your thoughtfulness, you have helped provide, for children from all corners of the world, the finest patient care, pediatric research and teaching available today.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge your concern for those who need our support to gain a quality of life many of us already enjoy.

From the children of Children's Hospital again, I thank you.

Sincerely,
David S. Weiner
President

Unsung Heroes lauded

If you had visited Cohasset High School the week of February 10, you would have found the walls of the school covered with posters and signs all with the theme of "Thanks."

Mrs. Joan Foley, CHS Social Studies teacher, was the inspiration for a wonderful spirit-filled week of thanking our "unsung heroes of America." The heroes included blacks (in honor of black history month), women and immigrants. Posters around the school read, "Thanks, Charles Drew, for inventing blood plasma and saving many lives!" "Thanks, Bessie Smith, for giving us the Blues!" "Thanks, Emma Carr, for your work in chemistry!" And many others.

The week was highlighted with a wonderful assembly marking the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. Mrs. Foley spoke of the kindred spirits of Abe Lincoln and Martin Luther King, Jr., and their dream of equality and liberty for all.

We were then treated to a sampling of several types of typical American music — much of which has roots in black history.

Joy Turner sang two beautiful gospel songs. Celia Mullen played a few piano piecs — a ragtime song by Scott Joplin as well as a Gershwin number.

A barbershop quartet including Glenn Hochkeppel, John Kornet, Jonathan deLima and Bryan Marks, harmonized sweetly on two traditional numbers.

Then we got a taste of a true American music style — jazz! The Jazz Band under the direction of Steve Shirosky played two numbers, one in the swing style and the other in the rock style of jazz.

During the week, everyone at the high school was made aware of many American citizens, both foreign and native-born, who had a tremendous impact on our country.

March 1, the Cohasset Drama Workshop begins its journey on a trip that will hopefully end at the finals of the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival.

Cohasset will be one of 10 sites for regional competition involving 70 schools, a number that will be reduced by a half for semi-final competition on the following Saturday, March 8. Cohasset will also host a semi-final.

The top 15 shows will then be presented at John Hancock Hall in Boston on March 20-22.

Cohasset's entry in this year's festival is Michael Scanlan's "Candid." Featured in this production are Karin Anglin, Erin Browne, Jenna Emmons, Andrew Glasfeld, Glen Hochkeppel, and John Kuntz. Ron Emmons is their director. Cohasset has been a state finalist for four of the last five years.

Serving as student coordinator for the Cohasset festival is Jacqui Fahey. Stage manager is Philip Mahoney. Jamie Cameron, David Richards, and Dan Rossi make up the technical staff.

Cohasset will present "Candid" at 2:55 p.m. All who wish to attend any or all of the festival performances are reminded that they will only be permitted to enter or leave the theatre between shows.

Vo-tech applications

South Shore Vocational Technical High School is currently accepting applications from Cohasset students in grades eight and nine for the 1986-87 school year.

Director of Guidance Leonard Cody has stated the first applications filed for next year are currently being processed; however, applications will continue to be considered in all of the trade areas offered by South Shore.

Cody pointed out, "All of our programs are open to both males and females and we welcome applications in non-traditional career fields."

Trade areas offered include automotive, auto body, heating, ventilation and air conditioning, welding, precision metal fabrication, machine shop, drafting, carpentry, electronics, cosmetology, graphic arts, marine technology, painting and wall finishing, culinary arts, packaging machine mechanics, merchandising, marketing and management and electrical.

Students at South Shore take a full academic program in addition to the shop training and upon graduation receive an academic diploma in addition to a trade competency certificate. Numerous extracurricular activities and varsity and junior varsity sports programs are also offered at South Shore.

Applications and pamphlets regarding specific details of the various courses at South Shore Vocational Technical High School may be obtained by contacting the guidance office at 871-4153.

"I would be happy to speak with any student or parent of a potential regarding admission to South Shore. Mr. John Kosko or Ms. Pamela Titus, Guidance Counselors are also available to discuss our various programs," Cody said.

Rep. Murray 'sunset' effort successful

State Auditor John Finnegan recently presented a copy of the first "Catalogue of State Programs Affecting Cities and Towns" to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray at a special ceremony at the State House.

The catalogue lists some 1,700 state mandated laws and regulations put into effect from 1966 to 1984, graphically illustrating the enormous burden imposed on cities and towns by state goverment.

Rep. Murray, a cosponsor of the legislation, said, "The 'Sunset Law' is one of the most important new laws affecting cities and towns since Proposition 2 1/2. Together with Auditor Finnegan, the legislature can now begin to eliminate hundreds of unnecessary state mandates costing our local taxpayers millions of dollars each year."

The catalogue is the first step in a "sunset review" process ordered by the legislature in Chapter 126 of the Acts of 1984. The "Sunset Law" directs Finnegan's Division of Local Mandates (DLM) to analyze "those laws and administrative regulations that have a significant financial impact on cities and towns." DLM will then submit recommendations to the legislature on whether a mandate should be continued, modified, or eliminated.

The "Catalogue of State Programs Affecting Cities and Towns" will serve as the database for the Sunset Review Program.

Roadrace April 6

Plans are now underway for the 10th Annual Cohasset Roadrace By the Sea, to be held Sunday, April 6 at 1 p.m.

This year a Walk For Fitness will also be held at 9 a.m. for those not quite ready to run. T-shirts and hats will be given to all entrants.

Local merchants sponsor the T-shirts and the timing results will be donated by Cohasset Heights Landfill. Refreshments will be provided in the Town Hall parking lot following the race.

This year Bay Coast Medical will provide a Walk-Run Clinic on Saturday mornings at 8 a.m. at Rotary Hall from March 7 through March 29.

The Cohasset Rotary Club is again the sponsor of the race with proceeds going to their scholarship fund and other in-town beneficiaries. Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons will again be co-chairmen of the event.

The race is limited to the first 800 applications. In the past runners have come from over 20 states although the greatest percentage is from Cohasset and Scituate, keeping this a local event that everyone looks forward to as a sign of spring, and a time to see old friends after winter hibernation.

The entry fee is $6 and applications are due by March 31.

Applications are available at Good Sport, Cohasset Liquors, Colonial Pharmacy, Harbor Liquors or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Group art exhibit

The public is invited to a Group Art Exhibit from 1 to 6 p.m. March 2 at 190 South Main Street.

Vision & hearing clinic

The Social Service League Board of Health Nurse is pleased to announce a Pre-school vision and hearing screening clinic for children between the ages of 3 and 6.

The screening will be held on Wednesday, March 5, from 12 noon to 3 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, (next to Town Hall).

Four area optometrists and an audiologist will be available to check for problems in vision or hearing. It is well known that the earlier a vision or hearing problem is detected, the easier it is to correct it.

We welcome younsters age 3 - 6 years old.

For further information please call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Society Dinner March 18

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual spring dinner meeting Tuesday, March 18 at Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House.

This annual event will feature a dinner catered by Jessica's, and an unusual program provided by members of the Society. The theme of the program will be Cohasset's own history, and will utilize some of the extensive resources of the Society's membership, its archives and its collections.

The menu will feature sherried beef with wild rice, vegetables, salad and dessert. Cost of reservations will be $10. Reservations must be made prior to Tuesday, March 11, and may be made by contacting the Society at 383-0773, 383-6930, or by check sent to the Society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset. Payment must be received in advance. The dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m. There will be a social hour before dinner.

Planned as part of the evening's special program is a presentation of slides made from the old photographs of Cohasset located in the Society's archives and museums.

If you're interested in the unique and fascinating history of this small New England seacoast town, plan to spend an evening with the Historial Society as it embarks upon a voyage into the past. Seating for the dinner and program is limited, so make reservations early.

Cohasset police news. . .

Three arrests resulted from a fight which broke out about 5 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22 at the Cohasset Winter Gardens on Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

According to Police Officer Brian Noonan, three men were arrested after they allegedly skated at the indoor rink and refused to make payment. Owners Brian and James Hoban of Cohasset were allegedly assaulted with hockey sticks and beer bottles when the men refused to pay. Both men were treated for head injuries at the Beechwood Medical Center. Brian Hoban lost several front teeth in the skirmish, police said.

David W. Brady, 22, of 56 Great Pond Road, Weymouth, was arrested by Cohasset police for operating under the influence of alcohol and assault and battery. Patrick Hanifan, 19, of 26 Grant Street, was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, and John C. Watts, 20, of 51 Standish St., Braintree, was arrested for assault and battery.

Two other Weymouth men were summoned by Cohasset police for assault and battery.

Police made three arrests as a result of three separate motor vehicle accidents which occurred simultaneously early Thursday morning.

Kevin P. Verrochi, 23, of 268 Fair Oaks Lane, was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving to endanger, driving after revocation of license, driving an unregistered and uninsured vehicle, failing to keep right, and attaching plates.

According to police, Verrochi received head injuries when he was thrown through the windshield of his car in an accident near the Cohasset Winter Gardens. A passenger in the vehicle, Gerard Ryan, 25, of 19 Standish Ave., Scituate, was also injured in the one-car accident.

In a second accident, Thomas V. Dahill Jr., 33, of 15 Samoset Ave., Quincy, was arrested by Cohasset police after his vehicle overturned across from the Woodside Cemetery on North Main Street.

The driver, who was not at the scene when police arrived, had been picked up by a passing motorist. The driver later notified police that Dahill was at his home. He was uninjured in the accident in which the vehicle went off the road, struck several metal guard rails and overturned.

According to police, Dahill was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, failing to stop at the scene of an accident after causing property damage, and illegal possession of marijuana.

The third accident occurred at 1:15 a.m. when a pick-up truck driven by Stephen Clifford, 20, of 17 Gun Rock Ave., Hull, overturned on a curve in the road.

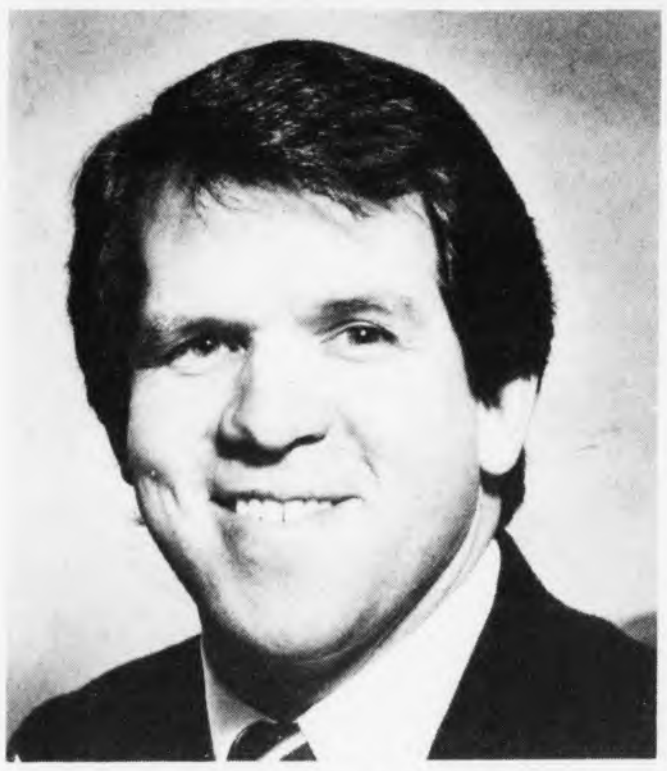
Cohasset Candidates Corner. . .



Ronald Goodwin

Goodwin announces

Citing his commitment to serve the Town of Cohasset and to protect its water supply, Ron Goodwin has announced his candidacy for a three-year term for the Board of Water Commissioners.

"I have two simple reasons for running; I firmly believe in strong protective measures to ensure clean water for our community, and in sound fiscal management practices for the Water Department," said Goodwin.

"The Water Commission oversees the day-to-day operations of the department and plans for the future water needs of the Town," Goodwin said. "I understand the operating and fiscal responsibilities of the department and am well qualified to handle them."

Goodwin noted he had studied a comprehensive report on the town's long term water needs issued in 1980. He said the town must address these needs. Specifically Goodwin said the town must plan for water for public safety needs as well as for increased consumption. The 1980 report warned of possible future shortfalls of water for fire protection.

"We have to start thinking about water for fire hydrants, not just for our kitchen faucets," Goodwin said.

Goodwin said his experience as a businessman would help him with his administrative and fiscal responsibilities on the Water Commission. He is owner and operator of Goodwin Graphics, an advertising and design business located in Cohasset. He is also Vice-President of the Cohasset Rotary Club and is a Charter member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Goodwin is a 1969 graduate of Cohasset High School. He lives at 196 Pond St. with his wife Mary, a registered nurse.

Gjesteby runs for selectman

Martha K. Gjesteby has announced her candidacy for one of two seats on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

A 26-year resident of Cohasset, she resides at 81 Old Pasture Road with her husband Arne. Their four children attended and graduated from Cohasset public schools.

Gjesteby's experience as an elected official includes Planning Board, and two terms on the Cohasset School Committee. She also served as an appointed member of the Cohasset Capital Budget Committee.

Since 1981 she has served the town as Metropolitan Area Planning Council representative. Presently, she is Assistant Treasurer and a member of the executive committee of the council, and is a member of the MAPC Land Use and Transportation subcommittee. Additionally, Martha is a member of the Joint Regional Transportation Committee - serving the Greater Boston region.

Gjesteby's volunteer activities include her service as a director of the Cohasset Community Center for three years, Chairman of Cohasset Communications Councils for Cohasset Public Schools, and board member of the Cohasset Community Garden Club.

Her educational background includes graduation from Simmons College with a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry.

As a candidate for Selectman, Gjesteby said, "To improve town government functions, open and honest communication is necessary from citizens, in order for Selectmen to make the best decisions. Cooperating and working with all town boards makes most effective government. Honest and equitable treatment of employees is also essential. Most important is the fact that the Board of Selectmen faces many issues during the next three years - the resolution of solid watse problems and waste water concerns; a long range financial plan, especially for capital planning and creative solutions for increasing state and federal contributions to our town to offset the recent cuts in revenue sharing received by our town."

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

All notaries need not apply for A.G. seat

The Dragon shook me awake early Thursday morning.

"Quick," he demanded, "where are your voting lists?"

I glared at him. "Torture and brain washing techniques like waking me up in the middle of the night will avail you nothing. I won't tell you where I hid my voting lists. My lips are sealed."

He shook his head impatiently. "You don't understand. A late-breaking announcement just came over the radio. Attorney General Bellotti has announced that he won't seek re-election. I think it's important that the best candidate declare immediately so the field won't get crowded.

"Where are your voting lists? You usually hid them behind the bathroom tank, but they're not there."

I looked at him suspiciously.

"And the best candidate is?"

He lowered his eyelids demurely. "Modesty forbids."

I stared at him in disbelief.

"You aren't even an attorney."

"Neither was Secretary of State Connolly until a few years ago, and he's already said he's interested in running for AG.

"I figure I can take my LSATs fast, and campaign on the statement that my degree is pending."

"If Connolly isn't running for Secretary of State," I began reasonably, "and if he didn't have a law degree when he took office, why don't you run for the position he's vacating? You could have a marvelous time with the great seal of the Commonwealth."

"You just want me to be Secretary of State because you think I'd routinely approve the renewal of your notary public license," he said accusingly.

"Well, it wouldn't be that easy. I wouldn't show any special favors to anyone just because we've shared bed and board for 32 years. You'd have to prove you were worthy to be a notary, just like everyone else.

"And anyway, I understand Paula Gold is interested in running for Secretary of State, and frankly I think she could take me. Now where are the voting lists?"

"If you're not going to help me stay a notary," I hedged, "why should I share my voting lists with you? It's a dog-eat-dog world in the political game."

He waved his hands in the air.

"You could do it in the interest of good government."

I sniffed. "Good government indeed. May I ask what your platform would be?"

"Certainly," he replied. "I intend to announce a get-tough, no-nonsense program that will give the consumer support that won't be flimsy and won't give way under stress."

"Are you talking about pantyhose?" I asked.

He sighed. "Just like a woman. As you know, I have a fairly wide following in the Angelos set. With the new merger I just may get the Purity Supreme vote, too. And what's good in one supermarket should be good in all supermarkets. Have you given any thought to how many people frequent supermarkets?"

"Not much," I admitted.

"See," he continued with rising enthusiasm, "I'll pledge to come down hard on people who cut in front of you in line. Or who park their baskets so they block off the items you want, and stand chatting with their friends. Or go to the speedy checkout with a basketfull of goods. Or pay by check during rush hour. Or try to use outdated coupons and hold you up while they argue with the clerk. I'll touch a responsive chord in voters across the Commonwealth. Where are the lists?"

I hesitated. "I'll share them with you," I offered. "You see, I heard a rumor last week that Bellotti wouldn't run, and I've been quietly circulating my nomination papers for several days now. Frankly, my dear, I think I have a pretty good head start."

The Dragon looked shocked. "Do you really think you could beat me in a statewide election?"

I smiled smugly. "Are you a notary public?"

Professional sports stars to aid Notre Dame fundraiser

Parents of past and present students at Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, have formed a Capital Campaign Committee to raise funds for the school's development program.

Chairing the committee is Mrs. Anne Ridge of Duxbury, wife of South Shore businessman Gerald Ridge, and mother of NDA graduates Jennifer '80 and Geranne '83.

"We have planned an exciting fund-raising year," Mrs. Ridge explained. "One of our immediate goals is to raise $250,000 to build a new track and soccer field which the students badly need."

As a kick-off event towards raising funds for the athletic facility, the committee is sponsoring "An Evening of Stars," a special evening that will bring a host of sports figures and media celebrities to the Academy Sunday evening, April 13.

The invitation list of stars, created by Boston Globe sports columnist Will McDonough (father of Erin, NDA '82), reads like a Who's Who of the Boston celebrity scene. Interestingly enough, many of the celebrities will be seen in a new light.

"Celtics Coach K.C. Jones will be there and he's quite a singer," McDonough said. "We're expecting him to perform with State Treasurer Bob Crane who leads a musical group called "Treasury Notes." We are also expecting former Celtics star John Havlichek to show off his melodious voice and to hear some friendly witticisms from Red Auerbach, Bobby Orr and Joe Kennedy, Jr.

Guests will be treated to a continuous array of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, canapes and open bar while they play games of cards and chance in the "Roaring Twenties Casino." Downstairs in the "Springtime in Paris Cafe" they will be able to feast on a gourmet buffet spread of roast beef, honeyed ham, curried chicken, seafood, fettucini alfredo and other specialty items served by Concord Caterers. For desserts there will be choices of international sweets such as chocolate mousse cake, butter almond torte and Irish coffee cheesecake.

Tickets for "An Evening of Stars" are available through the Development Office of Notre Dame Academy or from Capital Campaign Committee members: John Allegrini, Marshfield; Martin Burke, Scituate; Joseph Curran, Hanover; Joseph D'Arrigo, Scituate; Edward DeGraan, Hingham; Fred Dellorfano, Cohasset; Robert Devin, Hingham.

Also Harry Healey, Hingham; Edward McHugh, No. Scituate; James Mohan, Norwell; Charles Mooney, Hingham; Leo O'Hara, Dover; Joseph O'Neil, Hingham; T. Kenwood Mullare, Norwell; David Wallace, Braintree; David Nagle, Hanover and the Honorable Jerome Troy, No. Marshfield.

Long-term health care hurts the elderly

By Kate Putney
Mariner Staff

The rising and hidden costs of long-term elderly health care are a major worry for elders and their families, senior citizens said during a hearing last Friday at the Catherine McGowan Senior Center in Scituate.

This was the first of several hearings throughout the state to find out how seniors feel about the quality and affordability of health care for themselves and their loved ones.

The hearings are sponsored by the special legislative Commission on Elderly health care. Participating were Rep. Frank Hynes of Marshfield; commission chairman, Rep. Sherwood Guernsey of Williamstown; Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard Rowland and executive director Ginny Felice.

"For most of us, until we have a loved one who is elderly who has a need to have institutional care of a nursing home nature, we don't really recognize that either medicare or medigap insurance doesn't pay for that," said Hynes.

"I know I didn't until my mother had a stroke two years ago. It was only then that I was confronted with the reality that if she survived and needed custodial care, she would have to divest herself of all her assets in order to get medicaid," said Hynes.

A major concern of the 100 seniors at the hearing was the differences between home health care and institutional care.

"My husband is in a nursing home, and there's a lot of confusion between what is skilled nursing care, which medicare will pay for up to 100 days, and nonskilled," said Mary Carlson of Scituate.

When Mrs. Carlson's husband first entered the hospital, the couple was told that even though he could not walk by himself yet, he didn't need skilled care.

"So we had to decide whether we would pay for a nursing home or I would try to take him home and take care of him myself," she said.

Since that time Mrs. Carlson's husband did come home but returned to the hospital when he broke another bone. She said she is worried about the day she may be told again that her husband no longer needs skilled care.

"This is 24-hour-a-day duty," she said. "I haven't been out of the house because you have to just get out to do your grocery shopping and get back, and that's it.

"The thing is there's no insurance for nursing home care that is not 'skilled nursing' care. I think people are unaware of this.

"I don't think we have enough information, and while I do think there are situations where it can be taken care of at home, it still requires somebody there who's going to be in charge 24 hours a day," she concluded.

Hynes agreed. He said the elderly health care commission is very concerned about this issue.

"What we're trying to do is provide the necessary support mechanisms to be able to allow a family to care for an individual at home if it's appropriate," said Hynes.

He said 50 percent of frail elderly in the state are cared for by family members. "The need for support to do that, the need for respite to do that, is very important," he said.

Hope Cole from the Plymouth Council on Aging asked why nursing home rates seem to be designed to use all of a person's savings until he is destitute enough to go on medicaid.

"There's no rate setting commission on nursing homes,...and we have people who are going to be out in the street because their assets are going to be depleted, and it worries me...Because we're attacking a group of people that will be homeless, and they will be penniless, and I want to know who's going to take care of them," Cole said.

Rowland told the audience there is a rate setting commission for 75 percent of all of the nursing home beds in Massachusetts, which are medicaid-regulated.

"Now, you're right, for that other 25 percent of the beds, or private-paid beds, there is no regulation on cost. In a sense, they can charge whatever the market will bear, and buyer beware.

"So this is why people often find it hard to get into a nursing home if they go in as a medicaid patient, because the (nursing) homes would rather bring in a private paid patient, whom they can charge much more than a medicaid patient," Rowland said.

On the issue of long-term health care insurance, Rowland cautioned seniors to be leary of anything that sounded too good to be true, as many policies available can end up being worthless over the long run.

"The fine print is the kind of thing that you and your friends and peers and neighbors ought to be very aware of, and that is when very generous benefits are promulgated for level one care.

"That's almost like they'll cover you on a trip to the moon, because there aren't many level one beds in this state, and since level one beds are covered by medicare, you'd be covered by medicare anyway for the first 100 days," Rowland said. "Between 70 and 80 percent of elders in the country think they're covered for long-term care by medicaid, and they're just not."

Hynes said the commission has been looking at ways to provide consumer protection with regard to elders buying long-term care insurance, as well as speeding up the availability of such coverage.

"You have to have a market that's willing to purchase it. You also have to get healthy people involved in it. If you get a lot of sick people involved, the assets that are going into the insurance are immediately bankrupt," Hynes explained.

One woman said she has been struggling 12 years to pay for her husband's care.

"The point of medicaid," said Executive Director Ginny Felice, "is to take care of poor people. I think a lot of elders tell us that it's uncomfortable to pretend you're poor. What we want to do is create an alternative so you don't have to spend all your money," Felice said.

"Everybody wants the best treatment for his relatives, yet we don't want to pay that much for it," said Rowland.

In terms of what home health care workers and nursing home staff are paid, Rowland said pay scales are very low and constitute an area that needs attention.

He told the audience people are willing to pay more money to fast food workers than health care aides.

"It's a human tragedy, to tell people who've worked all their lives that they shouldn't save money," said George Laban, a spokesman from the Visiting Nurses Association of the South Shore.

"Each year that we take care of sicker and sicker patients, we lose more and more money," said Laban of the VNA in-home services. "Our visits are getting longer and longer, but we're paid the same (through medicaid reimbursement). "It's almost like saying we want to give care of the elderly to the highest bidder," Laban concluded.

The panel and audience discussed the possibility of spreading the cost of a health care program throughout the state. But, panelists said, it would be necessary to educate middle-aged and younger people that this is an issue which will concern them in the future.

Choral Art Society flea market planned

The Choral Art Society is sponsoring its second flea market Saturday, April 19, form 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., at St. Luke's Church parish hall, Rte. 3A and First Parish Rd., Scituate. The Society will supply eight-foot tables at $20, and the deadline for signing up is April 7. Dealers should get in touch with Gail Webster, tel. 545-5998. For the convenience of customers and dealers, coffee, tea, sandwiches, and doughnuts will be for sale. The donation at the door will be $.50.

The money earned by the flea market will help support the Choral Art Society's ambitious spring concert, May 17, when it will perform Haydn's oratorio, "The Creation." The large orchestra and the soloists needed for this work, with its many choruses, arias, and recitatives, require money as well as the hard work of the singers. Chorus members are contributing goods and labor to the project, expecially attic treasures for the Society's own white elephant table, and the food for sale.

The Choral Art Society also wishes to acknowledge with gratitude the support, in part, for their programs, by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate and Marshfield Arts Councils.

Social Service League sponsors grief program

The Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor a program on "Grief, Loss and Mourning" Thursday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m., in Walton Rodger's Hall, St. Stephen's Church.

In the past year, residents of several South Shore towns have had to deal with the unexpected deaths of young people by accident, disease, suicide and even murder.

To help students cope with their grief, many schools arranged counseling by school staff, religious leaders or grief specialists. But adults, as well as children, find it difficult to cope with a death.

Since grief is not easy to discuss, the Social Service League believes there is a need to help South Shore residents of all ages to better understand the grief process.

The speaker at the March 13th meeting will be Dr. Sherry Johnson, a therapist specializing in the issues of death, dying and bereavement. Trained as a psychiatric nurse, Dr. Johnson has a doctorate in thanatology - the study of death and dying.

Johnson has worked in the field for 15 years, and has done extensive research, particularly into guilt reactions of the dying and of those who survive them. She is on the staff of South Shore Pastoral Counseling Associates in Hingham.

Understanding grief, Johnson said, can be as complicated as unraveling a mystery. People often deny their feelings. "If grief is not taken care of in a healthy manner, people tend to become physically and emotionally sick," she said.

Johnson speaks to professional and lay groups on the issues of death and bereavement. She has served as a consultant to schools, funeral directors, health professionals, clergy, and self-help groups such as Compassionate Friends.

PETS IN THE "HOUSE FOR SALE"

A dog or a cat may be a home seller's best friend under ordinary conditions, but once your property is listed for sale, you must be extra careful that pet smells are eliminated. Most prospective buyers, even if they have pets of their own, and even if their pets smell just like yours do, will be put off by animal odors.

If you have a problem, you might hire a professional to clean your furniture and carpets or, if necessary, remove them from the property. If you have a cat box inside the house, check it frequently and keep the litter fresh.

When Realtors bring prospective buyers through your home, it's a good idea to let dogs or cats outside (if they are outdoor animals) or confine them to one area of the house. Some people have allergies and others have irrational fears of some pets. It may be hard for a buyer to appreciate your home through puffy, watery eyes or in between sneezes! If a buyer or his agent is afraid of being eaten by Fido, the chances of your home getting sold to that buyer are lessened, even if the house is exactly what he wants.

If you're considering a move, talk to the professionals at Home Center Realty. Call us at 749-8833 or stop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

MENOPAUSE AND CALCIUM

Menopause usually occurs around the age of fifty. However, it can occur later or as early as age thirty-five. When menstruation ceases, progesterone and estrogen levels drop. It is frequently associated with osteoporosis which is a disorder associated with a lessening in bone density. Thus, it often results in backache and other symptoms. There also frequently is a calcium deficiency which causes symptoms that closely mimic arthritis. Arthritis-like symptoms can also be produced by low estrogen levels that cause backache and loss of muscle tone. The calcium level usually drops greatly when ovarian hormones decrease. Calcium is especially helpful if problems occur on those days in the cycle when premenstrual tension used to occur.

Chiropractic allows for the transmission of natural healing instructions from the brain to all extremities and organs of the body. In this way the source of the problem receives attention and discomforts such as pain and even stress can be addressed. To learn more about how the science of chiropractic can fit into your lifestyle, we invite you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, for an appointment. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

Calcium may be the single most important ingredient in a diet for the back.

State calls for Wompatuck State Park hearing

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

The Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council and the state Department of Environmental Management will sponsor a public meeting March 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the park Visitor's Center to discuss the park's future growth.

Jack Lash, a state planner presented a tentative time frame to the council at their February meeting that calls for a finalized plan for the park by December.

"The public meeting is to allow citizens other than us to comment on issues facing the park, " Lash said. "We need to determine what types of facilities people want.

"I want to know how the residents of the area, the people who use the park the most, feel about what should be done," he said.

Lash began working on the Wompatuck project January 2. He previously was streams and trails coordinator for the Indiana Department of Natural Resources.

"We can only make improvements that are manageable, both financially and staff-wise," he said.

Lash presented to the council a list of issues to consider when formulating a park plan. Topics to be discussed include recently acquired land, park access, increasing recreation opportunities, and Mount Blue Spring's water supply.

Lash said a plan for the recently acquired, 604 acres federally owned land in the northwest section of the park must be developed. Negotiations are continuing for the remaining 142 acres which the federal government still holds.

Another issue facing the park is whether or not to provide more open fields for recreational space. "Right now the only open field is at the south end of the park," Lash said. "We have to decide if we want more open space, and if so, should we include things like playground equipment."

Water activities like canoeing and fishing also need to be addressed, Lash said. A need to provide a beach or pool for swimming will also be discussed.

The problem of transportation access to the park also is an issue to consider. "If it turns out we propose increased activities," Lash said, "then we must look into improving vehicle access to the park."

The Advisory Council will again meet March 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Visitor Center to plan for the March 27 public meeting. All Advisory Council meetings are open to the public.

Republican caucus scheduled for March 1 at SHS

State Republican Party Chairman Andrew S. Natsios has appointed Thomas J. Barry of Duxbury to be chairman of the Republican Norfolk and Plymouth District Caucus to elect 16 delegates to the April state convention.

The caucus will be held on Saturday, March 1, at 1 p.m. in the Scituate High School auditorium at Route 3A, Scituate.

Barry is a Duxbury selectman and the Republican state committeeman for the district. He has appointed Joan M. Francis, chairman of the Scituate Republican Town Committee, to be chief clerk at the caucus.

Any registered Republican from the district may participate in the caucus, to help elect delegates or become a delegate.

The district includes Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

The caucus will elect 20 percent of the delegates to the convention. Other delegates have been elected by the Republican town committees in the district.

Delegates to the convention will endorse Republican candidates for statewide office, including governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state treasurer and state auditor.

A statewide candidate must have the votes of at least 10 percent of the convention delegates in order to be listed on the Sept. 16 Republican primary ballot.

Former governor and Ambassador John Volpe will be the presiding chairman of the state convention and Vice President George Bush will be the keynote speaker. Former Ambassador Jean Kirkpatrick will speak at a fundraiser on the eve of the convention.

Delegate candidates must attend the caucus and sign a statement certifying that they are legally registered Republicans as of Dec. 31, 1985. They will be allowed to present a three minute statement of their qualifications and distribute literature to support their candidacy.

Golden praised for local aid vote

Sen. William Golden won the thanks of the Massachusetts Municipal Association for voting in favor of a local aid amendment that would have raised the floor of state aid to help municipalities offset anticipated federal Revenue Sharing losses.

The amendment, which was defeated in the Senate, would have given each community at least 75 percent of its Revenue Sharing loss. The Dukakis Administration plan, approved by the Senate, would guarantee a community only 10 percent.

"Senator Golden's vote was a vote for keeping property taxes under control. It was a vote for having the state share some of its surplus with municipalities," said the Municipal Association's Executive Director, James Segel.

"We appreciate and applaud Senator Golden's sensitivity to the needs of the communities within his district as well as the needs of cities and towns across the commonwealth," declared the municipal spokesman.

'The Hollow' is set for this weekend

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production is Agatha Christie's "whodunit" "The Hollow," at the Cohasset Town Hall, Friday Feb. 28 & Saturday March 1 at 8 p.m. and Sunday March 2 at 2 p.m.

The play, based on the novel by Agatha Christie, is directed by Julia W. Jordan. Betty Miessner is the Producer.

And so it is that the talents of the CDC cast do justice in their performances by keeping the action lively and the characterizations excellent. They include: Ginny Barcomb, Denise Ripley, Bonnie Haley, Harry Heineman, John Kuhn, David Barrett, Joan Paquette, Ed Lappen, Fraser & Joan Scorgie.

Sheldon Ripley is the set designer and Clark Young, lighting designer.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production, Agatha Christie's "The Hollow," offers excitement and genuine splendor.

Tickets for the Cohasset Town Hall performance are $4, available at the door and in advance at Flemings in Cohasset Center. Seniors are invited to attend the March 2 matinee at no charge.

Golden vows fight to block area code change

New England Telephone expects to make a final decision on the boundary by the end of next month, company representative Carolyn McKeon told coalition members in Hull Thursday.

McKeon repeatedly assured members that the new codes, which will be implemented within three years, would by themselves have no effect on long-distance rate structures.

She said the 617 area code will run out of exchange numbers — the first three digits of a phone number — by early 1989 because of the rise of new services like cellular radiotelephones and Centrex phone systems.

As originally proposed, the area-code boundary between the new code and 617, which would remain intact around the Boston area, would run to the south of Scituate, Hingham, Weymouth and Holbrook. The new code would include Marshfield, Norwell, Hanover and Rockland and all towns to the south.

The proposal was developed before results from customer surveys were tabulated, she said. Those surveys showed that while 75 percent of customers wish to stay within the 617 area code, 95 percent asked the telephone company not to break up towns with an area-code line. Thus the company stuck to boundaries that yield as few such splits as was possible.

"That came through loud and clear from the surveys — no one wants to dial 11 digits to reach a neighbor or the police or fire departments," McKeon said.

She presented two alternatives to the original area-code plan. In one, the 617 code would end at Braintree and Holbrook, with Weymouth and towns to the south and east within the new code; in the other, Quincy, Braintree and Randolph would be assigned to the new area code, while Milton and Canton would form the southernmost towns of the new 617 area.

The life of the two new area codes under the last alternative would be 23 years, "and that's the plan the company favors if it had a preference," McKeon said. Under other plans, another code could be needed in as little as 11 years.

"No one wants to go through this process again a decade from now, so we thought longevity was important."

Golden immediately blasted the alternatives, suggesting that such plans would serve to psychologically isolate the South Shore from Boston and hurt its position in business, transportation and development.

"I see no changes at all (between alternatives) in either the North Shore or the high-tech area to the west of Boston," he said. "You seem very concerned with how the North Shore feels, but since nobody from the South Shore spoke up until tonight, you feel free to slice us up.

"I really question whether the phone company's been looking at this problem in good faith. I'd remind everybody here that the area-code change can be implemented without review by any state or agency."

"Can you sit there and tell me there won't be a rate increase five or 10 years from now? This sets up a situation where the company could change its entire rate structure," Marshfield Selectman James Finucane told McKeon.

"I can't say anything about rate changes, but this is not a mechanism to raise rates," she responded. "It also won't have any effect on services or tolls. If it's not a toll call now, it won't be after the change despite the extra four digits that will have to be dialed."

"We don't want to shoot the messenger, but we do want to send a strong message to the phone company," Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald said. "What you're proposing tonight is worse — the line is moved north, but there's almost no changes anywhere else."

But McKeon said drawing the line elsewhere would mean the 'new' 617 area code would last only six to 13 years, while the new code might last 40 years or more. "We're looking for a rough balance of life expectancy between the codes," she said.

The suggestion to re-draw the 617 area to include Duxbury, Marshfield, Norwell, Hanover and Rockland — all coalition members — was made by Hingham planning board Chairman Alan Devine.

To accomplish the balance the phone company desires, the line could be moved closer to Boston and Rte. 128 in the west, he suggested.

Coalition members unanimously urged the company to consider Devine's proposal despite warnings the proposal could split several towns, particularly Duxbury, Pembroke and Hanover, between the two area codes.

Rewiring the towns is costly and hundreds of customers must get new phone numbers to make the area-code line conform with municipal borders, she said.

Rewiring Humarock — part of Scituate but served by the Marshfield 834 and 837 exchanges — would cost at least $1.5 million alone, she added.

Peek at the Past answer

The answer to last week's Peek at the Past was guessed correctly by Betty Maree (whose uncle Edward Jason was included in the photo); A.J. Antoine Jr., who named every soldier; Fred Koed who drew a perfect diagram of the location of the photograph; and Henry Kennedy, "the only living one left from Cohasset" who was in the photo. Henry named each soldier. The photo, taken from the Historical Society archives, was taken in front of the duck pond on Cohasset Common in 1917. They were the Cohasset Soldiers of World War I during the summer of 1917.

Drug Awareness Fair scheduled for the Hanover Mall

Sports and media figures are expected to make appearances at the second annual Drug and Alcohol Awareness Fair at Hanover Mall this spring.

The event, sponsored by the Hanover Police Department and Hanover Drug and Alcohol Task Force, will be held May 16 to 18 in conjunction with prom season on the South Shore.

In addition to sports figures from the Patriots, Bruins and Celtics, organizers say the fair will include a visit by state Commissioner of Public Safety Charles Barry and officers from the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Registry officers will be on hand to demonstrate the equipment police use to combat drunken driving, according to Hanover police Lt. Paul Hayes, one of the fair organizers.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Students Against Drunk Driving, the United Way and Salvation Army will be among organizations represented at the fair.

CHS art has new direction under Colleen Lucas

By Eric Francis

Cohasset High Schools Art Department has taken on new character since the arrival of instructor Colleen Lucas.

Lucas came to Cohasset in Septmeber with considerable experience teaching art at several private schools in Weston, Cambridge, and Nantuckett Island. Currently she is teaching a seventh and eighth grade art class, two photography classes, an introductory art course, and Art II course, and an advanced "Art Major" course for students with an above average interest.

In addition to scheduling the curriculum for these regular credit courses, Lucas opened the schools two large art rooms during her free periods so that the students who do not take an art course but who enjoy the subject, can make use of the facilities.

Lucas says that her general philosophy for all the courses "is to allow students self expression within a format where they learn technique, art history, and aesthetics. If everyone will learn to notice details and learn to express themselves in what they do then I think its been a success. It's a rather all encompassing philosophy of which the most important part to me is the students and what they have to offer"

In order to support the artists at Cohasset High, an Art Club has been formed which includes students who are unable to takeanart course because of scheduling conflicts. The club plans to take field trips, view films, and hold special events that will make up a high school equivalent of an artist support group.

The students in the basic courses have been busy learning drawing, printmaking, ceramics, art history, and animated film making. The upper grade students are currently doing childrens book illustrations, block printing, and graphics. These students are also pursuing an art history research project on a period that interests them personally such as Primitivism, Egyptian art, Baroque, etc.

The Art Major course is placing emphasis on the creation of a portfolio and a set of slides which will be useful to those students who plan to attend an art school. But this class is also a challange for the student who wants to enjoy advanced art concepts but who does not plan to pursue them past high school.

"It's kind of a wild class", says Lucas.

Both of the photography courses are designed to give a basic introduction to the field and impart as much technical information as possible. Students begin by learning about the operation of the camera and how to use it effectively when taking pictures. Next they study the processes of developing the film and printing the images. This is done in the schools darkroom which was built by the previous art teacher (who is coincidentaly named Lucas as well). Three CHS students are using the darkroom to conduct their own independent studies in photography utilizing advanced techniques and tricks such as solarization of prints.

The walk-in art classes have proved to be successful with both regular art students and interested newcomers using their free time to do a wide variety of projects from block printing kimonos to decorating reports for other classes. Lucas says that kids come in during the nonstructured periods and tell her that they have "really always wanted to do such and such" so Lucas provides them with the required materials and sets them on the track to produce the item. The walk-in classes occur at least one period every day and sometimes twice daily.

Lucas feels that because there are always students in the airy hanger-like art rooms, even after school, indicates that the department is providing an important service to them.

The Arts Enrichment Committee, which is headed by Mary Lou Lawrence, was described by Lucas as being "enormously supportive" in its assistance with the "visiting artists program".

This program arranges for artists and related people to come and speak to students on what they do. With the help of the Committee and Sine Pounder, an area resident, a number of interesting people addressed the students including writer and illustrator, a painter, and a designer of greeting cards.

Lucas explains that because of this type of effort by community members the program can do extra things like the visiting artist program that show the students that art is a real life experience. More special activities are planned including the publication of an art magazine allowing the classes to see how layout work is done, a joint evening presentation with the Music department, and other undertakings. Curriculum for grades kindergarden through twelve is currently under development in order to insure a stable learning process throughout a student's career in Cohasset.

Lucas says she is pleased with first public school teaching. She enjoys Cohasset High because "its a good school, and teachers here are always trying to do more for the students".

While living in Scituate he served on the Scituate Advisory Board from 1965 to 1968, part of the time as chairman; and from 1969 to 1984 as chairman of the Scituate Board of Assessors.

Lehr operates the Lehr & Barnes Insurance Agency in Cohasset and has been associated with the bank since 1968, serving as a Trustee and member of the board of investment. He is a graduate of Cohasset schools, a professional engineer in Massachusetts and formerly was a safety engineer with the Commercial Union insurance group. He has taught safety courses in area universities and participates in a real estate appraisal course at Stonehill College.

For over 25 years, Mr. Lehr was Scoutmaster of Troop 28 in Cohasset and has remained active in the Explorer program for senior youth. He is an Eagle Scout and has received the District Award of Merit and Silver Beaver Award, highest non-staff awards in Scouting. During World War II he served five years as chief petty officer in the Navy and now is Civil Defense director in Cohasset.

Dean retired after more than 30 years association with the bank. He became a bank corporator in 1953, was elected a Trustee in 1956, to the board of investment in 1964, and a vice president in 1965.

Theatre Review

'First N.Y. tryout' a big hit at Nickerson Theater

By Judith Montminy
Mariner Correspondent

J. Arnold Nickerson picked a hit when he decided to run "So Long On Lonely Street" at the Nickerson Theatre.

The new play, by Atlanta playwright Sandra Deer, is scheduled for an April 3 opening in New York.

Not only is it the first new play to be presented at the Nickerson Theatre, but it is also the first New York tryout to come to the South Shore. South Shore audiences are being offered the opportunity to see a stellar production.

"So Long On Lonely Street" was developed through staged readings at the Alliance Theatre, a major regional theatre in Atlanta. The theatre company takes special pride in the production since Sandra Deer is the theatre's literary manager.

Three of the actors in the Nickerson production (Pat Nesbit, Stephen Root and Lizan Mitchell) were members of the original production. Producers Cheryl Crawford, Paul B. Berkowsky and Robert Franz, had added Jane Murray, Ray Dooley and Fritz Sperberg to the cast.

All six actors work beautifully together. Each one represents an essential thread in an intricately woven tapestry that is delicate, coarse, romantic, harsh, mysterious and comical all at once.

Despite the decidedly Southern theme, "So Long On Lonely Street" transcends regional appeal. The humanity it represents, complete with petty family jealousies, closets filled with skeletons, and unexpected humor, touch the chord of recognition in any family member North or South.

The play takes place in late August at Honeysuckle Hill, a few miles outside a small southern town. The niece and nephews of Pearl Vaughnum have just learned that Aunt Pearl has been dead for three days and her lifelong companion, Annabel Lee, is keeping Pearl in a casket in the living room.

The question of what will happen to Honeysuckle Hill dominates the play. Raymond Brown (Ray Dooley) is a soap opera star whose parts are getting smaller. He left Honeysuckle Hill 20 years ago but comes back for family funerals. He is not interested in owning the estate.

His twin sister Ruth (Pat Nesbit), considered wild and promiscuous in her youth, now teaches poetry at the local junior college. She is perfectly happy to let Annabel Lee own the house and has no interest in the place either.

The younger cousin, King Vaughnum III (Stephen Root), however, is convinced the three grandchildren of "Big Jack" Vaughnum, will inherit the estate and King wants to develop it into a large shopping mall, "Beulah Land," where only Christian shopkeepers will be welcome.

Here is a scene from "So Long on Lonely Street" starring, L-R, Pat Nesbit as Ruth Brown, Fritz Sperberg as Bobby Stack and Stephen Rood as King Vaughnum III.

The complication in King's scheme is that the estate is left in a living will to all of "Big Jack's" natural children. Everyone knows that Annabel Lee is his illegitimate child and, therefore, inherits Honeysuckle Hill.

The result is a comical jockeying for position. Each one of the characters is as stubborn as the next, but digs his heels into the ground in a different way. Director Kent Stephens has finely tuned his cast. The shift of moods is almost imperceptible at first as each character moves in and out of control of the scene.

Stephen Root gives an exhausting performance as a man whose beliefs and dreams are being shaken at the core. As his pregnant wife Clairice, Jane Murray typifies the Tupperware-party queen who closes her eyes to all unpleasantries, "stands by her man" in public, but undercuts him in private.

Lizan Mitchell is pivotal as Annabel Lee. With unerring frailty, she embodies the 70-year-old's will to survive. Even through her dotty moments, Annabel Lee's clear vision can be seen.

Both Ray Dooley and Pat Nesbit capture the essence of the rebellious twins who have chosen different ways of rejecting their past. They are haunted by their mother's suicide and have not yet come to terms with their heritage. There are times however when Nesbit runs the risk of reminding us of another actress,Elizabeth Ashley. Although the physical and vocal resemblance can't be helped, certain reminiscent gestures can and should be avoided, especially since Nesbit's strength as Ruth can stand on its own.

As Bobby Stack, the gentleman lawyer in love with Ruth, Fritz Sperberg rounds out the cast perfectly.

Mark Morton's set gives us a wonderfully full southern home that has fallen into disrepair. Jane Greenwood's costumes complete the visual picture accurately.

Although many of the seats at the Nickerson Theatre have already been reserved by season subscribers, it's worth a call to the theatre to see if you can get tickets to "So Long On Lonely Street." After March 22, the show moves to New York.

Mariner editor also favors 'So Long on Lonely Street'

By Judy Gilman
Mariner Staff

(The following review was written to Mariner readers by Hingham Mariner Editor Judy Gilman, who is at the Greenery Rehabilitation Home in Brighton recovering from an automobile accident.)

If there is just one thing this winter you should make a definite point of not missing, make it the show "So Long on Lonely Street," now playing nightly at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell.

They opened here on Valentine's Day and will continue there until they travel to New York to open on Broadway.

One of its definite strong points is that, first and foremost, it is a funny play.

It is particularly easy for New Englanders to laugh at a play where all the characters are different from them, in fact they are all Southerners who speak with drawls. Something strange to us is easy to laugh at. To New Englanders, Southerners are funny, and the play really makes that point clear.

The set is very organized and plush-looking, and gives the audience the feeling they are really in a Southern mansion. There is a clear unobstructed view from all seats in the house.

And the actors make good use of the stage, all moving to different parts of it rather than bunching together in just one spot.

The cast consists of a very professional group of people. They're all attractive at first glance, and fit their roles to a T.

Annabel Lee, the main character, is played by Lizan Mitchell.

It's her house in which the play takes place. And it's the death of her best friend, who lives with her that provides the plot of the play.

Because she insists on keeping her dead friend's body in the house (so the friend won't have to undergo the undertaker's attentions) she is thought by most everyone to be going daffy. But she has a very nice singing voice, which she shows off to her advantage.

And Stephen Root plays King Vaughnum very nicely and efficiently. His character plays the "good old Southern boy" to perfection. There's always a smile, a handshake and a joke told in a loud voice for everyone. The audience came to be familiar with him very quickly and started roaring before he had finished his lines. They just knew he was going to be funny.

And Ray Dooley plays the hero, Raymond Brown, now a TV soap star who returns home to attend Annabel Lee's friend's funeral. With his attentiveness (very attractive) you can see how he can easily play a TV soap heart-breaker.

Raymond Brown's sister Ruth is another of the play's main characters. Pat Nesbit does a very good job of holding down this role.

Jane Murray plays Clairice, King Vaughnum's wife. She's expecting a child soon, and that provides all sorts of excitement, including false labor.

Guests & critics came far & wide for play

When the new play at the Nickerson Theatre, "So Long On Lonely Street," opened Feb. 18, the event received special attention from veterans in the theatre world.

Elliot Norton, retired theatre reviewer of the Boston Herald and considered by many to be the dean of Boston theatre, made a rare appearance at the Norwell theatre.

Norton came to Norwell to show support for his long-time friend, producer Cheryl Crawford.

The 84-year-old producer was a founder of the famous Actors Studio and is known for her productions of "Brecht on Brecht," "Brigadoon," "Sweet Bird of Youth," and "Mother Courage and Her Children." The other producers of "So Long On Lonely Street" are Paul B. Berkowsky and Robert Franz.

Guests from Atlanta also came to Norwell for the New York tryout. "So Long On Lonely Street' began as a stage reading at the Alliance Theatre in Atlanta. It had been written by the theatre's literary manager, Sandra Deer, and played to packed houses at the theatre's 200-seat studio theatre in May.

Last September, the play was presented at the 800-seat mainstage where it played to standing room only audiences.

The Nickerson production uses the sets built in the Alliance Theatre's scene shop. The original director, Kent Stephens, has directed the Nickerson production.

Some mid-winter meals to keep the waistline trim

Before we shed our bulky winter coat, some of us may want to shed with it a few bulges and pounds that last year's bathing suit will be hard put to accommodate. Jan Raymond writes that she has created some mid-winter meals to keep her family's waistlines trim by serving lots of vegetables, as most, even potatoes, are low in calories.

It's the large amounts of margarine, butter, sour cream or mayonnaise we slather them with that add up the calories. If you love butter on your baked potatoes and cream cheese in your appetizer dips, remember that every tablespoon of butter or cream you sacrifice will save as many as a hundred calories. Here is Jan's quick, tasty winter salad called simply

VEGETABLE AND TUNA SALAD

2 C. asparagus or peas, cooked crisp-tender, cooled
1/2 C. celery, chopped
1/4 C. onions, chopped
1 small can tuna or salmon
Spinach or lettuce leaves

Combine the first four ingredients and serve on spinach or lettuce and top with Jan's

BUTTERMILK SALAD DRESSING

1 tsp. unflavored gelatin
1/4 C. chicken broth
1 C. buttermilk
1/3 C. chili sauce
2 T pickled green and red peppers, drained
2 T. onions, minced

In saucepan, sprinkle gelatin over chicken broth. Let stand 1 min. Stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves. Mix in remaining ingredients. Chill and store covered in refrigerator. To thin, beat in more buttermilk. Makes 2 cups.

Here are a few ways of eating well without using unnecessary calories: make a white sauce or cream soup by substituting skim milk or nonfat milk powder. Use sharp cheeses such as parmesan or cheddar rather than mild ones such as swiss or mozzarella, so you'll need less to produce the needed flavor. Brown foods in just enough oil, margarine or butter to prevent food from sticking to the pan. To add flavor to your dish, substitute wine, lemon juice, vinegar or soy sauce instead of gravy or rich cream sauces. Herbs canreally perk up a dish, as you will find in this low-cal

ITALIAN SALAD DRESSING

1/2 C. salad oil
2 T. vinegar
2 T lemon juice
1/2 Tsp. ea. salt and sugar
1/4 tsp. each. oregano leaves and dry mustard
2 cloves garlic, crushed
Dash or thyme

Shake all ingredientsin acovered jar and refrigerate until just before tossing salad.

My taste buds must be slightly out of whack. Either that, or very unsophisticated. Certainly, quite the contrary to those of New York City food lovers who wait two or four weeks to dine at trendy restaurants such as the Arcadia.

I can't imagine ordering seconds of what seem to me to be rather bizarre dishes. In the review I read of their outstanding menu offerings were such dishes as corn cakes with caviar, chimney-smoked lobster, quail with beet sauce, blackened redfish and duck breast rolled around a pureed olive. Apparently goat cheese is still "in," as is squid ink on noodles. I wonder how many of you might prefer May Lake's

MACARONI—CHEESE MOUSSE

1 C. uncooked macaroni
1/2 C. scalded milk
1 pimento, chopped fine
1 1/2 tsp. chopped onion
1 C. soft bread crumbs
1/4 C. butter
1 T parsley
1 tsp. salt
3 eggs, beaten
3/4 C. grated cheese

While macaroni is cooking, scald milk and pour over crumbs. Then add all remaining ingredients and drained, cooked macaroni. Mix well. Pour into baking dish. Bake approximately 1 1/4 hours at 325 degrees, or until firm.

Amusing books are suggested by Mariner readers

"In certain books , some in the first few paragraphs , you know that you have met a brother. ' ' Robert Henri

By Peggy Beals

FROM THE BOOKSHELF

Let us laugh!

Again, some funny books to divert you from the rigors of winter and those 31 days of March looming ahead. Thanks to generous readers who have shared their favorites, here are many titles. Some are new to me, and where we will find them is a mystery. Good luck! As one reader says, "It is more fun to search for a treasure than to have it handed to you."

D. in Marshfield suggests several of her favorites. The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine by Frank Stockton, and anything by Robert Benchley, James Thurber, S.J. Perelman. She recommends John Gould, whose weekly columns in the 'Christian Science Monitor' have been a delight for years. See This Trifling Distinction and The Fastest Hound Dog in the State of Maine. His Prenatal Care For Fathers has that classic illustration where the prospective father has confided his news to his best friend. The friend, gazing somberly, asks, "Whom do you suspect?"

C. of Chattanooga (the Mariner gets around) begs "Don't miss Shady Grove ' , by Janice Holt Giles. She knew someone who read it and immediately ordered 10 copies for his gift list.

P. of Hanover and her husband sent a delicious list, which will send us scurrying to the library and the second-hand bookstore. Don't forget interlibrary loans, whereby your library arranges to borrow the book you want from another library. It takes time, but it's worth it. When the libraries are all connected to computers, wow!

Here's P.'s list: Pickwick Papers by Dickens, Laugh with Leacock , by S. Leacock, In God We Trust by Jean Shepherd (and I am advised by those who know that we must not judge his books by the series he did on Channel 2, which I didn't find very funny). I 'd Rather Be President by Ellis and Weir, The Ascent of Rum Doodle, by Bowman, The Best Christmas Pageant Ever by Robinson, Streetful of People by Estes, One on a Time by A.A. Milne, Desert Island Decameron by H. Allen Smith, The Weans by Robert Nathan, as well as P.G. Wodehouse, Ludwig Bemelmans and some already mentioned.

Lake Woebegone

"Well, look who's coming through that door. I think we met somewhere before. Hello, love..." Thus begins the new nationwide cult radio program "Prairie Home Companion," Saturdays, at 6 p.m. on WGBH-FM. Garrison Keillor's monologues are the high point of the show and are collected in his new book Lake Woebegone Days. If you read his previous book mostly pieces from the New Yorker, sophisticated, this is different.

I class it as humor, though he can switch deftly from humor to sad things and back again in a most feeling way. Keillor is an observer of details. There's no way of knowing where the ramblings will go, but the journey is delightful. In one, he mentions among many other things, that someone threw up at school. The nun in charge simply walked into a classroom and asked, "Who in here wants to ba a nurse? All right, Sally, you're about to begin training..."

This one I am going to have to own, a major decision for a lifelong library patron.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

The Afternoon run to Long Island

Joe Verdi is a Massachusetts native who has been living in Scituate almost nine years. For twenty years he drove a truck for United Parcel Service. The last two years he has driven a bus for the MBTA.

In the morning he drives the usual commuter shuttles between Quincy Center and places like the South Shore Plaza in Braintree. But his final two runs in the afternoon have a different flavor.

At 4 p.m. he arrives at Boston City Hospital on Massachusetts Avenue and fills the 51 seats on his bus with homeless people. He drives to Neponset on Quincy Shore Drive to East Squantum Street, finally arriving at Long Island, in the middle of Boston Harbor.

The hospital there was originally intended for terminally ill indigents, and is still used for that. Now it also has overnight accomodations for the people Joe brings.

Recently having increased its capacity from 200 beds to 344, it also provides showers, meals, clothing and some toiletries. A few separate rooms are available for families, but most spend the night in one large room, with beds separated by movable partitions.

Joe has been making the Long Island run for nearly six months. Joe could quit in the spring, but hopes to continue.

What difference does Joe find between the homeless and the average suburbanite he takes to work in the morning?

"A lot of homeless work, too," he says. "They've been working all day, but if they're working at minimum wage they can't afford decent housing, any housing, even a room. With so much condo conversion there just are not places for people to live.

"A large segment of those I see look exactly like everybody else. You would never guess they were homeless. I've seen some in business suits with briefcases. They were getting themselves together."

Long Island is a good facility, he believes. The coordinators are good, caring people. With cutbacks in federal funds for the homeless, Joe admires the Governor's and the Mayor's willingness to put money in this direction. Yet what he sees is hardly so attractive that people would use it if they had any options.

"There is a strong incentive to leave. I hear the men saying, 'Man, in one more week and I'll have enough of my check saved to be able to get into something.' People shouldn't think this a cushy situation. Nobody's going to stay in this program that doesn't have to. They provide the basic needs, but it's certainly not an attractive situation that anybody would want to be in."

Joe tells of a young family with two small children. They had arrived in Boston and tried to get a motel room.It was late,and they weren't allowed to check in because the man had no driver's license. They had taken a train from Chicago, where rents were lower but no jobs were available. They stayed at Long Island just one night, but it kept them from spending their first night in Boston on the street.

Then there was the iron worker who had been living in a tent at his construction site. He saved his money and in a week he was on his own.

Joe says, "They remind you of immigrants from another country with nothing but their children and two suitcases."

Of course not all the homeless are able to work. Many are elderly and disabled. These Joe sees every day. On cold days and during inclement weather guests are allowed to stay all day, and many do.

Another segment of his riders are mentally impaired. But sometimes Long Island can provide a special service for them, too. Joe knows of a man and woman, each in their early thirties, who were emotionally disturbed and had been living on the streets since their early teens. They met on Joe's bus and eventually got married. They pooled their resources and found a room. For the first time in their lives they were not alone.

A final group among the homeless are very transient. Joe says, "When it turned cold, a lot of people went south. A couple of men I know went to Brighton, where all the meatpacking companies are and hooked up with truckers going south, offering to unload and help out."

Joe has very little problem keeping order on the bus. "The people I see have to be orderly and sober or they won't take them. All bags are searched and the men are searched for weapons and drugs. Sometimes they get a little rowdy or a little loud. But sometimes they sing and it's kind of fun.

"The people I take to Long Island are more flamboyant people than on the regular route. But overall I've had more trouble with commuters than the homeless."

Why does Joe want to continue his Long Island route? "I had a lot of misconceptions about who the homeless were. A lot of people who aren't making big wages could easily fall into this category today, if they weren't connected to their family or something.

"You think you have all this security between you and the homeless, but . . . "

Two area beauty pageants planned in March & April

The Miss South Shore Pageant, a Miss America Preliminary Pageant, will be held April 6, along with the Miss Brockton Scholarship Pageant, at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

All girls between 17 (High School Senior) and 26 years old are eligible. Competition categories include evening gown, swim suit, talent and judges' interviews.

The Miss Brockton Scholarship Pageant has been held in Brockton for the past eight years. With Sue Riordan as Director, Lisa and Linda Matta producers, Linda Twiss and Jeanne Svirsky Choreographers, and a committee that includes Ruth Simpson, Trish Fritts, Sharon Graves, Dianne Foley, Theresa Murphy and Donna Galligan, the Miss Brockton Foundation this year has taken on the franchise of The Miss South Shore Pageant.

Both pageants will be held on the same day with two separate panels of judges. Scholarships, gifts and awards will go to Miss Brockton and her court as well as Miss South Shore and her court.

The winners of both Miss Brockton and Miss South Shore titles will compete in New Bedford in June for the title of Miss Massachusetts. The winner at that time will go on to Atlantic City for the Miss America Pageant.

Applications are now available at LaFemmina School of Modeling in Abington. Orientation and deadline is March 9.

Two area-wide model contests:

New England Preliminary

The 1986 New England Model Pageant Prelimiinary will be held in the Brockton area at the Ridder Country Club, Whitman Sunday, March 9.

Registration and rehearsal will begin at 10 a.m. Showtime will begin at noon.

Prizes include expense paid trips to New York City to visit "The Agencies" for Teen & Adult winners as well as crowns, banners, trophies and portfolios.

Youth and child division winners will also receive U.S. Savings Bonds.

Scholarships are awarded at New England Model and are given to contestants chosen by the judges, not necessarily the winners.

Last year, $12,000 in scholarships were awarded to the New York Academy of Theatrical Arts. Also scholarships were given to a New England Dance Company, and a New England Modeling Program. Some of our past winners have gone on to careers in modeling; for example, Pam Gidley can be seen on the cover of Teen Magazine and Kristian Alfonso can be seen on NBC TV's, "Days of Our Lives" as Hope Williams Brady.

Age categories are child three to seven years old; youth eight to 12 years old; teen 13 to 17 years old; adult 18 years and over and male, female, married or single.

No experience is necessary to be judged on model potential. Interested contestants should call Jeanette at 617-873-3092 or 401-723-2900 for information and for application.

MUSINGS — by JOHN H. CUTLER

☐ Californians may succeed in raising the first completely American domesticated offspring of sturgeon, whose eggs are known as caviar. The delicacy should sell for about $800 a pound in this country.

☐ You're an old-timer if you can remember when John L. Lewis used to eyebrowbeat the public.

☐ Stoddart's wisdoms:

Beat your child once a day. If you don't know why, he does.

If you would avoid suspicion, do not stoop to lace your shoes in a melon patch.

☐ He must have a heavy hangoverhead.

☐ A small town weekly newspaper reaches readers that big city dailies do not.

☐ Enter a battle of wits with him? I never fight an unarmed person.

☐ Second rate persons hire third rate people.

☐ A pragmatist is a person who says, "If it works, it's good." He doesn't care if a cat is black or white as long as it catches mice.

☐ If the first person who answers the phone can't answer your question, it's bureaucracy.

☐ Abraham Lincoln was busy in his study when he heard his two sons quarreling in the next room. The boys made so much noise, that Lincoln finally went to their room to find out why they were squabbling. "Bob's got my ball," wailed Tad, "and he won't give it to me." The President turned to his other son. "Bob,' he said, "give that ball to Tad and keep him quiet." "I will not," said Bob. "It's my ball. What's more, I want it to keep me quiet."

☐ An unbreakable toy may be good for breaking other toys.

☐ The surgeon's quandary: Oops! I cut it off again and it's still too short.

☐ Gypsy Rose Lee had a rapier wit. When Mae West tabbed her "Lady Peel," she countered that Mae was "the weakest link in the Vassar daisy chain," and when recently wedded Carole Landis disparaged so-called "leg art," she sniffily replied that nobody cared a hoot whether Carole did Salome in long underwear and a fire helmet.

☐ "Those who can, do. Those who cannot, teach."—George Bernard Shaw. "And those who cannot teach, form educational societies."—C.K. Chesterton. "Those who can't teach, administrate. Those who can't administrate, run for office."—H.L. Mencken.

Eddie and the Cruisers — 1986

The 1986 Eddie and the Cruisers—the CHS basketball team strut their stuff around their 'cruise machine'—a 1957 Chevy (actually 1972 Plymouth). The Cruisers are: Bobby Shultz, Floyd Hardwick, Todd Trautwein, James Creed, David Shultz, Matt Maloney, Glenn Bernstein, Tom Larson, Bryan Edwards and David Shumaker.

Cohasset electrified by a championship team

The team

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

And now....Eddie & The Cruisers, Part V.

The folklore around Eddie and the Cruisers goes back to 1982 when Coach Eddie Minelli accepted a position to be the Cohasset High School boys basketball coach and improve a 1-17 ballclub.

Eddie & The Cruisers, Part II in 1983 was dubbed, "Save the Coach" as a 9-11 team rallied in the summer months to literally rescue the job status of Minelli who was criticized by top school administrators for not teaching basketball fundamentals.

In 1984, Division III was shocked to see Cohasset rise to the cream of the crop with a 21-3 record and only fail in overtime to reach the Division III finals.

Last year, Eddie and the Cruisers reached the pinnacle of success with a state championship. Eddie and the Cruisers were now mainstays in The Boston Globe and Boston Herald.

This year marked the first time Cohasset was invited to a national high school tournament after Christmas, only to lose twice while compiling a 20-0 Massachusetts schoolboy record. The five year tenure of Minelli now stands at 76-33.

There are comparisons to the "Rocky" movie series. From Rocky I to Rocky IV, Rocky Balboa has a new, more outstanding challenge. Likewise, Eddie and the Cruisers now look to the beginning of a star trek which began Wednesday night.

"We can play at 90 miles per hour, 40 or 20, but we prefer 90."

Coach Eddie Minelli

Minelli acknowledges the competition is better and every challenger has "the eye of the tiger. They are out to beat a champion."

If Cohasset did win against Wareham Wednesday night, they will likely face Medfield in a rematch of the Eastern Mass. Division III finals Friday night at Brockton High.

The town

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Like a charismatic leader, the 1986 version of Eddie and the Cruisers has brought this town together while other issues have dared to rip it apart.

When the Cohasset High School squad takes its place on the court, differences are put aside. Fans gather together in homage and admiration of a team that has excited and ignited an entire town.

Parents, students, senior citizens, future high school players, teachers, politicians and housewives engage in endless, animated conversations about this team. Coach Eddie Minelli and his troupe of talented athletes revive faded memories of glory and stir new ones as they covet one victory after another.

This is a team that has earned the respect, the pride and the unabashed enthusiasm of an entire town.

"I guess when they come to see the boys play they can forget about the trouble with the sewers and all the other things that are on their minds the rest of the day," Coach Minelli said. "Because when they come to our games, winning is the only thing they

Dog shot in Beechwood area

Police report that a dog was shot last week with a pellet rifle while wandering near his Bates Lane home in Beechwood.

The dog, owned by Bernard Hennessy of 12 Bates Lane, is in good condition after receiving treatment for the injury. Police do not know who shot the dog as he wandered from his home last Thursday, Feb. 27.

According to Animal Control Officer Richard Yokum, the dog was shot in the hind section above the left leg with two pellets that appeared to be shot from a rifle. A pellet rifle is slightly larger than a BB gun.

The dog had been allowed out of the house several times during the day last Thursday, Officer Yokum said. The owners said the dog never strays far from the residence in that neighborhood.

When the dog returned Thursday evening, he went into convulsions. The owners rushed him to a Hingham veterinarian who determined the dog was shot with the pellets.

Officer Yokum examined the X-rays and agreed with the veterinarian's diagnosis. The dog was treated for the gun shot and is in good condition, he added.

Thus far, the shooting seems to be an isolated incident, the officer said. Several months ago, another dog was shot at after he repeatedly disturbed livestock. Officer Yokum did not know why this dog was shot at or where the incident occurred.

Anyone with information about the Thursday shooting, should contact Animal Control Officer Yokum at 383-9063.

Art Center permit

The South Shore Art Center has obtained all necessary permits to begin renovation work this summer at its new location at 115 Ripley Road.

Last week, the state Division of Water Pollution Control (DWPC) reversed a previous decision and granted the center a change in its sewer use at the new location. In June, directors of the art center announced the purchase of the Tantillo Auto Body facility. Although the local sewer commission approved a change in use for the new location, the DPW had refused to allow a permit. State officials objected to the increased number of toilets planned at the facility, and expressed concern that chemicals from the photo darkroom would be drained into the town's sewer system.

For the past seven years, the town has been under a ban which prohibited increased use of the town's sewer system.

Engineers for the art center had argued that the water-saving toilets would not impact on the town's overburdened sewer system. They also proposed the use of acid-neutralizing devices which would prevent chemical infiltration into the sewer system.

With all permits in hand, the art center is set to begin renovation work in June. A major capital fundraising effort is planned to begin in March. The expansion and renovation work will cost the center about $500,000, according to Center President Claffy Williams.

Drainage objections could hurt No. Main Street housing

Neighbors of the proposed low and middle income housing units proposed for North Main Street have scheduled a meeting next week to discuss their objections to the plan.

Poor drainage in the neighborhood is the reason the neighbors oppose the project proposed by local developer Wayne Sawchuk. One neighbor, Laura Doherty of 36 Cedar Acres, said there are problems with the drainage now, and with the addition of 36 housing units in the area the flooding problems will escalate.

Several area residents attended a Zoning Board of Appeals meeting last month regarding the proposed development. At that time they voiced their objections to the housing plan proposed for the 9.5 acres of land at 320 and 330 North Main Street. Doherty explained that the surrounding land is lower than the ledge-filled Sawchuk property.

A single-family home was recently constructed next to the Doherty's residence and affected the drainage flow on their property. "Can you imagine what 36 units would do?" she questioned.

The Sawchuck property is located behind the Doherty's Cedar Acre residence.

Some of the Cedar Acres residents were not aware of the proposed North Main Street development and were not notified of the zoning board's hearing in February. This meeting is scheduled, Doherty said, to update all the neighbors on what is planned for the property owned by developer Sawchuk.

Doherty explained the developer has applied for a comprehensive permit from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development. If that permit is approved, which is likely considering the lack of low income housing in Cohasset, the town would have no say in recommending restrictions to the proposed construction.

If the zoning board grants the variance to construct apartment units on the property zoned for 10 single-family dwellings, other local boards must review the plan and make recommendations.

The proposal would be reviewed by the Conservation Commission, the Board of Health and the Water Commission, Doherty said. The Water Commission has expressed concern about the development, saying they would not approve a tie-in to the town's water line because of low pressure in that area.

"We understand there is a need for low income housing in Cohasset," Doherty said, "but we don't think this is the right area. The drainage is poor and the ledge is there. The property is much higher than the surrounding properties and it would drain right onto these other areas."

Most of the homes in that neighborhood have frequently utilize sump pumps, and many can not use driveways during heavy rains.

Several of the neighbors attended last month's zoning board hearing and voiced their objections, Doherty said. "Now we want to see what we can do if they grant this. If they don't grant it, and he is given a comprehensive permit, I don't know what we can do about it. We don't want this granted period. But if it is, we want to go before the town boards and express our concerns and objections as neighbors."

The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, March 11 at 7:30 p.m. at 36 Cedar Acres Lane. For more information, contact Doherty at 383-6625.

Mrs. Dooley taken to Brigham & Women's

Mrs. Joyce Dooley, wife of former Fire Chief Martin Dooley, has been transferred to Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston after she was rushed by ambulance to the South Shore Hospital more than a week ago.

Mrs. Dooley was taken to the South Weymouth hospital after she suffered what was originally thought to be a heart attack. Tests completed since that time indicate she did not suffer a heart attack, but there may be blockage of the arteries leading to the heart, according to former Chief Dooley.

She was transferred Tuesday to Brigham and Women's Hospital for more complete diagnostic testing, he noted. She spent more than a week in the intensive care unit at the South Shore Hospital, and later in the Cardiac Care unit. After a heart attack was ruled out, physicians there decided to move her to the Boston hospital for more sophisticated tests than those available at the South Shore Hospital, he added.

Former Chief Dooley said his wife is experiencing some pain from the apparent blockage. But her condition has stabilized enough so that doctors will be able to perform more extensive tests.

Mr. and Mrs. Dooley are grateful for all the expressions of support and comfort from their friends and acquaintances.

If anyone would like to send Mrs. Dooley a card, this is the address: Brigham and Women's Hospital, Room 9A-021, 75 Francis Street, Boston, Mass. 02146.

Pereira trust fund

Very recently the Pereira family of 17 Bates Lane suffered the loss of John Pereira, husband of Dianna and father to Anthony, John and Holly. Mr. Pereira died after a long illness that required extensive medical care and hospitalization. His family and his many friends in Cohasset will miss him but will long remember his contributions to our community and the children of this town.

John was very involved in Cohasset youth athletic activities. Mr. Pereira was also active in the Cohasset Jaycees and served as president of that organization.

His friends have established The John Pereira Family Trust Fund at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank to honor his memory and to assist his family during this most difficult time. If you wish to contribute to this worthwhile cause, please send a check or money order to Pilgri m Cooperative Bank, 48 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts 02025. Your help will be very much appreciated.

Expanded school budget provides for youth counselor

The school committee unanimously voted Monday night to support a 6.6 percent increase in the school budget for next year. Included in the proposed budget will be an elementary youth adjustment counselor, an expanded gifted and talented program, and the high school instrumental music program.

After scheduling ten budget sessions in which residents urged the administration not to eliminate those items, the committee voted to include the programs in the proposed $4,530,876 budget.

"Everything is contigent on what is happening April 5 (at Town Meeting)," Chairman Joseph Nedrow said. "No action was taken until we got a clear signal from the town. We'd like to think what we have been hearing is representative of the town."

What the committee has heard since the budget review began in December was support for the implementation of a youth adjustment counselor for the elementary schools at a cost of about $31,000. More than 60 persons crowded the meeting when that budget proposal was presented to the school committee, according to Superintendent Eugene Crowell. When the administration proposed elimination of the high school instrumental music program, a strong contingent of support urged the committee to retain instructor Stephen Shirosky at a cost of $18,000.

And after listening to a presentation last week of the gifted and talented program and the residents who urged the program's expansion, the committee voted to increase the program from its 60 percent level to 80 percent. A Horace Mann grant next year will provide the remaining 20 percent salary needed to employ Dorothy Wondolowski fulltime at a budget increase of $8,276.

Supt. Crowell summarized a "laundry list" of changes made to the budget since the committee's review began. Among the additions to the proposed FY 1987 budget is $11,680 to employ Home Economics teacher Carolyn Contis fulltime. After listening to concerned parents, the committee decided to increase that position from part time.

"This is another case of a person on staff who works to more than 100 percent efficiency," member Richard Conley stated. "Someday, someone outside the system is going to come along and say 'we'll pay you 100 percent' and we're going to lose her."

He supported eliminating funds from the grounds maintenance account in order to fund the home economics position. "We can better use that $10,000 for a person who is going to have a dramatic effect on our students," he added.

Supt. Crowell noted that he and Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart had already eliminated $29,000 in various line item reductions.

Among the decreases made to the budget was $10,000 from the fuel oil account and $7,000 taken from the salary of a third grade teacher.

"This is an educational budget that reflects the wish of the town," Chairman Nedrow reiterated.

Committee members urged the public is attend a hearing on the budget Monday, March 10 at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

"I would like our presentation to Town Meeting not to be fast," member Diana Kornet stated. "A lot of people do not have kids in the system and we must present a cogent defense of this budget so it will pass."

In reviewing the financial factors involved in preparing this budget, Asst. Supt. Hart noted the town recently received notice that Cohasset would obtain $223,684 in state aid. From that total, $128,388 has been earmarked for education, he said. The advisory committee was not aware of this total when they voted last week to support a 4 percent budget increase. "(Town Accountant) Don Andrew probably made estimates, but I don't know what those estimates were. These figures hadn't arrived yet," Hart said. "The question is, taking into account the potential decrease of federal revenue sharing, how much state aid did the advisory committee anticipate?"

Several committee members expressed their displeasure that the advisory committee voted to support a $4.4 million school budget last week without input from the school committee.

"This has put us in an adversarial position with the advisory committee when we should have had a meaningful dialogue. No one benefits from this," Chairman Nedrow said.

A discussion followed about the merits of supporting a Prop. 2 1/2 overrride. "The advisory committee has said it is their thing to consider an override, not ours," Conley stated. "It is our policy to recommend what the schools should have. It is not our job (to recommend an override). That should be coming from the other way."

"The fiscal leadership of the town is in the hands of the advisory committee," Supt. Crowell agreed. "The school committee lost that when they lost their fiscal autonomy."

School committee candidate Dane Hahn echoed a concern of the advisory committee that school administrators' salaries have risen 40 percent, and questioned whether two principals are necessary for the elementary schools.

Member Kornet explained that a business manager was eliminated and the central office went from three to two persons. "We then allocated those lost jobs to the principals. That one issue has been examined repeatedly since 2 1/2. We need that number to do the job," she said.

CHS 'Candid ' play advances to semi-finals

Following a tradition set several years ago, but embarking on new heights of achievement are the Cohasset High School performers of the 1986 High School Drama Festival.

At last Saturday's competition, the Cohasset cast thrilled the audience with a thoughtful, poignant production of "Candid." The play advanced to semi-final competition which will be held Saturday afternoon, March 8 at the high school.

Of the 15 awards presented at the conclusion of Saturday's competition, Cohasset gathered six. Each member of the cast was honored as participants of the regional All Star cast. This achievement, according to Director Ron Emmons, is a first for the high school, and a rarity among festival competitors.

"It's extremely unusual that every member of the cast is selected to the All Star cast," he said this week. "Last year, the entire cast of 'Voices' was awarded an ensemble honor, but this is different. This is even more unusual."

Members of the Cohasset production who were named Festival All Stars are: Karin Aglin, Erin Browne, Jenna Emmons, Andrew Glasfeld, Glen Hochkeppel, and John Kuntz.

'Candid' is the intimate story of a young teen who through slides and dialogue talks about the departure of his mother from the family. It is a sad, profound and moving piece of original theatre, according to Emmons.

"Everyone reacts to this play," he said this week. "And there is no truth to the rumor that I was crying (at the play's performance last Saturday). I was having a severe allergy attack.

"It's a pretty nice script. It's heavy, but it's not. It's strong, and it has an impact," he continued. "But Andrew as T.J. handles it so effectively there's even more impact."

The director noted that every year since Cohasset first entered the drama festival in 1979, CHS has not failed to make the semi-finals. The performers have reached the finals three of the last four years.

"I really want this show to win," Emmons added. "It's such an important play. It hurts a lot. But it makes you realize that kids have to talk to each other and to their parents. So many plays are aimed at parents having to talk with their kids. But at the end of this play, you realize how important it is for kids to talk to their parents, too. T.J. realizes at the end - "Mom loves me."

The play was written by a Rhode Island teacher, Michael Scanlon. He came to Cohasset last month during rehearsals of the production and the students had an opporunity to talk with him about the play. Emmons was involved with the play this past summer at the Choate School when the script was being rewritten for production. In fact, three of the author's plays have made it to the semi-finals of the state drama festival, Emmons said.

There are five semi-final competition rounds taking place throughout the state. Three productions will be selected from each festival. Those fifteen productions will be performed at the state final competition at the John Hancock Hall March 19-21. The two top finalists from that competition will compete in the New England Drama Festival in April.

Eddie & the Cruisers

And from all accounts, Medfield will be waiting, a town in waiting. It is likely every hoop freak in town will turn out, ready to yell their team to victory, remembering the Cohasset defeat from a year ago. "If they were smart," said Minelli, "they would rent the Boston Garden to house all the fans from Cohasset and Medfield."

And then Minelli describes Lynn Classical, a former Division II team, now classified as Division III because of declining school enrollment is described by Minelli as "monstrous," a team as quick as Cohasset.

The term, "Eddie and the Cruisers" is termed from the movie and signifies the lighting quick power of the Cohasset squad. But Minelli says this year the hurdles are higher after every jump."

Minelli likens the upcoming days ahead to Harrison Ford in "Raiders of the Lost Ark." Each game will be a minefield, full of pitfalls such as injuries and overconfidence. "Make no mistake about this, the games coming up are no cakewalk. They are not going to be 50 point wins. People are going to be coming after us."

But Minelli is pleased and slightly surprised to be in this favored position. After last season, Minelli was worried about the potential of the team with the graduating absences of two experienced defensive players, David MacDonald and Phil Bernstein.

His best sixth man, Bobby Shultz, was elevated to be a starting guard. With these three changes, Minelli was worried.

But true to a Cruiser team, the unexpected happened. Other players came to the forefront and new sixth men appeared, Tom Larson, Mike Smith and Matt Maloney. But now Minelli is worried about the playing health of Smith and Maloney. Suffering ankle injuries, Smith may be expected to return Friday but Maloney may be out for the rest of the year.

Larson brought to the starting lineup good size (6'2½), good shooting and a good on-court sense. His only liability is lack of experience. But Minelli said the same things of MacDonald, Bernstein and Shultz in previous years but all proved game-savers.

Eddie & The Cruisers represent a total team ballclub, made up of the starters, Tom Larson and Bryan Edwards at the forwards,center James Creed and guards Bobby Shultz and Tony Bogarty.

They are bolstered by the bench of Michael Smith and Matt Maloney, David Schumaker, Todd Trautwein, Andy Starmer, David Shultz, Glenn Bernstein and Floyd Hartwick (out for the season with an ankle injury).

The Cruisers focus on a running offense based on good shooting, a fast upbeat tempo and pressure defense. Cohasset is not a tall team but each player is taught the basics of rebounding and boxing out an opponent. Each player must play an aggressive, full court defense.

"We can play at 90 miles per hour, 40 or 20 but we prefer 90," Minelli said.

"These kids didn't have to be motivated this year because of their collective talent. But they realized the challenge and reached the conclusion that everything has an organized structure to it. They have listened and that's why we can clear the hurdles ahead of us," Minelli said.

Make no mistake about this team, it has a talented starting five, bordering on awesome. College recruiters have come far and wide (from California and the mid-West) to see Creed, Bogarty and Edwards.

Minelli projects that Bogarty and Creed could end up playing college ball at the University of Washington, Fairfield, Siena, Northeastern or Pepperdine and because of Shultz's accomplishments in soccer and academics, he could be Harvard or Ivy League bound.

Minelli has the following brief synopsis about the starting five players.

TONY BOGARTY

"He is probably the most outstanding point-guard in this state. Some people think he has stagnated with his talent but I have seen improvement in a lot of little things. His floor game has improved along with his rebounding and physical strength."

JAMES CREED

"For someone who started to play this game only a few years ago, James has improved his skills immeasurably and I think there's a lot of room for him to grow. I think he is comfortable about playing here. His defense and rebounding are his strengths and he is an unselfish ballplayer."

BOBBY SHULTZ

"He is certainly a surprise to a lot of people and his improvement is amazing. Because of his hustle and desire he has certainly taken the most of his talent and surpassed all levels. Do you know in our history, he has hit some very key long-range shots and is a very quick ballplayer who can also sneak in for some important rebounds. He is a very pleasant addition to this starting five."

BRYAN EDWARDS

"Bryan is a sophomore with an outstanding physical talent. With more game experience his future is certainly great."

And there they are, Eddie and the Cruisers, ready to do basketball battle. If it is March 6, it is time for basketball playoffs, Cruiser style.

Comparisons to the Celtics are common. Everybody know it will be the Celtics versus the Lakers in the finals and Division III prognosticators were saying in December it would be Cohasset versus Medfield in the finals.

Now, let the games begin.

Advisors reject proposal for full-time appraiser

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

With the Town Meeting warrant deadline approaching, the advisory committee voted on special warrant articles Tuesday night and prepared its report for the town warrant.

The vote included a rejection of the article submitted by the Town Government Structure Committee to create the position of a permanent full-time appraiser to assist the Board of Assessors.

At the same time, the advisory committee approved a transfer request for $1,232 to continue part-time clerical help through June.

Chairman of the Board of Assessors, Thomas Duggan appeared at the meeting to support his request for part-time help and to express his opposition to the creation of a full-time assessor-appraiser.

Duggan told the board that an assessor was not necessary. It was more necessary to get adequate staffing.

"There will be a lot of activity in a couple of months and I don't want to think about hiring an appraiser," Duggan said.

He added that the bills have always been late in a revaluation year.

"I would like to have options," he told the committee. "I don't want to be dependent on one man."

He also said that he has a chart which shows that very few towns the size of Cohasset have a full-time appraiser.

The Board of Assessors had originally submitted an article after being approached by the Government Structure Committee. They later withdrew their article.

A similar article submitted by the Government Structure Committee was unanimously denied.

Duggan indicated to the Board that he would be willing to defend his position on the floor of Town Meeting.

The following Special Warrant articles were approved by the advisory committee:

— $115,500 for the reserve fund. On the suggestion of member Bill Lean, this includes a five percent increase to keep up with inflation. Lean also suggested that the five percent be built into the budget each year.

— $1,995 for algae control in Little Harbor.

— $10,000 for the purchase of a new pick-up truck for the water department, to be appropriated from water revenue.

— $2,600 to complete the library computer system.

— $500 for a marker in the Edward A. Young Memorial Parking Lot on Government Island.

— Money to hang pictures of veterans in Town Hall.

The committee rejected an article for a postage meter and a paper shredder for Town Hall.

The committee decided to request more information before deciding on the following articles.

— $13,000 for the purchase of an emergency generator to service Pond St. waste water pumping site.

— $32,624 to cap and seed two acres of the Cedar

Chip also came in tenth on the freestyle, which is excellent when you think that there were 60 participants! So, congratulations to Chip on winning two medals, and we are sure there will be more on March 15.

Budget review

In an editorial last year we admonished the school committee for the process utilized in its budget review.

We took them to task for not allowing enough public perusal of the individual budgets, and for not having department chairmen present when the budget was reviewed.

We complained about the lack of public interest in the school department budget. It is tradition in this community as well as others, that people attend the budget hearings only when items of specific individual interest are reviewed.

We proposed that the committee revise its budget presentation by reviewing only certain sections of the budget each week. We recommended that department heads attend the specified meeting to answer committee questions, and concerns from the public.

We congratulate the committee for responding positively to the criticism. Certainly they did not change the budget format because the Mariner proposed a change. We are certain the committee heard from other areas within the community. Our collective voice was heard and a response was forthcoming.

This year the school committee held about ten weekly budget sessions. Some were sparsely attended, others were jammed with interested taxpayers.

That's how it should be. When a budget comprises 57 percent of the total community tax package, the public should be interested.

For their part, the committee attempted to clarify the budget process by outlining which department budget would be discussed at a particular meeting. Everything was identified on the meeting's agenda.

The public had every opportunity to attend the meetings, ask questions of the department chairmen, and provide the school committee with comments and concerns.

The preliminary budget meetings have concluded. A $4.5 million budget has been recommended by the committee. It includes several items which taxpayers have insisted remain in the system. Residents who cared enough to attend these meetings voiced strong support of hiring an elementary youth adjustment counselor and keeping the high school instrumental music program. That's why these items remain in the total school budget. "We are listening to what our constituents have told us. And they have said they want these things," Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow stated this week.

Placing these items within the budget has not been arbitrary process. There was much discussion and debate before any decision were made.

The school committee sought public input on every item within the school's budget.

If we are satisfied or not, it is our responsibility to be at the final school budget public hearing. The taxpayers of Cohasset, the people who pay for school roofs, teachers' salaries, books and supplies, should be there to comment.

That hearing will be held in the high school auditorium, Monday, March 10 at 8 p.m.

NEWS ITEM — Should Cohasset's 'official gravedigger' be paid overtime? The fee for each grave job and the regular park department salary are the same for grave work on weekends and holidays. Selectmen seek ruling from town counsel fair labor on standards act which could affect town employees who put in more than 40 hours a week on job

Art Center thanks Rep. Murray

This letter was sent to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Ed.

Dear Representative Murray:

Now that the Water Resources Board of the state DEQE has cleared the way for the South Shore Art Center to get on with its new building, on behalf of the Art Center, I'd like to thank you for your help in making it all come about.

When we called you for suggestions about how we should respond to the state's initial objections, you not only came through with sound, practical advice; you took the next step and set up a meeting between the Art Center and the Board where we could present our case in open discussion. More than that, you were right there at the meeting with common-sense questions that cut through red tape and made the session a productive one.

I cannot tell you how impressed we have been with the way in which you go to bat for your constituents...not just lip service, but a willingness to step right in, take our concerns and make them your own.

Archivist offers resignation from post

(This letter was sent to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew from Town Archivist David Wadsworth. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Andrew:

For the past several years it has been my pleasure to serve the Town as appointed Town Archivist, a position which grew out of a project undertaken in 1979 and 1980 to organize and store properly the town's historical records. During those years (for a duration of 18 months) the position of Town Archivist was a full-time CETA funded job. Upon cessation of the CETA funding, the Archive work necessarily ended, and I have remained as volunteer archivist since then. I now regretfully find that the pressure of full-time employment as senior curator of the Historical Society does not allow me time to actively pursue archive work in the volunteer area of the Town Archives.

This letter is written to inform the Board of Selectmen of my decision to resign the volunteer post of Town Archivist effective immediately, a decision regretfully made but necessary.

May I mention that the proper storage of Town records, under the Public Record Laws of the Commonwealth, is a matter of importance to government and citizens alike. Conforming vault facilities presently are inadequate at the Town Hall, and improper storage of some of the Town's permanent records continues to present a problem not easily solved.

It is my feeling that the proper storage and organizing of the voluminous amount of public records now being generated by the various offices and departments of the Town is beyond the ability of a volunteer archivist. It is my feeling that a paid clerical position of Records Custodian is going to be necessary in the near future to ensure storage of permanent Public Records in a manner conforming to the Public Records laws of the Commonwealth, and the construction of a conforming central vault facility at the site of the town offices is vital to proper records storage.

Regarding the Town's historical public records, may I observe that Cohasset has a wealth of historical record books and documents, dating back to before the precincting of the Town of Hingham in 1717. These historical records are unique and represent an historical treasure which is an asset to this community. They deserve the best facility and the most careful handling that can be provided.

The initial efforts to organize and preserve them made by myself during that CETA funded Archive project a few years ago was a start in the right direction. I regret that I can do no more because of the constraints imposed by limited time available to me, but I would hope that the ancient records can be preserved for future generations through the building of a properly constructed and diligently maintained vault facility.

Again, may I state that I am glad to have been able to assist in the initial organization of the Town's historic records, but cannot devote the time or effort needed to carry the Archive project further.

David Wadsworth

New owners to offer some tried and new treats

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The new proprietors of Margie's Seafood are (l to r) Carol Short and Rosemary Ford. (Carol McCann photo)

There's a small shop nestled among the other businesses along Cohasset's waterfront. Margie's Seafoods has always been a standout, but not because of its fancy appearance.

Margie's has a reputation built on many years of neighborly service and quality products.

Margie Ritter has been a familiar sight to local shoppers as she prepared unique seafood and waited on customers. The shop was recently purchased by her two friends, Carol Short and Rosemary Ford, both of Scituate. The two women vow that Margie's Seafoods will continue to provide the freshest quality products served by people who care about their customers.

Even Margie will remain. Through her own insistence, her hours at the store will be reduced. But she will still prepare many of the dishes her customers have come to savor. Carol and Rosemary, both avid seafood chefs, will add some of their creative touches to the offerings at the Elm Street store.

Although a new coat of paint and some new signs will be added to the storefront, there won't be many drastic changes to Margie's, the new owners promise. They bought the store last November, and for two months worked side-by-side with Margie.

"We plan to experiment a bit," Carol said last week. "But Margie will be cooking her same specialities and waiting on customers. She loves to cook, so we're not going to stop her. We're thrilled to have her."

According to the new owners, Margie is famous for her quarter-pound lobster roll. "People come from all over for these," Rosemary stated.

This year, they are thinking of offering that lobster treat on pita bread or bakery rolls from the Bread Shop. Another new idea may be a Senior Citizens Day on a specified day each week.

"We could take orders from the elderly housing here in town or in Scituate," Rosemary said.

Talking about the menu at the seafood store, the owners said the crabmeat will now be all fresh Maine crabs. A frozen Alaskan variety was used previously, they said, and both agree the fresh New England product is tastier.

A picnic lunch may also be offered through the summer. That complete lunch would include a lobster, crab or combination roll, or a tuna roll, coleslaw, potato chips, fruit and a soft drink.

"I'm even thinking of adding one of my homemade brownies in there," Carol said.

Margie's will open March 26, the week preceding Easter, and will remain open until Dec. 31.

Among the fresh fish they will offer at the store will be: grey sole, haddock, scrod, swordfish, salmon and halibut when available, sea scallops, Cape scallops in season, oysters for the holidays, and steamers when available.

All the live lobsters sold at Margie's are caught off Cohasset's shores by local fishermen. Fresh fish from those same fishermen will be offered at the store when available.

Margie's has been known throughout the past six years for the one-pound frozen fish dinner. The new owners agree this is a plentiful and popular item which will continue under their management.

Carol began experimenting with her cuisine last fall and will continue to create a newburg sauce, Cioppino, a Portuguese fish stew, linguica stuffed clams, baked stuffed lobsters which will be available fresh or frozen.

The owners emphasize that their fresh Cohasset lobsters "will fly anywhere." They are crated into containers that will keep live lobsters fresh for up to 72 hours.

Some of the many customers who have been loyal patrons of Margie's include the South Shore Music Circus performers who stay at the nearby motel. One such customer, Charlie Daniels, was there so often last summer, his wife starting complaining he was spending all his money on the food there.

The owners laughed as they remembered the large man entering the small shop every morning during his brief stay in Cohasset. "Are you the driver of that big bus over there?" Rosemary questioned him as he lumbered inside the store. "No ma'am," he drawled. "I own that bus."

Daniels is "addicted to cooked shrimp," according to the store owners. "And the kids in the orchestra never had cooked lobster before. We cooked a lot for them."

Another well-known Music Circus performer, Tony Bennett, comes into the store just to see Margie. They talk endlessly about music, the owners said. Another celebrity walked into the store last summer and said he had to have a famous lobster roll. He had heard about them from another performer who had a previous engagement at the Cohasset Music Circus.

The busiest part of the year continues from May to October as summer sightseers flock to the picturesque harbor and residents take to their boats. The Christmas holidays are also a particularly busy time of the year as the three cooks de-vein and peel endless pounds of shrimp for holiday specialities.

When asked why people traditionally stop at the small store instead of purchasing their fish at supermarkets, the owners simultaneously answered.

"We have fresh fish everyday. Most of it is caught right here," Carol said, with Rosemary in agreement. The swordfish is all local, along with the lobsters. Anyone who would like a specific order, a certain cut or amount, can call us ahead of time."

Rosemary noted that the store provides 45 recipes for many of its well-known and admired menu items.

"A lot of young people don't like to eat meat," she added. "They really like the fish, and they demand new types. We have that for them."

And when asked if they are often tempted to sample their cuisine, both owners admitted guilt. "If it's something Margie's making, I eat it," Rosemary said, noting, "I often bring some things home for dinner. I like my cooking and Carol's so we sample a lot of things while they're being made.

"Margie will continue to make the traditional favorites. That will give Carol and I time to experiment and try different things."

School receives 49 principal applications

The school department received 49 applications for the position of Cohasset High School principal. From that total, 33 will be screened by the administration , including three applicants from within the Cohasset school system.

Principal Richard Streeter has been named Assistant Superintendent and will be vacating the high school position at the end of this school year.

According to Superintendent Eugene Crowell, 49 persons "from all over the area" including one from Texas, submitted applications. After carefully screening the applicants, Supt. Crowell, Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart, and Principal Richard Streeter determined 16 did not meet the standards set by the search sub committees. The three Cohasset applicants automatically proceed to the interview stage, according to the search guidelines.

Supt. Crowell said the three administrators will begin the interviews Monday, March 10 and will continue for about a month, he estimated.

Each of the candidates will meet with a sub committee consisting of a parent, teacher, student, administrator and department head. The candidates will be ranked and the top three or four will be forwarded to the school committee for an interview. The committee will make the final selection.

Robinson applauds Rep. Murray's record

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Representative Mary Jeanette Murray on her 99.91 percent roll call attendance record during the 1985 legislative session.

This is a very impressive record as 1985 saw a total of 1096 recorded roll calls in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

It should also be mentioned that this attendance record was attained while performing the time consumer tasks of legislative committee membership. Representative Murray serves on the Counties, Local Affairs and Taxation Committees and too frequently public hearing and meeting schedules can conflict with the legislative session.

Not only do I extend my compliments to Representative Murray for such diligence, but I must also congratulate the citizens of the Third Plymouth District for having the foresight to send her to the Massachusetts Legislature as their representative.

No hope that EPA will okay plan

To the Editor:

A letter published last week notes correctly that Cohasset has missed its opportunity to have its own sewage treatment plant at less cost than we will suffer with the Hull connection. Perhaps we should not put all the blame on the current Sewer Commissioners; after all, they merely nurtured the delusions that so many townspeople wanted to hang onto. The selectmen, the advisory committee and the townspeople ignored the warnings and continue to hope for miracles.

Well, miracle deliverance isn't going to come in the form of expanding the existing plant to serve an expanded sewer area. DEQE nixed that long ago, and common sense ought to tell us we won't be allowed to discharge 300,000 gallons per day into the harbor when we have had trouble with the existing 100,000 gallons. (Actualy, we need 500,000 gallons to serve the sewered area voted at town meeting a year ago, even though the proposed flow to Hull is 300,000 gallons per day) There is no viable plan on file by any engineering firm that avoids an ocean outfall, nor is there the slightest hope that such a plan would be accepted by DEQE and EPA.

Yellin praises CHS students

For the past six years the CHS ninth grade has visited a synagogue as part of their humanities class.

This year the students visited Mishkan Tefila in Newton to listen to Rabbi Richard M. Yellin speak about Judiaism and Hebrew history.

Students benefited from this exposure to a different culture and perspective which has influenced them academically and socially.

Part of the class visit to the synagogue was taped by Channel 5, entitled "A World of Difference" and was aired on the "Good Day Show."

A letter from Rabbi Yellin, which has some very positive things to say about the students of Cohasset, follows:

Dear Ms. Fran Cronin,

I received the wonderful letters from your class, and once again, their sentiments are part and parcel of the stuff that civilization is made of. Appreciating differences is the very foundation of human growth. When we realize that there is something worth learning, something outside of our own sphere, then we can grow.

It was a privilege on my part to host your very well-behaved ninth grade students. The people from Channel 5, who are engaged regularly in their World of Difference campaign, were overwhelmed by the graciousness of the students. I wish I could write to each and everyone of the students that reached out to me, but that would simply be impossible. I am using a number of their comments in articles that I'm writing about young people. I am even in the planning stages of a book in which I will write about non-Jewish reactions to Jewish ideals. Thank you for this wonderful gift. I, the teacher, received so much more than the students from the ninth grade of Cohasset High School.

My very best wishes.

Sincerely,
Richard M. Yellin, Rabbi

Ninth graders thanked

Each year the CHS ninth grade participates in a humanities project in December.

The purpose is to remind them of the full sense of the word "humanities" and to give them the chance to demonstrate what they are learning.

This year $151.83 was donated to the Salvation Army in Boston and a like amount to Kingston House, a place for the homeless.

Money also was raised to buy food for a needy Cohasset family. This year $100 was spent by the teachers and four volunteer students for two families. Boxes were decorated, food was packed and the donation was delivered to the Cohasset Social Service League.

Two letters thanking the CHS ninth grade for their support follow:

Dear Friends:

We at the Salvation Army would like to thank you for your Christmas season donation, in the amount of $151.83 which was recently received.

While you've heard reports that we did have difficulty meeting the vastly increased demand for help this year, your generous response has enabled us to help meet the needs of thousands for whom these days would be less bright had you not helped. Those who have turned to the Salvation Army found the help they needed, because you shared. For this, I would like to offer sincere thanks!

Your help is appreciated. Please accept our gratitude prayer that God will richly bless you in the New Year.

Sincerely yours,
Lt. Colonel Donald Seiler
Divisional Commander

Thank you for your kind concern for us here at the Kingston House.

What a remarkable class! God bless you all.

Sincerely,
Rev. Milton Friesen

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

Home Center Realty

THE WALK-THROUGH

Before you go to the settlement attorney's office to finalize the purchase of your new home, you may want to arrange a "walk-through." This is your last chance to inspect the property and ensure it's in the same condition it was when you drew up your purchase agreement.

In some agreements, the sellers convey the appliances and major systems "as is," offering you not promises that they will be in working order. In other cases, all of the major mechanical systems, such as heating, plumbing and air conditioning, must be operational. It all depends on what terms are negotiated with the sellers.

At the walk-through, you can check the appliances, turning each one on and letting it run its cycle. If the sellers were supposed to make any repairs, this is your chance to be sure they were completed. If something needs fixing, it's much easier to work out before or during the settlement than to do so after you've taken possesion of your new home.

At HOME CENTER REALTY, our professionals are waiting to serve all of your real estate needs. You may stop by our office at 57 Water St., Higham or give us a call at 749-8833.

Guidance counselors workshop

The Guidance Department is pleased to announce that Mary Babaian and Edward Leonard have been selected to conduct a workshop at the Massachusetts School Counselors Association Conference. This annual event gathers school counselors from across the state to share innovative ideas which benefit students.

Their presentation entitled "Career Education is Alive and Well in Cohasset" will feature our two-year-old guest speaker program. Linda Starmer, the the high school's P.S.O. representative, will attend to address the important role the P.S.O. has played in the success of Cohasset's program.

We are pleased to receive state wide recognition and congratulate the community people and staff members who made this achievement possible. This is the second time in the past few years that the Cohasset High School Guidance Department has been invited as presentors at the state conference. In 1983, Miss Babaian and Mrs. Porter conducted a workshop on peer counseling.

Advisors to talk with school committeee

In an attempt to reach a satisfactory agreement with the School Committee the Advisory Committee decided to table discussion of the school budget and to send a representative to talk with the school committee.

Monday evening, the school committee voted for a $4,530,876 budget a 6.6 percent increase over last year. The advisory committee last week voted to recommend a budget with a four percent increase.

In a report prepared for the town warrant, Chairman Jackie Dormitzer wrote that "the school budget would "unfairly consume a large portion of the town's resources."

Member Bill Lean volunteered to discuss the budget with the school committee in an effort to reach a mutual decision before Town Meeting.

Lean said he wanted "to see if there is room for discussion."

"The Town Meeting is not the place to talk about these things," he said. "It is too emotional."

Treasurer to return unclaimed funds

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane today released the names of Cohasset businesses and individuals who are due a windfall from abandoned accounts.

Under the state's Unclaimed Money Law, bank accounts, insurance proceeds, uncashed gift certificates, payroll checks, customer overpayments and the like that have gone untouched for at least five years are considered by the state to be abandoned. All such accounts must be reported to the Treasurer, who then attempts to notify the rightful owners or their heirs.

Crane said compliance with the law is improving. "However, there are still numerous instances where funds should have been returned directly such as in the case of Boston Edison Company. General Electric, the New England Patriots, and United Airlines," the Treasurer said.

Treasurer Crane noted one important aspect of the Unclaimed Money Law requires that until claimed, all funds are kept in the state's General Fund where they are invested for the benefit of all residents and taxpayers here in Massachusetts.

The following Cohasset businesses and residents include: Abigail J. Adams, Marylyn J. Adams, John Alongi, John Alongi, John C. Alongi, John C. Alongi, John T. Barnes, Carol Beggen Tru. Girls hoop team tournament championship hopes dashed

The girls opened the tournament last Wednesday by demolishing Old Colony, 63-32. Coach Bill Fallon felt the key to this decisive victory was his team's hard work and great intensity which lasted throughout the game. Fallon also felt his team played well defensively.

Cindy Spooner led all scorers with 21 points and had 16 rebounds as well. Margie Murphy also had a good game pumping in 14 points. Fallon thought both of these girls played exceptionally well. Fallon also cited Melissa Shea and Debbie Hartley as turning in good efforts.

Unfortunately, Cohasset tournament hopes were dashed as they lost to Blue Hills on Friday, 43-40. Fallon felt his team lacked the intensity it had on Wednesday and made too many mistakes.

Maureen O'Leary was Cohasset's leading scorer with 12 points, followed by Margie Murphy who had 11. Fallon felt that Margie Murphy, Melissa Shea and Cindy Spooner all gave a great effort.

Despite the season's disappointing end, Fallon was pleased with the year overall, stressing the fact that his team won 15 games even though it lost its five starters last year. Under the leadership of Maureen O'Leary, Margie Murphy and Cindy Spooner, the girls hope to reach their full potential next season.

Fallon's goals for next year include winning the league championship, surpassing 15 wins, and going further in the tournament. Hopefully, the Skippers can reach these goals and add yet another successful season to their growing list.

Tournament fever hits home to Cohasset

think about."

Basketball fever has not only affected the players and the parents of players. Students, teachers, administrators, ex-jocks and their wives have joined the steady parade of 'regulars' who have attended the games during Minelli's surge to tournament championship.

And, as at least one observer noted, the success and support of the basketball team has filtered down to the other high school athletic teams, where soccer, field hockey, softball and football are following in their winning ways.

Some people might say it's the unusual talent of the team that attracts the attention of fans and media to the Cohasset gym. But one resident emphasized, "If you have to mention anything, then say that every one on that team is a wonderful young man. And I'd say that's at least as important as their record."

Herbert Crehan of Sohier Street believes that's why so many have pledged their attention to a team likely to repeat last year's run for the championship.

His wife, Karen, agrees. "My husband is a longtime friend of Eddie's. Now I am really getting into it. Eddie has a wonderful rapport with the kids. First and foremost, they are a team. There are no ego trips there."

Mrs. Crehan recalled how her young son Herbie had a serious case of 'hero worship' for former Cruiser David McDonald and now for Bobby Shultz, James Creed, Tony Bogart and Bryan Edwards. Herbie loves attending the games and watching his local idols in action. "The only way we punish him now is to tell him he can't go to the game if he's bad," she confided.

"They are an outstanding team - they're remarkable to watch. You don't appreciate how good they are until you watch them," Mrs. Crehan added. "And the best thing is that they're all outstanding young men."

The Crehan family (with the notable exception of 15-year old Alison who will do anything except go to a game) schedules their winter activities around the basketball games.

"My husband even got out of one business meeting when he said he had a PSO meeting to attend. He really was going to a basketball game," she laughed.

The couple spent a brief winter vacation in the Virginia area in December and while there, happened to sneak in all the Cohasset tournament action. "It was nice," Mrs. Crehan said, adding, "we even managed to do some sightseeing after the games."

Mr. Crehan confirmed that his addiction to the Cohasset team has extended to his game time wardrobe. He is easily recognizable in a green felt hat which he wears to all the games. Since he fitted that fedora atop his head, the Cruisers have not lost in regulation time to a Massachusetts team.

Coach Minelli and Mr. Crehan grew up together in Hull. "We used to shovel the snow off the courts and play with our gloves on. I bet Eddie still does that," he quipped.

The 1986 CHS basketball squad, he said, "is great. Last year's was also a great team. If you asked in the middle of the season, I might have said last year's was better. But some of the kids have come off the bench this season, and I'd say they're about even.

"I think this team will win the whole thing. It will be a big upset if they don't. It's a lot of pressure for 17 and 18 year-olds. But they don't take winning for granted."

One of the most enthusiastic supporters of this team is their coach. "We have been blessed with good and great players. They're exciting to watch - it's turned the whole town on," he said. "With all the publicity they've received this year, they have retained that philosophy. They are gentlemen. They've been pushed and shoved and they've turned the other cheek. I am so proud of this team. It's charismatic."

"The little kids who watch the games want to grow up to be Skippers like Tony Bogarty and Bobby Shultz . . ."
Coach Eddie Minelli

Responding to the oft-whispered rumor that many of the team members are recruited through the METCO program, Minelli replied, "ridiculous. I've worked my butt off with the Cohasset kids and the METCO kids."

Minelli recalled when 'Cruiser' mania reached a peak three seasons ago during tournament play against Cardinal Spellman. With three seconds remaining in the game, Cohasset tied the score. "It was such an intense effort, there were 3,000 screaming fans there rooting for Cohasset," he remembered.

The resulting loss was the most difficult game Minelli ever coached. "I looked each one of those boys in the face and I told them there were no losers in that game."

According to the coach, an elderly man from Needham attended a recent CHS game played at Boston College. "The man," Minelli said, "came down from the bleachers to talk with me. He said he loved basketball and read all about Cohasset. He's been to every game since and to most of the scrimmages."

Two firefighters from Hull are regular attendees at the games. Dr. Roger Pompeo and his wife, Ann, are frequent spectators. During a recent game Dr. Pompeo strode down from the stands, reached behind an ailing Coach Minelli and felt the swollen glands on his neck. The physician scribbled a prescription on the back of Minelli's game plan. "You should have seen the pharmacist when I handed him that prescription," the coach laughed.

Several school committee members, including Jack Langmaid and Richard Conley regularly attend the basketball games. Conley traveled to games last year with the late Malcolm Stevens and former Superintendent William Ripley. "I just like to be where the kids are. One of the best entertainment buys is to see these kids. They have skills, enthusiasm - everything you want to see," Conley stated.

The students are also at the basketball games. Junior Lisa Shumaker said the talented team is exciting to watch. "Actually, they've been so good, it tends to get a bit boring. But as they progress in the state tournament, their competition will be stronger. So the games will be really exciting again," she said.

Ed Leonard has been a guidance counselor for the past two years at CHS. "I go as often as I can," he admitted. "I was visiting a friend in Virginia at Christmas and I attended the tournament games there. I've liked basketball a long time. I really enjoy seeing these kids from a small school get all this attention. I like to share in their excitement. It's like ownership in their team. Sometimes I bring along my ten year-old son. He lives basketball, and it's great because he knows all the Cohasset players by name."

English instructor Ron Emmons regularly attends the Cruiser matches. His love for basketball, and an interest in his students heighten his enthusiasm for this team.

"It's drama. It's improvised theatre," the drama coach stated. "They have to perform every night. It's exciting. They can't let themselves or their audience down.

"I generally follow basketball," Emmons continued. "But I love following the high school team. There's a closeness there. I'm not into dance, but

Selectmen

Gallagher fundraiser

Sunday, a fund-raiser was held at the George M. Mealy American Legion Post in Cohasset for James L. Gallagher, a candidate for a three-year-term on the Board of Selectmen. Two hundred people attended and were treated to a champagne punch, hot hors d'ourves and music by "The Chavis Brothers."

In Mr. Gallagher's address to those present, he stressed his past involvements in various civic duties. As a Commissioner of Recreation, he dealt with a relatively low budget, and learned how important it is to spend carefully and with fiscal responsibility.

As a member of the Municipal Garage Study Commission, he realizes the importance of having a centrally located, modern garage facility to help keep the Town's Highway, Tree & Park and Wire Departments running efficiently, and with less wear and tear on equipment. As a result of his duties on the Harbor Study Commission, Mr. Gallagher is aware of the need for the expansion of the Town Pier. However, he strongly feels that this project should be accomplished with Town funds, if possible. If State or Federal monies are used, the Town could lose most of its jurisdiction over the Harbor and adjacent parking facilities.

Of major concern to Mr. Gallagher is the ever-growing problems at the Cohasset Heights Landfill and the charges by the Water Commissioners of possible contamination of our water supply. Very dissatisfied with the lack of response from the Governor's office, and the lack of assistance from DEQE, Mr. Gallagher promises, if elected, to actively pursue each and every avenue open to him to bring this serious problem to a solution.

Of recent interest and concern to Mr. Gallagher is the telephone company's proposal to change Cohasset from the 617 Area Code to a number not yet determined. If this occurs, it is possible to be charged long-distance rates on a telephone call to a neighboring town. He feels very strongly that this is totally unfair and plans to study the proposal and work diligently against it.

He is in favor of the recent building moratorium as a good way to protect our precious water supply. However, if accomplished in full compliance with all existing rules and regulations, Mr. Gallagher is in favor of condo-conversions.

In reply to a question, Mr. Gallagher stated that he is definitely opposed to any move to place the positions of Highway Surveyor, Town Clerk and Town Collector under the jurisdiction of the Board of Selectmen by removing them from elected to appointed. He feels that the townspeople have the right to fill these important positions; and, more importantly, they have the knowledge and experience to elect competent and willing people of their own choosing.

In his closing remarks, Mr. Gallagher thanked all who are working very hard in his campaign. He made a promise to do everything in his power as a selectman to make Cohasset a better place for all its citizens.

The following is a list of persons who will be holding coffees for Candidate Gallagher:

Mr. James Corcoran, 28 Stockbridge St., Sunday, March 9, 7 p.m.

Janet Ditmar, 227 Forest Ave., Wednesday, March 12, 7:30 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Whitman, 63 Ledgewood Drive, Wednesday, March 19, 7:30 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Batts, 256 N. Main St., Sunday, March 23, 2 p.m.

For more information on coffees, call Pat Gallagher, 383-0494.

School Committee

Tanna Kasperowicz

Tanna Kasperowicz, 172 South Main Street, is a candidate for one of two seats on the Cohasset School Committee at the April 12 Annual Town Elections.

She has served as a publications volunteer at both elementary schools and at Cohasset High School. During 1985-1986 she assisted teachers, students and parents in producing two newspapers; a twenty-two page program for a CHS drama workshop production presentation and the all-school musical; and has directed and is in the process of directing numerous workshops at Cohasset Public Schools.

Kasperowicz is a registered Communications Consultant with the Bureau of Educational Resources, Resource Bank program. In 1985 she was hired as Editorial Assistant/Writer for two Mass. Dept. of Education publications.

Also she is a former Cohasset Mariner editor, and a former correspondent for the Patriot Ledger. As a free-lancer she has written for regional and national publications. Since 1981 Kasperiowicz has been a self-employed writer/editor. She advertises a resume/job counseling service regionally.

If elected, Kasperowicz feels her communications and creative abilities will be an asset to the school committee, which is mandated under "Chapter 188" to collect educational information, and provide the board of education with objective evaluations, and recommendations regarding school programs and personnel.

Kasperowicz looks upon our present decreasing student population, and the scheduling problems which a smaller student population has created, as a challenge requiring immediate attention. "Our teachers are already responding to that challenge in many interesting ways. As a citizen, and as a candidate, I consider scheduling and curriculum flexibility a priority issue."

"The larger question in this town-wide campaign, which must be addressed ultimately, by sitting boards, encumbents for re-election, and candidates is: what are the destinies of Cohasset Public Schools and town government, and how close are we to an aborted mission in both institutions?"

Kasperowicz has lived in Cohasset for 11 years. A graduate of Selinsgrove High School, Selinsgrove, PA, Kasperowicz attended Cedar Crest College in Allentown, PA. She is married to Raymond Kasperowicz, a Certified Public Accountant. Their children, Peter, a sophomore, and Tad, a 7th Grader, attend Cohasset Public Schools.

McNabb appoints committee

John K. McNabb, Jr., a candidate for Cohasset Selectman, today announced the appointment of his campaign committee, The Committee to Elect John McNabb.

"I am very appreciative of the support of my friends, and am grateful for the active support of the members of this committee," said McNabb at an initial meeting of the committee.

Officers of the committee are: Chairman, Kirk S. Giffen, Esq., 560 Jerusalem Road; Treasurer, Isabel R. Salvador, 30 Bayberry Lane, and Secretary, Susan J. Leonard, 53 Elm Street.

Members of the committee are: Jeffrie A. Bettinger, 84 Summer Street; Irene Brown, 35 Norfolk Road; Robert M. Davenport, 17 Black Horse Lane; James Z. French, 106 Doane Street; John A. Golden, 2 Bound Brook Lane; Patricia Laugelle, 17 King Street, and Donna J. McGee, 27 Hill Street.

At the committee meeting, Treasurer Izzy Salvador announced that contributions could be sent to the committee at P.O. Box 212, Cohasset, MA 02025, and that checks should be made out to The Committee to Elect John McNabb.

"There are very important issues which should be discussed in this campaign," said McNabb. "For example, I strongly support the proposed watershed protection bylaw which will be considered at Town Meeting. We need to take strong measures to protect our drinking water supplies from contamination.

"The Selectmen should take positive action now to resolve the Police Department contract dispute," said McNabb. "Our Policemen have been working for the Town without a contract for approximately two years. In the meantime, the Selectmen have spent over $20,000 in legal fees for contract negotiations and other legal costs.

Townspeople and team unite in fight to the finals watching Bryan Edwards play basketball is watching dance. What these players do facially to hide what they are doing with the basketball is drama in itself. Sports, after all, is theatre. And in contemporary life, sports is our main form of entertainment."

Emmons said it is vital for an instructor to know the students he teaches in the classroom. By watching the student perform in a play or participate in a game, the teacher will understand the student on another level.

"And the students will see that you care about them," he noted. "It's so important to relate to them. That's another reason I like to go to the games. Now I know my students as basketball players, not simply as English students in my classroom."

Whether the 1986 Cruisers take the state championship crown, Coach Minelli will be proud of this team and its members. Looking back a year ago, Minelli is enveloped in bittersweet memories.

"The last tournament game took place on the day Desiree Yess was buried. It was a terrible day. She was one of our biggest fans and the kids were so down. But they had to travel to Worcester for the finals. James' grandmother had died that day, and the boys felt terrible about that, too. But they weathered it. It didn't feel too much like the big victory it was. They couldn't remove themselves from the death of Desiree and James' grandmother. But they were motivated enough to win," he recalled.

Most of the time, team members are jubilant in their efforts to preserve the state title. "Their enthusiasm is so obvious," the coach noted. "That's what I want to create - an atmosphere where kids are excited about the game and they share that feeling. The little kids who watch the games want to grow up to be Skippers like Tony Bogart and Bobby Shultz and the rest of this team."

— Undetermined amount of money to do work on the Milligan athletic facility.

— $55,000 to resurface roads

— $90,000 for the purchase of three 1986 school buses.

— Appropriations from Water Revenue to complete roof repairs at the Water Plant at Lily Pond.

In other business, the First Department budget reported a decrease of $2,100. Chief Daniel Brock decided to delete $2,000 for a tone generator to send different signals to call out different men.

Chairman Jackie Dormitzer read a prepared report for the warrant committee. Member Dick Horne suggested that it be more specific on the School Committee position to include references to the non-salary decrease and declining enrollment.

Bill Lean suggested that the report include how they worked to keep within reasonable fiscal limits, not strictly within Proposition 2 1/2. Both recommendations were accepted.

The committee decided to ask Board of Selectmen Chairman Frank England to address the problem of collective bargaining costs with the police department. The police are still without a contract.

Peek at the Past

The answer to last week's Peek at the Past photo was corrrectly guessed by Warren Pratt. It was Matthew Luce, Herbert Bryant and John Reed at Luce's Boathouse on Pleasant Beach. Virginia Sherbrooke correctly named one of the trio. Our favorite answer was from A.J. Antoine who said, "Looks like our local politicians having a cool one at the Red Lion Inn." We also received a late entry from Richard W. Towle of Vero Beach, Fla., who correctly named each soldier in the W.W.I photo. "I have in my study here in Vero, a framed picture of this group, one of the originals," he wrote.

Edison strives for storm communication improvement

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Eastern Edison Co. plans no major changes in the way it handles future emergencies except for better communications between the utility and local officials, an executive of the company said in a press conference last week.

The utility was sharply criticized for its handling of restoration after Hurricane Gloria struck late in September. The state Department of Public Utilities and lawmakers held public hearings in which better communications were urged.

Even though communication was poor, Eastern Edison Vice President Robert Wolff said Friday the company "would not have done anything differently" in the way it restored power to customers during the eight-plus days following the hurricane. More than 100,000 Eastern Edison customers — 94 percent of its system — went without power for at least a portion of the period.

Utilities throughout Gloria's path faced an unprecedented public thirst for information, Wolff told reporters.

Another problem was psychological — many couldn't understand why restoration did not occur faster in the warm, sunny days that followed the storm.

"People might have been more understanding if they were snowbound in their houses or limited because of heavy rains, but the weather cleared up the night of the storm," he said.

"The broad-scale feeling (among executives of regional utilities) was that most companies were unaware of the demand for information."

Eastern Edison last week also held meetings with officials in its 17-community service area, which includes Cohasset, Hanover, Norwell, Pembroke and Scituate. The officials said the sessions opened the lines of communications that, hopefully, will avert the same situation in the future.

"Obviously, they're trying to be sure communications are better in the future," Hanover Selectman A. Donald Deluse said of the meeting. "And there's great potential for us to help each other out in future emergencies."

Ideal communications work both ways. While the utility knows how its system operates, local officials know about their towns. Putting the two factors together can avert many of the problems faced by both parties in the restoration last fall, he said.

In Hanover, "we couldn't get hold of them" to ask that power be restored to the transfer station, town communications center, police station and town hall, all of which lie along Rte. 139, Deluse said.

Between police and firefighters, Hanover has "90 extra sets of eyes that could have helped the utility in the restoration," he added.

Norwell Police Chief David Nichols suggested that Eastern Edison didn't have the manpower to deal with the emergency, but such storms only occur every 25 years on average, he said.

"I think communications will improve with Eastern Edison," he said. "With the liaison they have assigned to groups of towns, it will be easier to kick ideas and suggestions back and forth between the towns and the company.

Hopefully, the system will allow local officials to explain what is happening to residents. "If they explain it to us, we can explain it to someone else," Nichols said.

The chief also proposed that Eastern Edison and town employees use a standard complaint form so reports of power outages and downed wires won't be duplicated in the company's computer system.

To improve communication, Wolff said the company would provide a liaison for groups of towns and a bank of five telephone lines for the use of local officials to be activated during emergencies.

"The point is to keep the repair team isolated from a lot of questions," Wolff said. "The 10 people who staff this phone bank around the clock can get the information for officials without interfering with restoration efforts."

The company plans few changes in the way it restores power after emergencies, he said.

"Plant and equipment were fine," Wolff said. "We had plenty of wire and parts on hand — a lack of parts did not hamper restoration. The effort was considered satisfactory by experts who observed the process.

"We're not going to do too much differently in a future storm, but we do intend to communicate a lot better," he added.

Eastern Edison's total restoration in a little over eight days , which Wolff said cost "in the neighborhood of $3 million," compares favorably with that of Public Service Electric and Gas Co. of New Jersey, where 75 percent of customers were still without power five days after Gloria struck, he said.

In restoring power, Wolff said the company relied on methods and standards used nationally for many years. But the area's combination of dense residential neighborhoods and a high number of trees caused problems that were "a little worse than that faced by other utilities."

"It's totally defensible. We looked for the 'quick fixes' that restored hundreds of customers at a crack rather than using a piecemeal approach."

For the scheme to work, an electricity-distribution system must be repaired "from the top down" — from high-voltage transmission lines down to individual services, he said.

Wolff said the repair system not only reduces customer complaints, it is the best way to avoid the appearance of favoring one community over its neighbors.

"Suggestions of favoritism were made against out-of-state utilities, but no utility has any interest in favoritism," he said.

Like Nichols, the Eastern Edison executive said its computer makes more than one call about the same problem unnecessary. Wolff said customers could also save a lot of frustration if they stay on the complaint line, even if they spend several minutes on hold.

"Your call is in line to be answered," he said, "and if you hang up, you leave the line and lose your place."

Harassing the operators — or repair crews — can also result in a slower restoratiion, he added. He suggested that customers who call with complaints prepare their information before calling and leave out information that is of no use to the restoration effort.

"The communication system is as fail-safe as we can make it," Wolff said. "And out customers are waiting to see how we handle the next emergency."

Yellow blossoms to signify Cancer Society aid

Spring will be "bustin' out all over" in South Shore towns March 19 when bright yellow blossoms appear in local businesses as their share in the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Day.

"Stores, banks, clubs and individuals are buying our daffodils to brighten the day for friends, customers and employees and to help fund the American Cancer Society's cancer control programs," Robert Kane of Norwell, vice president of the Society's South Shore Unit and head of the Daffodil Day project. "Most will give out these blooms which are considered the flower of hope and thus symbolize the progress made in the treatment of cancer."

Joyce Kulhawik of WBZ-TV is honorary Daffodil Day Chair in the state-wide effort to raise $350,000. To give Massachusetts residents an early start on Spring, Ms. Kulhawik said that thousands of blooms will be flown in from the West Coast, all ready to open when they arrive at the local distribution points.

A Great Idea For IRAs

If your IRA is at a bank...

Who's getting rolled over? You, or your CD?

PaineWebber's GNMA Portfolio could make your IRA grow faster.

Compare the yield below with that currently offered on CDs and you'll understand why PaineWebber is recommending an IRA investment in its GNMA Portfolio.

Government National Mortgage Association mortgage-backed securities (GNMA certificates) are becoming one of today's most popular IRA investments because of their safety and current high yield. That's why you should consider PaineWebber's GNMA Portfolio for your IRA. It's a mutual fund that invests primarily in GNMAs and other government guaranteed securities.

Yield: 11.54%*
February 25, 1985 to February 24, 1986

Although past performance should not be considered an indication of future results and the net asset value of shares redeemed may be more or less than your original cost, PaineWebber believes the Portfolio will continue to perform better than many other IRA investments.

Don't let the banks roll you over with a low interest-rate investment like a CD. The minimum investment in PaineWebber's GNMA Portfolio is only $1,000 and subsequent investments can be as little as $100.

If you want your IRA to grow fast, call or send the coupon below for details and a prospectus. We believe this is the kind of IRA investment that'll have you saying, "Thank you, PaineWebber."

Federal EPA rejects Cohassets' funding appeal

A decision by the Washington headquarters of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reaffirming the denial of funding for a supplemental wastewater facilities plan, does not affect the current negotiations with the state to fund an alternative wastewater disposal plan, according to the chairman of the sewer commission.

The appeal to the EPA headquarters in Washington, D.C. was a necessary step in the town's three-year attempt to obtain funding for the supplemental facilities plan, DeSantis said. Town Meeting approved $30,000 to appeal the state EPA's denial of funding, but the actual appeal took only a portion of that money, according to Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis.

Essentially, DeSantis summarized, the EPA headquarters upheld the state's denial of 94 percent federal funding for small diameter sewers "by assigning them a low priority" on the funding list. The federal agency also denied the town's request to fund a combined design and construction grant for the proposed pumping station.

Instead, the state will fund the alternative sewer plan at 60 percent and will fund the Hull-Cohasset discharge pipe connection at 90 percent. Because the sewer funding is reduced from the town's original expectations, the area to be connected to the sewer line will be decreased from the original estimations.

The on-going negotiations between the state, Cohasset and Hull are being held to determine what areas of town will be sewered under the reduced federal funding levels. Once a plan is devised, it must be approved by Town Meeting.

DeSantis said the current negotiations with the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) is affected minimally by the federal decision handed down last week. "We had assumed that the Region I (Boston) decision would be upheld. But we felt we owed it to the community to go that final step," DeSantis said. "But this decision will not affect the negotiations now or what we feel are the funding constraints now. This just finalized our appeal process."

DeSantis said the commission members were not free to discuss the status of negotiations with the state in an effort to resolve the wastewater facilities plan. The state, Cohasset and Hull are involved in The negotiations which have continued for the past few months.

"Some parties to the negotiations have asked that all progress be kept confidential," he stated. "While we are in this phase of the talks, we've said very little about what is going on."

DeSantis said the talks have not preceded quickly enough to have a resolution to present to Town Meeting. A public hearing on the results of the negotiations would have had to be scheduled 30 days prior to Town Meeting.

Unless negotiations fall flat, DeSantis said a final decision will probably be brought to voters at a Special Town Meeting this summer. In the meantime, the commission will request $20,000 to make changes to the sewer plant. DeSantis said the plant must be renovated to allow it to meet the state discharge permit requirements.

Recreation director's annual report-1985

It is with distinct pleasure that the report of the Recreation Department is submitted to the residents of Cohasset.

During Fiscal Year 1985, July 1, 1984 through June 30, 1985, 6,268 individuals of all ages participated in various structured recreation programs, special events and activities.

As in past years we are indebted to the increasing number of adult and youth volunteers who have given generously of time, effort, and expertise essential to the conduct of many programs that budget restrictions would otherwise render impossible to operate.

Increased utilization of the Revolving Account Fund for self-supporting programs continues to allow the operation of a number of adult and children's specialized programs. During Fiscal 1985, a total of $10,600.60 was transacted through the Revolving Account affording us the ability to conduct a number of programs, ski trips, and lessons.

While there are strict criteria for use and qualifications for Revolving Fund programs, the programs conducted through the fund have no reflection on the tax dollar. In other words, the program participants alone pay 100 percent of the program cost via a per capita fee charge.

Not unlike the Revolving Account Fund, are direct vendor payments which also do not reflect the tax dollar. Approximately $8,000 of programs, trips, and special events were conducted in this manner during Fiscal 1985.

A number of programs are conducted through the Recreation Commission's Annual budget. Most programs have a minimal fee of $5 to $10 per participant, and in the case of children's programs, a 50 percent discount for subsequent children in the same family is offered in most cases.

Through program fees during Fiscal 1985, the Recreation Department turned over to the General Fund of the Town $7,318. Monies turned over to the General Fund from Recreation fee charges are not for future use by the Recreation Department. Rather, these monies are to offset the tax rate during the following Fiscal Year, hence, of benefit to each tax payer of Cohasset.

An additional sum of $19,198 was turned over to the General Fund during Fiscal 1985, via fees from Facility Permits. The figure $19,198 is $4,822 less than Facility Permit Fees collected during Fiscal 1984. There are a couple of reasons for this, the most apparent being the fee reduction from $10 to $6. Other reasons include dropping the age of senior citizen discounts from 65 to 63 years of age, and the actual number of permits issued during the Fiscal Year.

Annual issuance generally begins the first Monday in June, and continues through mid-July. The Fiscal Year ends June 30th each year, hence, the number of individuals who obtain permits before July 1, of each year have a direct reflection on the fees collected each Fiscal Year. Therefore, every two year period would reflect the average annual amount of fees collected.

Beechwood Play Lot construction was completed for the most part during the Fall of 1984. Use of the area has been greater than anticipated and additional work is currently planned to offer more structural support to the fence and basketball standards. It should be noted however, that any damage to the area was not due to vandalism but only over use.

In conjunction with this project many thanks are due to various Town Departments, and especially Harold Litchfield and the men of the Highway Department, Peter Laugelle and his Tree and Park men, and special thanks to Edward Poskus for his valuable assistance during the planning stages of the project.

Each year we find ourselves indebted to various individuals, town boards, and town departments for their continuing assistance and support. This year is not different and our gratitude is expressed to all those who have lent a hand aiding us with our projects and activities.

As previously indicated, volunteers of all ages have made a great number of programs possible that would not otherwise be possible if we had to rely on budget monies to conduct all programs. Each year there are well over 100 volunteers who come forth to help with various programs such as soccer, basketball leagues, special clinics, and numerous events. To give an idea of the impact volunteers have within our structure it would be necessary, if each volunteer were paid $5 an hour for services, to quadruple our total program salary budget.

The Recreation Commission, ever persistent in their cause of providing leisure services for all aged residents of Cohasset, deserve special gratitude for the volunteer service to our community: Current members are: Richard P. Barrow, Chairman Gerard A. Buckley, Vice Chairman Mary K. Muncey, Secretary, Robert G. Beggan, Terry E. Duggan, Alna L. Ekberg, and Peter G. Laugelle, members.

Individually, each member of the Recreation Commission brings with them special areas of expertise, interests, and knowledge. Collectively, they afford the Town of Cohasset a wide-spectrum of talent and input. They join me in thanks for your continued support of our programs, activities, and services. We will try to continue to meet the dynamic needs of our community and welcome feedback and input from any resident.

Respectfully submitted,
John M. Worley
Director of Recreation

Local Aid: The Mike Dukakis & Ray Flynn show

By David A. Mittell, Jr.
Special to the Mariner

Will Rogers used to say that when he found himself running short of material for his comedy routine "...I'd just read from the Congressional Record what Congress had been up to that day, and the audience would die laughin'." A similar richness of comic material awaits the reporter of Massachusetts politics; for just when he starts to fear that there is nothing of note to tell his sainted readership to be indignant or amused or confused about, our leaders treat him with a new farcetta to report.

Suburbia, which pays the bills in these parts, can reach for its wallet, because such a farcetta (like most farces it is a new adaptation, it is not really new) is at hand. For reasons that will become apparent, I will call the new farcetta "The Mike & Ray Show."

As the curtain rises we see three items from February's news juxtaposed. The first is word that a study by 50 Boston community leaders has found most of the city of Boston's 18 major departments to be deplorably run. The second is news that Mayor Raymond Flynn plans to give his highest-paid managers whose duty the impudent pundit presumes it to be to run those very 18 departments, multi-thousand dollar per year pay raises. The third (here's where you reach for your wallet) is a report that Gov. Dukakis proposes to penalize well-run, low-taxation communities (such as the South Shore's) at the expense of poorly-run high-taxation communities (such as Ray Flynn's Boston) when the state reimburses communities for coming cuts in federal Revenue Sharing.

According to Dukakis' dastardly (if you think I mean a stronger word you read my mind) proposal, some communities not now taxing their property owners up to 2.5 percent of assessed valuation would be reimbursed for as little as 10 percent of lost Revenue Sharing, while Boston and other cities now taxing at the 2½ percent legal limit would be reimbursed for 90 to 100 percent of their losses. "Those rich dastards on the South Shore can raise their tax rates" is, in short, what the Globe's candidate for President seems to be saying to us.

Several points need to be made. The first is that the liberal-conservative national debate about budget and priorities aside, the elimination of Revenue Sharing is a sound idea because its institution under Richard Nixon was an unsound one. Running municipal governments on revenues that miraculously arrive every year from Washington rather than on those distastefully extracted from local taxpayers is a modus operandi that only serves to protect municipal government from rigorous accountability. Much like the school of blindfish that wandered into a darkened underwater cave 300 million years ago sighted, and, through the total disuse of the organ of sight, evolved into the blindfish of today, our municipal managers need to practice accountability lest they forget how.

Secondly, in this instance and on this issue Mayor Flynn is not the heavy. To his credit, Flynn ordered the study that discovered that a mayor who spends most of his time preening before televison cameras does not an effective municipal manager make. Moreover, in making a dastardly, fallacious representation to the state to grant him and his city what rightfully belongs to you and your community, the mayor of Boston is only serving the interest of his own people as he was elected to do.

Thirdly, the correct "heavy" in this instance is a governor who suddenly seems to have learned nothing and forgotten nothing. Just when we thought we had Mike Dukakis at last fully understanding that there is nothing "progressive" about progressively increasing taxation, and understanding that Proposition 2½ saved Massachusetts, and by extension his own political career, he pulls a stunt straight from the Old Dukakis — a show the critics ran out of town in '78.

So it is that in an apparent game of "soak the rich," Gov. Dukakis proposes to punish communities that have successfully coped with Proposition 2½, communities that in their own judgment as self-governing entities do not see fit to tax their people to the legal limit. At the same time, the governor proposes to reward Boston for its mismanagement under two mayors, a reward that can only militate in favor of future mismanagement. After all, if you're Boston why change when there are suckers out in the suburbs paying the bills? If the suburbs don't like paying, tell the governor to throw them some "liberal guilt." That'll quiet them and keep the money coming!

One wonders what would happen if Ray Flynn's chronic hand out got cut off, I mean amputated above the wrist. Would a Boston forced to live within its means survive? Is it too much to hope that good management could turn a troubled urban municipality, the host to the tired and the poor, into a once again dynamic, attractive, growing municipality? Good management in Lowell did.

Fourthly, when "soak the suburbs," "liberal guilt," and other true but tangential factors are stripped away, we are left with a local aid formula that is said to contain 17,000 possible mathematical permutations. Why so many, good grief the Commonwealth only has 351 communities?! Why? Because, as Howard K. Smith once observed, "Complexity is to special interest what the briar patch was to Br'er Rabbit." A formula with 17,000 permutations is just the thing to give technocratic respectability to what the whole messy business really devolves to: a political payoff.

Yes, indeed, a political payoff. This most ethical of governors, who wouldn't take a dime if he found himself living at the Pine Street Inn, who discloses more about his personal finances than anyone but Norma Nathan cares to know, is, as it appears to one who has observed him for many years, paying off the mayor of Boston for once and future political favors. Moreover, this is not the first time. There is a perfect paradigm for the governor's behavior in this election year in his behavior in the election year of 1978.

That was the year in which the state handed Boston a multi-million dollar windfall said at the time to be intended for property tax relief, but handed over without strings attached. In short, it was a slush fund for the then Mayor Kevin White — who had been publicly lifting his political skirt in the direction of Dukakis challenger Ed King — to do with what he pleased.

What pleased him was to hire hundreds of people to work in his 1979 reelection campaign, after which the lately hired city employees were cruelly let go as the city faced bankruptcy. As to White's 1979 opponent Joe Timilty, he was a good guy, but he was overwhelmed and humbled thanks to your tax dollars and the Old Dukakis' poor judgment.

Now it is 1986, an election year in which the governor's main opponent is Greg Hyatt, or is it Greg Kite, I don't remember. It might as well be Vincent J. Celeste for the chances of success whatever his name has. But the New Dukakis will not be ambushed by the unexpected again, and it is for this reason and not any "concern for the poor" that the suburbs are getting soaked again.

It's political hardball, that's all, and you may be assured that if wild bears sleep in the woods Ray Flynn will see fit to work hard to make sure Greg Hyatt doesn't get to be governor; and that in 1987 state revenues that rightly ought to be returned to places like Braintree and Weymouth will be used to make Ray Flynn look good as he runs for reelection.

That's the Mike & Ray show, a show that ought to close but won't. It won't close, most fundamentally, because the "check and balance" are missing from Massachusetts democracy: we are a one and a half party state. The Democratic legislature and the Democratic governor feed at the same political trough, and Senate President Bulger aside, there is no one in the state who is both willing and able to stand up to this governor when he is wrong. That is why when Bulger and Dukakis are wrong together, as on the local aid issue, we all get soaked.

The local aid issue puts suburban legislators in the Dukakis Coalition in a "double bind." Do they represent their constituents on a pocketbook issue as they were elected to do, or is their fealty prepledged, as in Medieval times, to one man whom not for nothing they call "the Duke?" Your reporter will be watching with interest.

Finally, Howard K. Smith was right about complexity and its relations to special interest. Local aid is nothing more than a state form of federal Revenue Sharing, and it has all the same problems that accompany the divvying up of largesse in a world of self interest. It should be no surprise that the divvying up of state aid brings out the worst in political people, much as fighting over a will brings out the worst in normal people.

That is why it is probably always unwise for state government to attempt to be fairer than fair, in other words to distribute local aid on any formula other than on per capita basis. "You got so many people, you get so many dollars. Period." That is how it should be. For, as soon as we make it complicated we set in motion a process that inevitably produces political payoffs and grievous unfairness.

That Michael Dukakis and Raymond Flynn are both decent and honest men despite the hardball politics each is capable of playing, bespeaks the peril of corruption should men of lesser stature take control of the powerful offices they now hold. In short, while we need to close the "Mike & Ray Show" for the season, we also need to undertake fundamental reforms for all seasons.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

The sweet bird of youth can be a little cuckoo

By Claire McDonough
Mariner Correspondent

"That does it!" Breida stormed. "I'm going to have reverse plastic surgery and add 20 years to my appearance."

The Dragon looked up. "Why don't you ask Ma for twenty of hers?"

Breida glared at him. "I'm serious. Look at me. A mature adult. Sophisticated. Possessed of considerable professional expertise."

She paused a minute. "Okay, don't look at me while you're thinking about it. Close your eyes and listen to me."

Skip smirked. "When I close my eyes you sound like Shirley Temple doing a lead-in for "The Good Ship Lollypop."

Breida sighed. "And when you open them?"

Skip considered. "When I open them you look like Annie getting ready to sing "The Sun Will Come Out Tomorrow."

"Don't pay any attention to him," I soothed. "Lots of people are short and have dimples and big eyes. It could have just been a mistake when the waitress at Friendly's gave you a children's menu."

"It could," she agreed. "But today Q.E.D. sent me to a company to conduct a workshop on how to use their electronic scales."

I beamed. "I'm so proud of you."

"Proud shmoud," she groaned. "The lady at the front desk kept me waiting in the lobby for 20 minutes. She thought I was selling girl scout cookies."

"Maybe she was wearing her reading glasses," I suggested, aiming an under-the-table kick at Skip who was convulsed with helpless laughter.

"Sure," said Breida. "But what about the time I met Heather Brown in church and she patted me on the head and said, 'My goodness, Breida, you're getting so big. You must be 14 years old now.' "

"That's understandable," I said. "You were adorable when you were 14."

Breida stared at me. "It happened last month."

She threw her arms up in the air.

"Even Senator Golden. The night he was here for Pat's coffee he said, 'Breida looks every year of her age, which must be all of 14.' "

The Dragon put his paper down. "I remember that. Are you still trying to get someone to run against him?"

She shook her head. "I'm going to hold signs for him. Since then someone told me I look 12. 14's an improvement."

"Look," I consoled her, "right now you want to look your age or older, and that's understandable But trust me. In 20 years you'll be grateful for your youthful appearance."

"Right," she said sarcastically. "I can hardly wait. But how come you weren't this philosophical when I went to the Democratic Caucus and Mrs. McGilvray looked me up three times because she couldn't believe I was old enough to be a registered voter?"

"It didn't bother me a bit," I replied blandly. "Spilling hot coffee in her lap was nothing more than a regrettable mistake."

"Right," the Dragon nodded. "And you told her so just as soon as you stopped laughing maniacally."

"Look," Skip suggested, "maybe you're overlooking all kinds of career opportunities. Have you stopped to consider that electronics and short people are both very big in Japan?"

"You think I should apply for a job in Japan?" Breida asked.

"Sure. Then I can have your room."

"There are many advantages to being tiny, having enormous dimples, and being blessed with big brown eyes," the Dragon said seriously. "I suggest that you think about them."

"Okay," she agreed. "I'll do my thinking in the movies. I can probably get in for half-price. I'll go right after I corner the market on girl scout cookies."

World of Weather : Winter fades in March

By Warren Waitkus
Special to the Mariner

During March, storm systems affecting New England maintain many of the characteristics of the waning winter, while spring conditions become apparent. Slow moving areas of high pressure over Eastern Canada often stall northeastward moving coastal storms, causing copious amounts of precipitation to wreak havoc in both coastal and inland regions.

While we in New England have been paralyzed by blizzards and raging floods during the month of March, atmospheric terror strikes the South and Midwest in a different form.

Tornado activity increases dramatically in Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Texas, Oklahoma and Florida. For the contiguous states the average number of March tornadoes is usually about 43. On March 18, 1925, the infamous "Tri-State" tornado touched down, plowing a track of death and destruction through Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. The death toll reached 689, with 1,980 injured. And on March 21, 1932 a series of tornadoes in Alabama claimed the lives of 268 people while injuring 1,874 others.

March also brings the Vernal Equinox, or first day of spring, which occurs on the 20th at 5:30 p.m. This is when the sun crosses the equator and day and night are of equal duration. In the Northern Hemisphere, the increasing angle of the sun, coupled with longer hours of sunshine, results in a significant and welcomed warming trend.

In Indian folklore the March full moon is known as the Worm Moon. It will be full on the 25th and at apogee (farthest from the earth) on the 16th, while perigee (nearest the earth) occurred on the 1st. Incidentally, the moon is used to determine the date of the celebration commemorating Christ's resurrection. Easter is the first Sunday after the full moon that falls on or following the spring equinox; if the full moon happens on Sunday, Easter is celebrated one week later. This year, Easter is on March 30th. The earliest date possible for Easter is March 22nd while the latest possible date is April 25th. That is a difference of 35 days, which allows a wide variety of weather to occur.

For example, on Easter Sunday, March 30, 1823, a powerful coastal storm began moving into New England. It continued into the 31st with gale force winds and heavy snow. On April 11-12, 1841, heavy snow fell along coastal regions of the Northeast. Boston and New York City recorded 18 inches. April 1, 1923, saw a cold wave hamper the Easter Parade when temperatures plunged to record lows; N.Y.C. 13 degrees; Boston 13 degrees; and Bloomfield, Vermont, 12 degrees below zero. And Easter Sunday, April 18, 1976, was the hottest ever, with the mercury rising to 94 degrees in Boston and Philadelphia. Even Burlington, Vermont recorded a scorching 91 degrees.

It would be nice to have Easter on a fixed date, avoiding the tumultuous weather of late March and the early heat waves of late April. Attempts have been made to celebrate Easter on the second Sunday of April, but universal agreement among Christian Church leaders has never been reached. That day makes sense. After all, Christ was crucified, and slain on Friday, April 3rd, in the year 33 A.D.

FEBRUARY SUMMARY

For most of Massachusetts February was cold and dry. Several ocean storms threatened our area but passed to our east or just fizzled, leaving only a dusting at best. One storm, a sudden snow, left 4 to 8 inches south of Boston with the greater amount being reported on the Cape. The storm was forecast to miss us, but by 8 a.m. on the 11th, it began snowing and finally tapered off by late afternoon. It was the month's only significant snowfall.

Total melted precipitation, at my station in Marshfield, was 3.83 inches, .45 inches above normal. There were 10.5 inches of snow, 2.1 inches below normal. The maximum 24-hour rainfall was the 11th. Rain, .01 inch or more occurred on 10 days. Snow 1.0 inch or more, occurred on three days. Total precipitation this year has been 10.45 inches, 3.40 inches above normal.

The mean temperature was 23.7 degrees, 5.5 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 31.9 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 15.5 degrees. The low temperatures for the month were 4 degrees on Feb. 13th and 14th with a high reading of 47 degrees on Feb. 2nd. No records were broken.

There were five clear days, eleven partly cloudy days and 12 cloudy days. The average wind speed was 12 mph; normal is 13.8 mph. The highest observed gust was 39 mph on the 24th.

The normal heating season is from Sept. 1 to May 23. Some 24 percent of the heating year remains.

WINTER SUMMARY

According to information compiled by climatologist Robert Lautzenheiser, using Boston data, the meteorological winter of December, January and February were dry, cold and sunny with only 12.5 inches of snow. This ranks fourth in snowfall in 96 years. Precipitation was only 7.46 inches, which is 4.77 inches less than normal. Snowfall was 19 inches less than normal.

Due to a sunny January, sunshine totaled 56 percent of total possible sunshine for the three months, 2 percent more than normal. There were 21 clear days, 28 partly cloudy and 41 cloudy. The wind averaged 12.5 mph, 1.3 mph less than average.

MARCH OUTLOOK

Between March 5th and 18th a storm period is indicated. Two major storms should affect our region. The first, about the 8th-10th will probably bring all rain. Another storm about the 14th-16th could be all snow with strong northeast winds. Have a good day and a nice forever.

A thrifty Yankee approach - 'Seat of the pants' cooking

Almost every town in New England has one—the kind of cook whose casseroles are always the first to go at church suppers. Go to a club luncheon and in the kitchen of the parish house or GAR Hall there she'll be — seemingly tireless, friendly and comfortable to be with. Judy Lund calls herself a "seat-of-the-pants" cook, often making up recipes from what she has on hand — typical thrifty Yankee approach. With special touches and variations, her meals remind one of the food mother used to make, such as her

And seldom is there a New England town that doesn't boast a Main Street — a village that calls to mind a general store, a green where there may still be a hitching post or two and a little white church brooding over the moss-covered stones in the cemetery.

One of my favorite cookbooks is Cohasset Entertains a collection of outstanding recipes from members of the Community Garden Club and their friends. The last I heard, the book was in its fifth printing. Not only does it have distinctive recipes, it is divided into sections according to the seasons and suggests recipes and even flower arrangements geared to that time of year.

Jean Replogle introduces each section with a bit of local history, as in the spring section when she observes: "It was in springtime that the Hingham colonists brought their livestock to graze on the marshes of Conyhasset, because of the rich abundance of grass." One of the recipes in this chapter is from Elaine Hubbell, one you may wish to tuck away for Easter called

When grandma was a girl growing up here on the South Shore, there were farmhouses, rolling fields, cows out to pasture and chores galore for young and old alike. Shirley Oladell worked alongside her grandmother in the kitchen, helping to turn out the 28 loaves of bread that the family consumed each week and the 400 jars of canned vegetables and meat that were put by each fall.

They picked fruits and berries for preserves and jellies and made cheese and butter from the milk and thick cream produced on the farm. No topping in a plastic container purchased in the supermarket for dessert for her, but real whipped cream for this

The designated week is an international campaign of the Association for the Care of Children's Health. It is designed to familiarize health professionals, parents and teachers with the emotional needs of children and their families during hospitalization or in other health care environments.

For more information about the contest or the special events during Children and Hospitals Week, call Karen Harper, Child Life Specialist, at 337-7011, ext. 340.

Key car check-points examined at Jiffy Lube

Jiffy Lube at 49 Washington Street at the old Robo Car Wash in Norwell brought the concept of the racing pit-stop to everyday motoring in the South Shore area Feb. 15. At Jiffy Lube, a motorist can have 14-point servicing done and be on his way in only 10 minutes.

"We want the average motorist to have the advantages of a race car driver at a pit-stop. The driver pulls in, has his car taken care of with lightening speed, efficiency and safety, and is on his way again with minimum delay," said Dick Valentine of Hingham., president of Lube 495, Inc. and owner of the Boston area Jiffy Lube facilities.

It's appropriate that a race car driver should bring the pit-stop concept to auto service in the Boston area. Dick Valentine, a successful businessman and head of the multi-million dollar MBA business group in Braintree, races Trans Am cars as a business. His race cars are built and operated by his own company, USA Racing, Inc., based in Detroit.

Pennzoil, the motor oil Dick Valentine features at his Jiffy Lube locations, also has racing connotations. Pennzoil has sponsored many important racing efforts, including Rick Mears' recent Indianapolis 500-championship cars. The facility will also offer other name brands of oil such as Valvoline and Quaker State.

Joe Menendez, operations manager for Dick Valentine's Boston area outlets, described Jiffy Lube's procedures: "In coordinating the services, we have tried to reflect the pit stop concept. Every worker has a role to play — a contribution to make to the team."

Valentine's first South Shore facility was the Braintree Jiffy Lube opened on Quincy Avenue two years ago.

Jiffy Lube's area developer, Dick Valentine: "our expansion should be made alot easier".

Rte 3A businesses angered over sewer denial

The businesses of Rte. 3A thought they'd be cured. They were not happy to be handed a band-aid.

The businesses of Rte. 3A thought they'd get the big pipe. They're not getting it.

The businessmen of Rte. 3A thought their district would be sewered. They're not pleased with the latest plan which would bypass their district and provide them with on-site septic repairs.

About thirty business owners stormed a meeting of the sewer commission Tuesday night to protest the plan which would not provide sewer connections to their properties along Rte. 3A.

Many of the owners, including Peter Mullin of Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate, charged the sewer commission with going back on a promise made at the 1984 Special Town Meeting. At that time, an amendment to the Ward Plan was approved which required the commission to include sewers along the southern stretch of Rte. 3A.

"You struck a deal with us two years ago, and now you've gone back on your word," he said angrily. "This is an insult to the intelligence of us all. You are anti-business."

Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis repeated throughout Tuesday night's meeting, that the commission is not against the businesses of town. "We are willing to solve the town's problems under an affordable and intelligent program. It's going to cost us 30 percent instead of six percent, but that's a pretty good deal," DeSantis replied.

The chairman explained that Cohasset, Hull and the state are proceeding with talks which will culminate in a modified version of the Ward Engineering wastewater treatment plan. There will be a revised, smaller sewer service area within the new plan, he said, which is based on the priority of need and cost. The business district has been analyzed by Ward engineers who concluded the Rte. 3A belt is not a priority district.

"You will be addressed with an on-site program," he told the business owners. He also detailed a plan introduced by the governor which will address those town's whose plans, like Cohasset's, have

Town faces suit from private landfill

The owners of Cohasset Heights Ltd. filed a civil lawsuit against the town, alleging the water commission and board of health members have overstepped their authority and "misrepresented the true facts so as to create the false impression that the landfill operated by CHL has and is creating harm to the public water supply of the Town of Cohasset."

Anton Moehrke, the attorney representing landfill owners John and Paul Barry, will be filing motions in Norfolk County Superior Court to request a speedy trial on the matter. "We would like to have this case tried quickly," Moehrke stated. "It is of tremendous gravity to us and we would like this issue laid to rest. We want to know and the public should be very interested. Is Cohasset Heights actually polluting the public's water supply in Cohasset? Where is that documented?

"We are saying, as an indication of our good faith - let us have a quick trial on the matter. If we are polluting the water supply, a judge will make that decision. If we are wrong, we all will find out," he continued.

The civil action was filed last Thursday morning in Norfolk County Superior Court against the individual members of the water commission and board of health, including former member Marilyn Sweeney, and the town of Cohasset.

Depositions will be requested from the individuals involved in the lawsuit, Moehrke stated.

The lawsuit claims that the commission and board of health have imposed "wholly unwarranted" regulations and restraints against the commercial landfill.

It alleges that in 1976, the water commission stated in a letter "it is the unanimous opinion of the board that the proposed location (of Cohasset Heights) is not within the watershed of the Cohasset

'Cruisers' advance to state semi-finals

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

"Go ahead-Make my day."

Those are now the world famous words of Clint Eastwood in his role as the enforcer.

Likewise, Medfield dared Cohasset for a rematch and like "Marvelous Marvin Hagler," the end was predictable - 67-43 - as "Eddie and the Cruisers" won the South Sectional Division III championship for the second consecutive year.

The Skippers were due to face Lynn Classical for the Eastern Mass. Championship Wednesday night in Braintree with the winner ready to battle the Western Mass. winner Saturday (probably at the Worcester Centrum).

Medfield wanted Cohasset in a rematch and according to several Skipper players, Medfield players boasted the result would be different this year as these two teams met last year for the division championship.

Friday night in front of a packed gym at Brockton High School, Medfield tried everything psychologically to beat Cohasset. This included large boisterous crowds, band music, (Chicago "25-6-4") and Medfield was the first team on the court at the start of the game and at the half. The halftime talk by Cohasset Coach Ed Minelli was so long Cohasset didn't have time for second half warmups.

But it didn't make any difference. Cohasset won this game and will likely repeat as state champions because the team has too many offensive weapons, too many unsung heroes and plays awfully smart, error free basketball.

The starting five (James Creed, Tony Bogarty, Bobby Shultz, Bryan Edwards and Tom Larson) rarely make mistakes. Every play is run for a purpose; there are no wild fastbreaks and everyone plays a pressure, tight defense.

In this game, forward Tom Larson was the real offensive key as Medfield often stacked three defenders on Creed who still managed to score 15 points. With double and triple coverage, Creed dished off to Larson who was so open at first he missed some easy baskets.

But Larson dominated his defenders and his inside game was often spectacular, spoiling many a "Big Blue" (Medfield) comeback.

The other offensive key for the Skippers was the play of sophomore Bryan Edwards whose play at small-forward was praiseworthy. Edwards gives the Skippers a good rebounder who can shoot from the outside, (game high 18 points) and who can finish off the fast break.

Medfield started off quickly as Rob Hyland, Medfield's leading scorer(14 points) got off the mark early with some inside points.

But Creed tipped in a missed shot and powered inside for another basket and the Skippers led 8-4 with 3.59 remaining in the first quarter.

The Cruisers engines were beginning to purr.

A program sharing 'New Friends'

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

I sought my soul
But my soul wouldn't see.
I sought my God
But my God alluded me.
I sought my brother
And I found all three.

In three small sentences, this poem by a Cohasset man captures the essence of a program that has brought together people who might otherwise have never met.

The program is just two years old. In that brief time, many people received what money or power could never buy - a friend. But the New Friends program of the Cohasset Social Service League is much more than that.

As members of the program's volunteer staff insist, the benefits are not one-sided. In return, they have embarked on new friendships with all the lively conversation and caring that form lasting relationships.

Carolyn Houseman, the Social Service League social worker, explained the program began when League board and committee members discussed whether a need existed within the community. They questioned whether people in Cohasset, shut inside their homes because of age or health, desired conversation and support from a neighbor on the 'outside.'

"The program got off to a slow start the first six months," Houseman explained. "It took us a while to think this through and to set up a policy for the program."

Houseman, along with Social Service League nurse Mary Ann Hansen, began the process of

Warrant review discussions

Thursday, March 20 the Cohasset League of Women Voters will conduct their annual Warrant Review meeting. Discussions will concern certain warrants which league members have researched.

The meeting will begin at 9:15 a.m. at the Unitarian Parish House. Coffee will be served. For babysitting information, contact Jeannie Schneider at 383-6140.

Republican delegates

At a recent meeting of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, the following were elected as delegates to the Republican Convention to be held April 12 at the Worcester Centrum: Patricia and Raymond Buckley, 247 Forest Ave.; Jonathan R. Creighton, 18 Black Rock Rd.; George Marlette, 31 Rustic Drive; Lillian Murray, 28 Margin St.; Nancy O'Toole, 13 Haystack Lane, and Burtram Pratt, 75 Ripley Rd.

In addition to those elected, Republican Representative Mary Jeanette Murray and Republican National and Massachusetts State Committee woman Polly Logan will also serve as delegates.

Mooring fees due

Harbormaster Harry Ritter warns all mooring holders that the annual mooring fees are due by April 1.

It was decided at the December Special Town Meeting that all mooring fees will be due by April 1 "or the Harbormaster shall remove the mooring from the harbor."

In a letter to selectmen, Harbormaster Ritter said there are currently more than 200 mooring fees unpaid. Second billings are in the mail.

"If a mooring holder is negligent in paying his fee on time, there are plenty of people on the waiting list to take their place," he stated in the letter.

Liquor license hearing

An appeal to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission by J. Bildner and Sons has been rescheduled to March 27.

The Cushing Plaza store is appealing a decision by selectmen to twice deny Bildner's a wine and beer license. The hearing before the ABCC was originally slated for March 6, but because of the inavailability of legal counsel for the town and the store, the meeting was rescheduled.

Water commissioners request eminent domain article

There will be an article in the April 5 Town Meeting warrant requesting the town take by eminent domain the parcel of land known as Lily Pond Estates.

The cost of the 36-acre land-taking has not been estimated, although the water commission as sponsors of the article stated it would be "hefty."

Selectmen agreed Monday night to insert the article into the annual Town Meeting warrant, although they have withheld a recommendation until the advisory committe reviews the proposal.

The water commission voted at its meeting last Wednesday night, March 6, to request the article be inserted into the Town Meeting warrant specifically for "protection of the public water supply and to protect that supply from pollution."

Two developers, Edward Britt and Aaron Rosenberg, have proposed a development known as Lily Pond Estates for the 36-acre parcel surrounding the Lily Pond reservoir. The planning board denied the proposal last summer and outlined several reasons why their engineer recommended rejection of the plan.

Rosenberg and Britt appealed that decision to Norfolk County Superior Court.

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt told selectmen Monday night they were not "second guessing" the outcome of that court appeal, but they felt the watershed should be preserved regardless of the legal outcome of developers' appeal.

In the meantime, the commissioners have conferred with Town Counsel Richard Henderson about the completion of a property appraisal. While that is proceeding, a special tax title attorney will be researching whether the town holds title to several easements across the Lily Pond land off King Street. Pratt noted that if the town owns the easements, the price of the land "will be drastically reduced."

Selectmen authorized Henderson to proceed with the appraisal at a cost not to exceed $1000.

Although it will not be included as a part of the Town Meeting article, Water Commissioner Pratt discussed the possibility of funding the land taking via land bank legislation. He suggested that method be included within the wording of the warrant article.

Selectmen denied the request, saying there was not enough time before Town Meeting to research the land bank concept and gather input from all town boards. They suggested that omitting the appropriation method from the article would give the town a choice in determining how to fund the property purchase.

Pratt said the commission had talked with several town officials and abutters to the Lily Pond Estates land, and everyone concurred that the eminent domain taking was the proper course to follow.

"We feel this is a source of potential pollution," he told selectmen. "Any outbreak of a septic system in the development (which is proposed to include a common leaching field), or any temporary disfunction, would be right on top of our intake structure (at Lily Pond)," Pratt said.

"Think about what 15 homes or condominiums would look like surrounding Lily Pond. It is symbolic of public policy failure," he added.

The commission originally requested the land taking in July, prior to the judgement by the planning board and the subsequent legal appeal by the two developers. "Since that time, the purchase price has been going up," Pratt said, noting that further delays will result in additional price increases.

The appraisal of the property will be proceeding simultaneously with the tax title search. Both studies should be completed by the special Town Meeting tentatively set for June. At that time, Pratt stated, the commissioners will have a determination on the value and estimated purchase price of the property.

Commission doesn't want Scituate stable

The water commissioners have notified Scituate selectmen of their objections to a proposal by a Weymouth man to locate a horse stable on land abutting the Aaron River Reservoir.

Arthur Rowe of Weymouth notified Scituate selectmen of his intent to purchase 21,000 square feet of land across Clapp Road from the former Scituate landfill on the Norwell border. Rowe currently owns a parcel of land on Clapp Road, and plans to construct a horse stable on the combined properties.

Scituate selectmen reviewed the plans last week. Rowe told selectmen at that time he wanted to purchase the vacant parcel for about $1,500. The town had taken the land for overdue taxes in the 1950's and some of it was later incorporated into Wompatuck State Park, he told the Scituate officials. Selectmen there said they would not object to the purchase, if the town counsel, planning board and conservation commission approved the plan.

After reading about the proposed purchase in the newspaper, the Cohasset Water Commissioners wrote a letter to Scituate selectmen expressing their concern with the proposal.

"We are concerned that the proximity of this land to tributaries of the Aaron River Reservoir, and its intended use for horse stables, could impose an adverse impact on the water supply," the commissioners wrote.

been a low priority of the federal government for many years. Through a bond issue distributed for the four years, $168 million will be available to the communities, he said. The commission has requested participation in the program which would include 70 percent state funds, and thirty percent local monies.

"The message has sometimes been lost," he continued. "The purpose of the sewer program is to identify problems and six those problems. We don't want the medicine worse than the cure. We have to make sure the plan is within the financial capabilities of the community."

He noted if the town's funding appeal to the federal Environmental Protection Agency had been successful "we would have been funded at 94 percent and you would have been taken care of. Rte. 3A is no longer included, nor is much of the area originally included in the sewer area."

Atty. Charles Humphreys attended the meeting at which he represented some of the Rte. 3A business owners. "The sewer commission has had a horrendous time putting this (modified Ward Plan) together, but I am saying we have been summarily omitted again," he said.

"You, and most of the original sewer service district," DeSantis replied.

When attorney Humphreys questioned whether the commission would support a plan in which the business owners would contribute the cost of sewering their district, DeSantis replied, "maybe. I'd have to talk to the other commissioners."

"We'd have to look at the technical approach and contrast that to the on-site repairs." Commissioner Gary Vanderweil answered.

"You have a belief in on-sites that is not shared by many," Humphreys stated.

DeSantis replied that the track record of the Massachusetts central sewer systems has not been exemplary. Central sewer pumping stations have "killed Boston Harbor and our own experience spilled sewage into Hull gut," he said.

"The point is," Humphreys stated, "that you have a plan you are planning to run with. You seem to be saying to Rte. 3A that 'you're on your own' with possible on-site fixes. If their engineers say that on-sites are far inferior, that puts us at odds. It's up to the businessmen to consider what to do with that."

The commission chairman noted that the town had spent "good money on attorneys, lobbyists, and engineers and the end result (of Cohasset's funding appeal) is that some portions (of the original sewer service district) will be eliminated from the plan."

When questioned 'who drew the line' which eliminated the existing Rte. 3A business district from the sewer service area, DeSantis stated, "our engineers went in reverse priority to the highest priority to figure what we could do with X amount of dollars. Rte. 3A was always conceived as an on-site area. The amendment made it part of the sewer area."

DeSantis was referring to an amendment to warrant article 48 approved at the 1984 Special Town Meeting. That amendment allowed Ward Engineering to include the southern Rte. 3A businesses as part of the sewered district.

The commissioners argued the amendment allowed the inclusion of Rte. 3A only if it did not impair the project.

"We honestly feel on sound information that on the basis of need, it does not warrant 3A in the sewer service area. If there are problems, we will work with you on a solution. We feel the solution is not a sewer pipe," DeSantis said.

DeSantis unchallenged

The Cohasset Board of Registrars determined last Tuesday night that sewer commission candidate Michael J. Spirito did not have the necessary number of signatures on his nomination papers. That means incumbent F. Charles DeSantis will be the only candidate for the sewer commission.

According to Town Clerk Frances Marks, candidate Spirito did not have signatures of 50 registered voters, and was disqualified from the election by the Registrars.

DeSantis is running for re-election to a three-year term on the commission.

water supply and that such a facility, at that location, will have no detrimental effect on the water supply of the town." James Tyeryar, the original owner of the landfill, applied and received in 1976 a special permit to locate the commercial landfill on Crocker Lane.

The current landfill owners contend despite efforts by the water commission and board of health to close down the site, an engineering firm hired to investigate whether the landfill was polluting the town's water supply "concluded generally that landfill operations did not have an adverse impact."

The lawsuit stated the commissioners "have misapplied and misconstrued the studies conducted by CDM and made numerous public statements indicating that the studies by CDM (Camp, Dresser and McKee) support their allegations that the public drinking water supplies are being impaired" by the landfill.

The Superior Court petition requests that the commission be ordered to demonstrate why an order to close down the landfill issued Sept. 8, 1985, should not be enforced, that a preliminary injunction be issued against the commission's enforcement of its order to close the site, and issue a determination that the landfill is not within the watershed of public water supplies and that the landfill does not pollute the water supply.

The lawsuit filed by the Barry brothers requests that the Agreement for Judgement negotiated in February, 1985 between the landfill owners and the town through its former special counsel Charles Corkin, be upheld.

Atty. Moehrke contends that the Agreement for Judgement signed by the town in 1985 "constitutes a binding, valid, and enforcable settlement agreement between the parties. The Board (of Health) has refused to honor its legal obligations under the Agreement for Judgement and has dismissed the Special Town Counsel who represented it in negotiating the settlement."

The town dismissed Atty. Corkin several months after the agreement was negotiated, and subsequently hired Special Counsel Michael Leon.

Water Commissioner Peter Pratt noted that the town never ordered the landfill to be closed, as alleged in the lawsuit. "We asked Town Counsel Richard Henderson to look into our legal rights to have the landfill shut down last fall," Pratt stated. "This lawsuit is simply an attempt to dissuade our legal action against them.

"They are seeking a declaratory judgement to determine if they are polluting the town's water supply. Today, they are probably not. But we are interested in the town's future," Pratt added.

The town is currently pursuing three separate courses of action against the landfill, including a hearing scheduled March 20 before the Zoning Board of Appeals. The landfill operators will be requesting a special permit to dispose certain materials within the landfill. The building inspector recently ruled that landfill was overstepping the limits of a special permit issued to the operation in 1976.

The Board of Health will be scheduling a public hearing to determine the site assignment of the landfill. Lab reports for more than a year have indicated various levels of toxic materials found in the leachate flowing from the landfill's protective ground cover. Camp, Dresser and McKee are completing a study to determine what chemicals have been found in the leachate and the level.

In addition, the water commission last month requested the governor's intervention to close down the landfill, charging the state regulatory agency has failed to properly monitor the site. Gov. Michael Dukakis has referred the request to the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering for its review.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

CLOSING COSTS

When deciding how much money you'll need to buy a new home, you should consider all of the funds you'll need to bring to the settlement table. You've probably already figured out how much of a down payment you'll need, but don't forget about your closing costs.

Closing costs can vary, depending upon the costs of your financing and the time of the month when you settle. Your Realtor or the loan officer handling your mortgage application will be able to give you an estimate. It should include the points on your loan, private mortgage insurance (if your lender requires it), the title search, title insurance, attorneys' fees, and any transfer taxes or recording fees that your local government may charge. You will also have to prepay your first month's mortgage and, in some cases, property taxes, homeowners' association fees and hazard insurance. As a general rule, the closer to the end of the month you settle, the less cash you will need to bring to the settlement table. Because closing costs can add up to a significant amount of money, it's important to include them in your calculations.

If you have any questions about closing costs or any other aspect of buying or selling property, please call the professionals at HOME CENTER REALTY, HINGHAM. Our number is 749-8833, or you may drop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham.

Advisors and capital budget review requests

The Advisory Committee Tuesday night approved capital budget requests for Town Meeting for breathing apparatus for the fire department, a sidewalk roller and a four wheel drive vehicle for the highway department, and two new buses for the school department.

Capital Outlay Committee Chairman Ned Tebbits presented a prioritized list of capital budget requests for fiscal year 1987 and discussed the idea of issuing $500,000 in debt for the coming fiscal year.

$146,411 is available in the capital outlay budget. According to Tebbits, $500,000 could also be issued in debt. Tebbits said he and former Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer met with Executive Secretary Don Andrew last week to discuss the debt issue.

"If Cohasset issues a new debt each year," he said, "five years hence the ratio of total dates outstanding to the total town budget will be the same as it was last year."

Tebbits also stated that Andrews felt "we could approve two-thirds of these capital budget requests and not override Proposition 2 1/2."

He added that he did not consider Cohasset ready to override Proposition 2 1/2.

"People think they can have large requests without overriding 2 1/2," he said.

Tebbits prepared an outline of the major capital budget requests for next year. He graded each request and recorded his committee's recommendation with their reasoning.

He marked some items as recommended to approve, some to delay, some to reject and some to require more information.

For the sewer department, the capital budget committee recommended money for an emergency generator. The request was for $15,000, however, the committee commented that a second-hand one might be purchased for $15,000.

—$20,000 was recommended for repairs at the waste treatment plant.

—$32,624 was recommended to cap and seed three acres of the dump site for the Board of Health.

They backed a request for $25,000 for new breathing apparatus for the fire department. The request was also approved by the Advisory Committee.

For the highway department, both committees recommended $55,000 for highway maintenance; $17,000 for a new four wheel drive vehicle; and $12,000 for a sidewalk roller.

The budget committee recommended that the school department's request for three new buses be reduced to two. The advisory committee passed the recommendation.

Tebbits explained that about 64 percent of the cost of the bus would be reimbursed by the state through a depreciation table.

The budget committee also recommended that certain articles be delayed until fiscal 1988. Among them are a request for a shuttle bus for the Council on Aging, a new pick-up truck for the water department, a new cruiser and a new pumper for the fire department and one of the three new buses requested by the school department.

The budget committee recommended against supporting the following items:

—$21,000 for a computer for the water department. "We would prefer to see them using the existing town computer," Tebbits said.

—Money to do renovation on Milaken Field.

More information was needed before the committee makes recommendations on these items:

—The Hull tie-in with the sewer department

—Water department roof repairs

—Renovation of police and fire stations

—Addition to the Town Hall

Dormitzer offers resignation

In response to the approval of a 5.7 percent school budget increase, Advisory Committee Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer submitted her resignation from the committee this week.

In her letter, Dormitzer stated, "In voting last Thursday to increase the school budget by 5.7 percent, I believe the Advisory Committee lost sight of its primary responsibility to serve the best interests of the town as a whole, not the special interests of any single group or department."

Dormitzer added that while Cohasset was committed to an academically-strong school system, "many taxpayers will feel that the budget increase is unwarranted, given the declining rate of enrollment and low inflation rate."

She also stated that in particular, she opposed the addition of an Adjustment Counselor in the elementary schools, as an intervention into the private lives of families.

She closed by saying, "Because I cannot in good conscience support this budget on the floor of town meeting, I hereby submit my resignation from the Advisory Committee."

William Lean, speaking for the entire committee commented, "We're all sorry to see her go. She's done a very good job."

Dormitzer has served on the Committee for five years.

Cohasset Selectmen briefs. . .

Watershed reports

Selectmen authorized the Watershed Area Protection Committee to order the printing of 20 copies of the watershed engineering study.

The study has been completed by Camp, Dresser and McKee for $20,000. The report recommended an official boundary of the watershed land, and a management plan to preserve the property.

The planning board has scheduled a public hearing on the report's findings for March 26. At that time, the public will discuss the report and the zoning bylaw changes based on the findings of the CDM study.

Copies of the study will be available at the Paul Pratt Library, the selectmen's and town clerk's offices.

Resignation delayed

Selectmen decided not to accept the resignation of the town's archivist until they can discuss with him the reasons for the resignation.

Town Archivist David Wadsworth submitted his resignation to the board last week. He had served in the non-salaried position since 1979.

"This is an important job," Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said. "I think we should talk and find out what's behind this. He's done a good job and I'd like to know the background of this."

Sewer commission articles

Selectmen decided to wait until the Capital Budget Committee reviewed a request from the sewer commission before they decide whether to recommend an article requesting $20,000 to design repairs to the sewer pumping station.

The sewer commission has submitted three articles within the Town Meeting warrant, although one will be withdrawn from the floor of the April 5 meeting. That article requests the town appropriate funds for the preparation of plans for a modified Ward Engineering wastewater treatment plan.

Sewer Commissioner Ted Guild explained Monday night that engineers from the state Department of Water Pollution Control (DWPC) and Ward Engineering met in January, February and will meet in March to work out a modified sewer plan. Although the commissioners had hoped an agreement could be finalized before the April Town Meeting, that has not been done. Guild said the commissioners are optimistic an agreement can be completed before a special Town Meeting scheduled for June. Therefore, article 35 in the April warrant will be withdrawn from the floor, he said.

Article 36 is related to the previous article, he explained. It will request $20,000 to design repairs and modifications to the sewer treatment plant in order to meet federal EPA requirements. The plant has been in violation of federal regulations for several years, he said.

Commissioners Guild and Gary Vanderweil said if a modified Ward Plan is approved by the state, the modifications to the plant will not be necessary.

They requested the funding to design the plant modifications. If a new Ward Plan is not negotiated successfully with the state, the actual repairs to the Elm Street station will be requested at the June special Town Meeting, they said.

Selectmen argued that a design contract of this proportion is usually sent out for bid. The commissioners contend that Ward Engineering is familiar with the plant, and would be most capable of designing the changes.

"Once we have the authorization and reach an agreement with the state, we will cancel this request," Vanderweil stated. "This gives us a safety factor if we don't reach an agreement with the state. But we all feel there will be an agreement with the state in the future and we will not expend this money."

Selectmen decided to wait until the Capital Budget reviews the expenditure request, before they decide whether to recommend the proposal. The article will be included in the April Town Meeting warrant.

Selectmen decided to recommend a request to purchase a portable pump generator for $15,000. The pump will replace a faulty generator used mainly at the Pond Street pumping station.

Accountant appointed

Jo-Ann Whittemore of Bridgewater was named Town Accountant by selectmen at their meeting Monday night.

Whittemore, a graduate of Bridgewater State College, is currently the Town Accountant in Dover.

She was one of five persons interviewed for the position by selectmen Saturday morning.

Selectmen said the new accountant would begin March 31 at a salary to be negotiated.

Newtonville hydrant

Selectmen have taken under advisement a repeated request from residents of Newtonville Lane to install a fire hydrant on that street.

The residents of the Newtonville area off Atlantic Avenue requested the hydrant at last year's Town Meeting. Questions on funding and street betterments for installation have stalled plans to locate the hydrant along the narrow, hilly side street.

Residents Timothy Schramm and Geoffrey Nothnagle asked selectmen to support their latest effort to install a hydrant along the road. Schramm noted that of the 30 residents on Newtonville Lane, 23 of them are children or handicapped.

The residents urged support of the Town Meeting article to provide better fire protection in the neighborhood. Fire Capt. Mark Trask noted that a recent house fire on Newtonville Lane could have been much worse because of the difficulty getting fire trucks into the street.

He advised that a hydrant in the neighborhood would be the best method of providing better fire protection there. An alternative method would be to purchase large diameter hose for the fire department which could be used throughout the town. It would provide a portable 'water main' for firefighting, he noted.

Selectmen did not decide whether to recommend the article, and took the issue under advisement.

New Republican member

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee voted to elect George L. Marlette a full member of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee.

Marlette, formerly an Associate member, was also elected one of seven Cohasset delegates slated to represent the Cohasset Republican Town Committee at the Republican Convention which will be held in April at the Centrum in Worcester, MA.

Marlette, a Cohasset resident since 1974, was graduated from Derby Academy, Hingham, The Holderness School in Plymouth, NH and Gettysbury College, Gettysbury, PA. He is director of Government Relations for Associated Builders and Contractors, MA/RI Chapter, Burlington, MA., and is a student at New England School of Law, Boston, MA.

New Friends program encourages caring and trust seeking people within the community who would like to meet a 'new friend.' Once someone indicated an interest to meet a friend, a program volunteer would begin the bond.

There are now 14 volunteers who visit with 14 friends. They spend a minimum of three hours a month with their individual friend, although most visit much more.

"We take them to a doctor's appointment or help them do errands. One man likes to go to lunch with his friend. It depends on what they both like to do," one volunteer stated.

As another New Friends volunteer emphasized, the friend does not attempt to take over familial responsibilities or imply that the family has not served the needs of the shut-in. "There is no inference that the family is not doing their part," he stated. "We are just filling in the gaps. The family might be doing everything they can for this person. We are simply there as a friend."

Another program volunteer agreed. "For the most part, all of us have family. But we all need friends."

What occurs during a visit to their friend depends on what that friend enjoys. Some volunteers simply go to the house for conversation. Others take the friend shopping, or to lunch.

"One woman I call on is in her 80's," a volunteer explained. "Her favorite thing to do is to go to the nursing home and visit a friend there. This has a mushrooming effect on her. By visiting her friend in this nursing home, she is getting out into the community herself."

Houseman noted that for many of these people, their needs are not met by professional geriatic counseling services. What they seek, she explained, is companionship and conversation with someone they can trust.

"They can be in a wonderful family situation, yet be alone for a significant part of the day," she stated. "Having a loving family around us doesn't always meet the needs of having a friend."

Another volunteer described his visits with an elderly gentleman. "The chap is housebound, but his wife realized and was sensitive enough to know that although she was there, he needed to talk with a man. I go to visit him and we talk about current events. When I'm there, his wife says, 'he's all yours.' It's wonderful that his wife realizes he needs that time to talk with another man."

In their conversations, the program volunteers constantly referr to the people they visit as their 'friends.' There is nothing artificial about the feelings they possess for these people.

"It's been a real door-opener for me," one volunteer said. "In one case, there's a person I call on who isn't mentally right. But occasionally there's a break through and you can sense the trust she has in me. Another woman I visit has become a very good friend. She recently gave me a book about Holland. I think that I wouldn't have this experience of knowing this person if I hadn't joined the program."

"I enjoy people to begin with," another volunteer stated. "Some day I may be in the same position and I would certainly enjoy receiving a visit from a friend. The man I visit with is a 100th-generation Cohassetite and he tells me the history of the town.

A second volunteer agreed. "I'm new in this town and I need new friends just as much as the 81 year-old woman I visit with. It's a beautiful experience to visit with these people. I get a lot of love in return."

The age of the New Friends volunteers is as varied as the people with whom they visit. There is a 26 year-old male volunteer who is as enthusiastic as the senior citizens who participate.

"I've only had one visit so far, but it was very wonderful," he said. "The man was so glad to see me. He really didn't know why I was there until he was well into the conversation. It was a very heartfelt visit."

He continued, "I love being with other people. This man I visited told me all about his childhood in Hingham. It was like taking a trip with him - it was better than a history lesson. There was no age gap, so I could be his friend."

The New Friends program is non denominational and is not affiliated with any local church. The volunteers agree that along with the sense of helping others, there is an emotional exchange between the partners.

"We have learned to be good listeners, and to have these people share their experiences with us," one volunteer said. "How our time together is spent depends on the person."

Another volunteer explained, "One man I visit with recently returned from the hospital. Since he's been home, he hasn't been that talkative. So I do most of the talking - about football games and the Red Sox. I guess he's listening."

Participants in the program note there are no set rules requiring specific functions and responsibilities of the volunteers. "We find out what they want to do. We look into their interests. Often, their interests are similar to ours, and it's very easy to have an active conversation," one volunteer said, noting that many of their friends are not mentally disabled and are capable of continuing an intelligent, thought-provoking conversation.

"This is a program with no costs," Houseman explained. "But we are meeting the needs of people who seek a friend. We can use our own experiences to help these people."

Although other communities have expressed an interest in duplicating the New Friends program in their towns, this particular program is for Cohasset residents only.

The Social Service League is seeking more volunteers to participate in the program. And if anyone knows someone who could benefit from a 'new friend', they should contact the Social Service League at 383-0771.

"We all need someone to talk to," one volunteer confessed. "I have eight children, but I still need someone to talk with. I get so much enjoyment, so much love from this program. It is something I don't get anywhere else. When people talk about themselves to someone who is listening, it is fascinating."

☐ Our State Representative finally "filed her report" about her trip to Florida, and here it is...Mary Jeanette and Phil finally relaxed, something Phil (and all of us) says that she doesn't know how to do. They went to Neil O'Brien's place in Cape Coral, Florida (where Pauline Keating made sure Mary Jeanette hit all the shopping malls). While they were down there, she saw many of her constituents, including Joe and Marie Dolan (with Charlie Dolan and Denise Dolan and her pal) and Joe and Mary Conroy. Fred Petersen, Edith and Mardi Petersen joined them for lunch one day, and Mary Jeanette and Pauline visited the John Sadlers in Cape Coral, too. The Murrays headed for Englewood for several days with the Petersens, then back to Cape Coral (they stopped in to visit Anna and Carl Sestito in Sarasota while en route). The Murrays' sons were included in the travelogue, too. Their son, Nate (remember what a great drummer he was?) liked free diving and their son Philip Jr. was 82nd air bourne...would have been proud of their mom (who dislikes airplanes) left Fort Myers on Jan. 28 (a very unfortunate national tragedy on that day) and were assigned to one gate, went on board, then were asked to leave the plane and proceed to another gate. Three hours later they boarded the second plane. As Mary Jeanette said, "A plane that carried 270 passengers asked her about the trip! Finally, one more little "trauma" for the Murrays...Lil Murray went into Boston to meet her parents for a 7:30 arrival, which was delayed. After trying to reach their son to tell of the delay, Mary Jeanette tried the Curley household, where Ann Curley almost refused a collect call (Mary Jeanette will now get that telephone credit card, she vows). There was no way of catching Lil, who was at the Delta desk wondering if Mom and Dad had left the country, but she got in touch with Kathy and everything was under control. During the wait for her folks, Lil ran into Bob O'Hayre Sr., and Bob O'Hayre Jr., who were returning from the Super Bowl game. The rested (?) world travellers are home safely, and our State Rep is back on the job...if she ever decided to retire, she could become a tour director with great ease, I'm sure!

☐Congratulations to Mrs. John (Corinne) Cahill of No. Main Street, on being honored at the Annual National Conference of Christians and Jews, held in the Dorothy Quincy Suite, Boston on March 5. Honorable Mention Award was presented to Corinne by Dr. Daniel Perlman, president, Suffolk University, in recognition of her volunteer work for 20 years in Cohasset Red Cross Bloodmobiles, 10 of which she served as chairman (she is continuing to serve as Blood Day Coordinator). Approximately 10,000 pints of blood were donated during this period, something for which Corinne and Cohasset should be very proud! Alfred Odermatt had the privilege of attending the presentation, and was extremely proud of Mrs. Cahill!

☐Janice (Nardo) Batts is working on a project that is sure to get a lot of results from you Cohasset gals...she is spending her days in the CHS library, looking up former CHS grads, to find out what all of the women have done with their lives, what they have contributed to our society, and where they are in the working world today, She would love to hear your story for her research paper, why not give her a call at 383-6100. She may be compared to Robin Leech, who is the announcer for "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous"...

☐Congratulations to Debbie Seavey, who won the Grumbacher Gold Medallion in the South Shore Art Center's All New England Juried Exhibit, New Beginnings. Her work is currently hanging in the Center's gallery.

☐That's the news from here, give me a call with your adventures so that all may share.

Cohasset Candidates Corner. . .

Mitman appoints committee

Cliff Mitman, a candidate for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, announced the appointment of Robert J. Ciciotte as Chairman and Robin M. Lawrence as Treasurer of his Campaign Committee.

Mitman, who has served one term on the Board, filed his re-election petition prior to the March 3 deadline. He is a Vice President of Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, international consultants to management, where he has worked for the past 22 years in Philadelphia, New York, and, since 1969, in Boston. He resides at 118 Beach Street with his wife Millie and three children.

He served three years in the U.S. Navy and is a graduate of Yale and the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School.

His campaign will emphasize his experience as a member of the Board for the past three years and the business and people skills he has developed while working with both large and small companies as a consultant.

"To be an effective Selectman requires a time commitment and the ability to deal firmly but fairly with the issues facing the Town," he said, "and I have met these requirements during my first term." He added, "I am looking forward to moving ahead on the unfinished business that will determine the type of town Cohasset will be for the future and for our children."

Anyone interested in participating in the re-election effort should contact the Chairman or Treasurer. Campaign contributions can be sent to—P.O. Box 252 in Cohasset.

Meet Gallagher

Two hundred people were present to hear selectman candidate James Gallagher speak March 2 at the George M. Mealy Post.

Correction on date—There will be a candidate's coffee at the home of Janet Ditmar, 227 Forest Ave (383-9746), Thursday, March 13, 7:30 p.m., instead of Wednesday, March 12.

During tenure on the Planning Board, Cotton edited the new Topographic map series, road map, and Flood Plain and Water Protection map and prepared modifications of the Zoning Bylaws and Board regulations.

"The pressure for more housing is widespread and intense, and is being felt in Cohasset," Candidate Cotton stated. "This is especially so in three areas; drainage, low income housing and traffic. Unless all of these are thoughtfully dealt with Cohasset stands to lose the semirural character that helps to make it the appealing place that it is. All of these issues call for a close working relationship between the Planning Board and other town boards.

"We have become conscious of the importance of drainage in a town that has an unusual amount of ledge and wetland. Every shift of run-off, whether fill or impervious cover, affects more than just the immediate area. Every square foot of cover means that much additional run-off and beyond that much less space to absorb run-off," he added.

According to Cotton, "We can no longer overlook the requirement for low and moderate income housing. The need is genuine; we are called upon to do our part; the state is in a position to force the issue, and it is ready, willing, and able to do so. A recent statute makes it very attractive for independent developers to provide low and moderate income housing on inexpensive, marginally buildable land by pre-empting local regulations. Development will take place. It is for all of us to insure that it is orderly.

"Traffic involves more than the motorist. To some extent, we are all pedestrians, as well, and most of us live where the traffic goes by. Beside safety and access, there is also the business of quiet enjoyment of one's town and home. The increase in traffic calls for thoughtful consideration," he added.

"None of these issues need become problems if we can figure out how to deal with them. We should be able to by working together - not only the town's boards but the town's people," Cotton said.

"Those men who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

Gjesteby stresses experience

"Cohasset residents have always taken a strong interest in their town and I am learning a great deal about their concerns," says Martha Gjesteby, candidate for selectmen.

Martha has been visiting the neighborhoods and has listened as her fellow citizens discuss solid waste problems, water quality and town planning. "I think this is important," she underlines. "Whether it's the dog control laws or financial management, I want to know what they are thinking."

Many of the issues faced by the town are very complex and Martha underlines the need for experience in evolving effective solutions. "I feel my past work for the town has prepared me for the important office of selectman," she says. Martha has served as an elected planning board and two-term school committee member, as well as an appointed capital budget committee member.

As Metropolitan Area Planning Council representative since 1981 and alternate from 1977, Martha has continually provided boards in town with information such as a recent solid waste study, a State of the Region report and a new pavement manual. A review of the agency's involvement is included in the town's annual report.

Martha has announced as her campaign chairman John Doherty and treasurer, Herbert Crehan.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

DRUG-RELATED PROBLEMS
One difficulty with muscle relaxants is that they can interfere with normal activity. If one takes such drugs while confined to bed, they can be very comforting. However, for patients who want to go about their daily business, muscle relaxants unavoidably cause troublesome general weakness. This weakness may be little more than a nuisance leading to some unsteadiness on the feet or an annoying sense of fatigue. It can, however, be more serious. By relaxing the abdominal and back muscles that normally help support the spine and upper body, back disorders may become prolonged or more severe. Even relatively small doses of tranquilizers and muscle relaxants can cause drowsiness, dizziness blurred vision, rashes and itching. Chiropractic does not employ drugs.
Chiropractic is a drugless, knifeless and natural approach to dealing with the source of your difficulties. Chiropractic enlists techniques which allow Mother Natures natural healing processes to take place. These instructions are transmitted from the brain to every part and organ of the body. In a natural fashion most difficulties can be addressed so that you may benefit from a state of total well-being. For more information on how chiropractic may serve you, we invite you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Many insurance plans accepted as well as Workers Comp. cases.

Pride in students

With all the talk of doom and gloom about the future of our children, it is so pleasing to discuss their many qualities.

Townspeople have risen from their winter slumber to follow the winning antics of the high school basketball team. Eddie and his Cruisers have dominated the winter sports scene as they devour one opponent after another.

This is exciting - for a small community to follow the lead of a small group of teenaged boys. We have followed them across the state, to Virginia, and now onto to the league finals.

Ard we must mention the success of our other high school teams. Cohasset High School has produced a score of winning teams this year including our football, field hockey, wrestling, soccer and ski teams. We are proud of all our students who have kept us on the edge of our seats throughout this year's competition.

Traveling from sports to other activities, we must call attention to Cohasset's high school drama festival entry. If you haven't yet seen 'Candid,' March 19 will be your last chance to view the play in Cohasset.

The play, written by a Rhode Island school teacher, will be performed March 19 at 8 p.m. at the high school. Proceeds from the performance will help fund the students' excursion into Boston for their finals competition the following day.

This is a realistic portrayal of modern day youth and their perspective of the family. It is moving, sad, and funny as it cuts through our emotions. As director Ron Emmons stated, "it hurts."

It's truly amazing to think little Cohasset High School has the abundant talent necessary to carry out such a sterling production. Other schools with twice our student enrollment never came close to the performance quality of CHS.

The Festival judges have come to expect such fine productions from Emmons and his students. The audiences have expected no less.

When we talk of our youth in derogatory terms, about the drugs, the rebellions and the suicides, we must not forget their talents and enthusiasm.

An entire town has followed the exploits on the basketball court as our team rips through their opponentswithsuperlative talent.While other teams have tried to distract them with taunts and jeers, our Cohasset kids have retaliated with a winning score. They are loaded with confidence and talent, and we couldn't enjoy a bunch of teenagers more.

And we couldn't respect the talents of our youth more than we do the six-member cast of "Candid." Under the direction of Emmons, we have enjoyed watching their concentration and understanding of a meaningful script.

We wish them all the best of luck in their upcoming competitions and future challenges.

NEWS ITEM — All Mariner towns slated to be bumped from established 617 area code in two of three New England Telephone Co. proposed realignment plans. In a third plan, three coastal towns would escape the drastic change. South Shore Coalition and State Sen. William Golden vehemently urge NETCO to include affected towns in new 617 area

Dormitzer explains her resignation

(This letter was sent to the Advisory Committee from Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer regarding her resignation. Ed.)

Dear Advisory Committee Members:

In voting last Thursday to increase the school budget by 5.7 percent, I believe the Advisory Committee lost sight of its primary responsibility to serve the best interests of the town as a whole, not the special interests of any single group or department.

We all agree that Cohasset is committed to supporting an acdemically strong school system that encourages the intellectual development of all students. In general, however, it is difficult to tie the increases requested by the School Committee to any planned educational goals, and many taxpayers will feel that the budget increase is unwarranted, given the declining rate of enrollment and low inflation rate. To support the budget, what is needed is a set of well-defined educational goals, a strategy for achieving them, and a metric for measuring the success of this strategy.

In particular, the $31,089 requested to create the position of adjustment counselor cannot, in my opinion, be justifed educationally, socially or financially. Along with many other people, I do not think the town will tolerate the potential intervention of an adjustment counselor into the private lives of families. In addition, given the employment record of the school system, once a position is created it tends to persist indefinitely, no matter how effective or ineffective it may be. The long-term costs inherent in this position will severely strain the budget in the future.

Because I cannot in good conscience support this budget on the floor of Town Meeting, I hereby submit my resignation from the Advisory Committee. Vice Chairman Fred Koed can take over as chairman until the committee reorganizes at the end of June.

Jacqueline Dormitzer,
Chairman

We should have gone back to reverse

To the Editor:

Once I asked my mother how she had liked a speaker she had gone out to hear. Her reply was "It wasn't too bad. But he sure missed a number of dandy places to stop."

Cohasset had a number of dandy places to stop and think and reverse course to the Metcalf and Eddy plan (to build our own sewage treatment plant), while the funding was still high and we'd suffered only a little price escalation. The most foolish failure was two years ago, when the selectmen refused to support an article which would have let town meeting discuss whether to stumble on or to rethink M&E.

And of course, Mr. Van Gestel, counsel for the Sewer Commission (and a non-resident), warned us solemnly that the town must vote "yes," to proceed with the Ward Plan, because to vote "no" would result in a heavy fine. Nonsense—if the town had voted "no," with a declared intent to reconsider building our own plant, the state would have given a reasonable reprieve. (I'm sure this is so, because I just read it again on one of the flyers I was handing out in the cold dark night outside).

Some of our stop-growth fanatics, like the one that is still unhappy because we built an excellent water treatment plant for our drinking water, will keep on hoping that the DEQE will tolerate our numerous failing and virtually irreparable systems, and would condemn parts of town to an unhealthy situation as long as we can stay rustic.

Those who worry about "the potential to pollute our beaches" from an ocean outfall beyond Pleasant Beach (an outfall from a plan intended to have plenty of capacity and equipment redundancy and hence unlikely to fail) wouldn't mind discharging more into our enclosed harbor, in addition to the spongy messes in many yards that they'd be willing to tolerate.

Is there an article proposed that permits voting a return to common sense? No, just articles that suggest fixing up the old plant (a ploy that won't work) or cobbling up a reduced sewered area plus a pipe to Hull (a stop gap for a very few years at best, even assuming that a reasonable contract can be consummated with Hull). Where are all the farsighted public spirited citizens?

CHS dramatists gear up for final competition

Members of the CHS drama festival cast include Andrew Glasfeld (at head of table), clockwise, Jenna Emmons, Glen Hochkeppel, Erin Browne, Karin Anglin and John Kuntz. (Paula Brackett)

"We made the finals." That was the happy message from Director Ron Emmons following Saturday's performance of "Candid" at the state drama festival.

The Cohasset High School cast will now proceed to the state finals at the John Hancock Hall, March 20. The top two finalists from 15 statewide entries will be selected as winners to proceed to the New England Regional Drama Festival.

Cohasset hosted the first two rounds of competition in which schools from all over the state competed. In the first round, the entire six-member Cohasset cast was selected as members of the All-Star cast. After Saturday's semi-final competition, the four core members of the cast were awarded All Star honors.

Before 'Candid' hits the Boston stage, the cast will make another brief appearance in Cohasset. The one-act play by Michael Scanlan will be performed Tuesday, March 18 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School. Proceeds from the performance will go towards the students' trip into Boston the following day for their competition. Tickets will be $2 for adults and $1 for students. "It's a convenient way to see the play for those who can't get into Boston for the competition," Emmons said.

Saturday's competition at the old John Hancock Hall on East Berkeley Street will begin at 6 p.m. with the Cohasset production. There will be several other 'strong' performances by many other high schools, Emmons predicted, including Cambridge, Brockton and the Bromfield School at Harvard.

Along with Cohasset, the only other area schools to be selected for the finals are Norwell, Plymouth and Silver Lake Regional High School.

Looking back to Saturday's production, Emmons noted it was "a particularly good performance considering the lack of rehearsal time we had when Andrew had the flu. March 20's production will be a lot sharper."

Andrew Glasfeld portrays the central character in the play, T.J. It is through his thoughts, dialogue and through his talents as a photographer, that T.J. conveys his feelings about the dissolution of his family. It is a poignant, funny and thought-filled play, according to those who have seen the production.

Other cast members include: Glen Hochkeppel, Karin Anglin, Erin Browne, John Kuntz and Jenna Emmons.

The following includes comments made by the Festival judges at the conclusion of Saturday's performance:

"Bravo . . . Intense, just right, pulling us into the family situation from the moment they sit at the first dinner. You are doing terrific work.

Elaine Koury
director, Inner City Energies

"A beautiful show. . . extremely well done. Palatable tension at the first family dinner. Excellent interaction between characters."

David Zucker,
director, Young Audiences

"Very little I can say except superlatives. Congratulations to the director, actors and crew. It is most impressive to take the material and make it meaningful, poignant and sad. Congratulations on a beautiful production."

Sherwood Collins
Chairman, Drama Dept. at Tufts University

According to Emmons, "I don't want the kids to think that winning is the only thing here. This is a very special play. I would love to win the finals and bring this to the New England festival in the summer. We are really going into Boston with a strong play. It's a show that impresses the actors and my peers about the work we are doing."

Cohasset's Seahawks lose semi-finals to state champ

The Division Four Champion Seahawk Squirt B hockey team skated its way to the semi-finals of the Massachusetts State Championships before being eliminated 4 to 2 by eventual state champion Woburn. The 16-team Championships were on March 7 to 9 in Springfield, and matched winners from the 10 Massachusetts amateur hockey districts along with entries chosen at large to determine a state champion.

The Seahawks overcame North Andover 6 to 2 in their first tournament game. Steve Pineault's play in goal was one big reason for the victory along with goals by wingers Geoff Guilfoyle, Tom Champagne, Pat Ford, center iceman Tim Corkery, and defensemen Sean McGowan and Tim Getto.

The young hawks really hit their stride in their next game when they blasted Tri-City 8 to 0. Sean Brebbia's heads up play and hustle resulted in three goals. Chris McGuirk, a firey playmaker throughout the tournament, got a goal and two assists, while Champagne, Corkery and Getto added goals and defenseman Mike Foley recorded his second assist of the tournament.

The third victory for the Blue and Gold came at the expense of Medford. In an excellent two-way game, the South Shore skaters took an edge when Champagne scored on a rush up the right side near the end of the first period. It remained a nail-biting 1 to 0 until well into the third period when Brebbia fed McGuirk for a score. Guilfoyle's no-angle goal came minutes later, but the insurance was welcome as the scrappy Mustangs fought back scoring one goal and keeping great pressure on Pineault in the Seahawk net until the final buzzer.

The three wins for the Seahawks made them champions of the Southern Flight in the tournament and earned them a spot in the Squirt B final four. Traditional power Woburn was the next opponent. An experienced group with a half-dozen more skaters in uniform than the Seahawks, they came out fast, jumped to a 2 to 0 lead, held off a Seahawk comeback that brought the score to 3 to 2, and went on to beat the Seahawks 4 to 2 and eliminate them from the tournament.

After giving up two quick goals, however, the Seahawks toughened up on defense. Getto and his defense partner Will Robinson smothered Woburn breaks time and again as did the other defense pair of Foley and McGowen (who enjoyed his most effective game of the year). Before the end of the second period, the momentum had shifted in the Seahawk direction and first Brebbia scored on assists from McGuirk and Sean Merrick and then Getto whistled a goal in from the point on another McGuirk assist. Good goaltending and position defense bailed Woburn out, however as the orange and black were able to turn the play back in their direction and even add a final score. The Seahawks are based at the Cohasset rink and encompass skaters from Marshfield, Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset and Hull.

Peek at the Past

We had three correct guesses for last week's photo. Robert Davenport gave us a detailed report, including a view of what he says is now the home owned by Keith and Paula Knowles at 15 Border Street. A.J. Antoine Jr. was correct, along with Fred Koed of Pleasant Street, who noted the name of the print is "Head of the Cove." The photo depicted the Cove from Border Street, showing the Lawrence, Bates, and Tower wharves. The oil painting by A.W. Moore is currently in the kitchen of the Lothrop House on Summer Street.

A.F.S. trip

The High School A.F.S. club has just returned from a very successful exchange visit to a High School in Mount Hebron, Maryland.

While there, the students and George Foster, their advisor, stayed with the Mt. Hebron students in their homes.

Our students had the opportunity to attend classes in their High School. They experienced life in a rural community with a county government set up. Their other activities during their stay included a day trip into Washington, D.C.; a day trip into the city of Baltimore, and a shared covered dish supper by all students and families involved in the exchange.

The students from Mount Hebron in Maryland are expected to arrive here on April 11 to sample life in our New England town.

This exchange of students is part of the A.F.S. High School club yearly calendar. It is designed to help our young people have a better understanding of people from different backgrounds and show them the variety of lifestyles and needs of the people in our own country.

Osgood meeting

A parents' meeting was held Friday morning, March 7 at the Unitarian Parish House, co-hosted by Osgood principal, Jack Creamer, and PSO Reps. Sue McNamara and Shelley Weier.

Advisory committee member Jane Goedecke opened the meeting by saying that the advisory committee and the school committee had reached an agreement on the recommended school budget for 1986-87.

School committee member Diana Kornet suggested the importance of all parents of school-age children attending Town Meeting April 5 to support their plan.

The topic of curriculum enrichment was introduced next. Enrichment coordinator Dorothy Wondolowski, who works with grades two through 11—some 265 children—said she thinks of her job as "academic parenting." She explained how she acts as a liaison between the three Cohasset schools, functioning as a sort of curriculum coordinator. All parents present were happy to hear Ms. Wondolowski say that she thinks "all children are gifted."

Other Topics discussed were: the need for a qualified elementary school counselor; the results of the PSO child care survey; the handicap awareness program, headed by Taffy Nothnagle and Karen Coyne; the proposed redecoration of the Osgood teachers' lounge; the successful publication of the third grade "Osgood Scoop" newspaper and the forthcoming "Osgood's Own" literary magazine.

The meeting closed with everyone in agreement on encouraging all parents to attend Town Meeting.

Our school committee and advisory committee have put together a good package for the school system. Let's back up their recommendations.

McNabb's policies

John K. McNabb, Jr. a candidate for selectman, called for management improvements in Town Hall to improve the delivery of town services and to protect the value of property tax dollars paid to the town.

"The selectmen need to improve their management of town government," said McNabb. "Improvment is needed in the areas of legal fees, personnel policies, budget policies, and in program planning for town departments."

We need to get a better handle on our legal costs," said McNabb. "We now spend over $100,000 a year in legal expenses. I think the residents and taxpayers of Cohasset should have a detailed report every year of legal expenses, what cases were handled, and the status of every case still open."

"Personnel policies could be more consistent," said McNabb. "Town employees deserve to be treated fairly and with respect. The town should reexamine its personnel policies toward both union and non-union town employees. The selectmen should quickly resolve the present impasse over the police department contract."

"I think the selectmen could better handle their approach to the budgets of town departments they supervise," continued McNabb. "More budget planning by selectmen is needed."

"The major need is for the selectmen to institute a system of program planning for town departments," said McNabb. "They should establish goals and objectives for town departments, set program plans, and then be able to have a system for evaluating the performance of town departments they supervise."

"A more fundamental issue is to ensure the residents of Cohasset that decisions and votes of the selectmen will be held in the open, in compliance with the state Open Meeting law," concluded McNabb. "Last year I took action to complain of a violation of the Open Meeting law, which resulted in the District Attorney ordering the selectmen to comply with the law."

NcNabb also announced that two "coffee hours" have been scheduled where interested residents will be able to meet him, ask him questions, and discuss issues with him: Sunday, March 23 at 3 p.m. at the home of James and Mary Richard, 703 Jerusalem Road and Thursday, March 26, 8 p.m. at the home of Karen Corcoran, 4 Stevens Lane.

"I would be interested in hearing from any resident who wants to let me know what they think can be improved in town government," said McNabb.

Loose goose in Cohasset needs owner

Last week, there was a goose on the loose. Actually, there were nine geese on the run.

Neighbors of the King Street- Lily Pond area called the police several times last week about a pack of geese waddling their way through yards and along the streets of that area.

Animal Control Officer Richard Yokum was dispatched to the vicinity several times as residents reported the geese sightings.

Early last week, one of the pack was struck by a car and killed. Officer Yokum determined the animals were China geese, more commonly called barnyard geese.

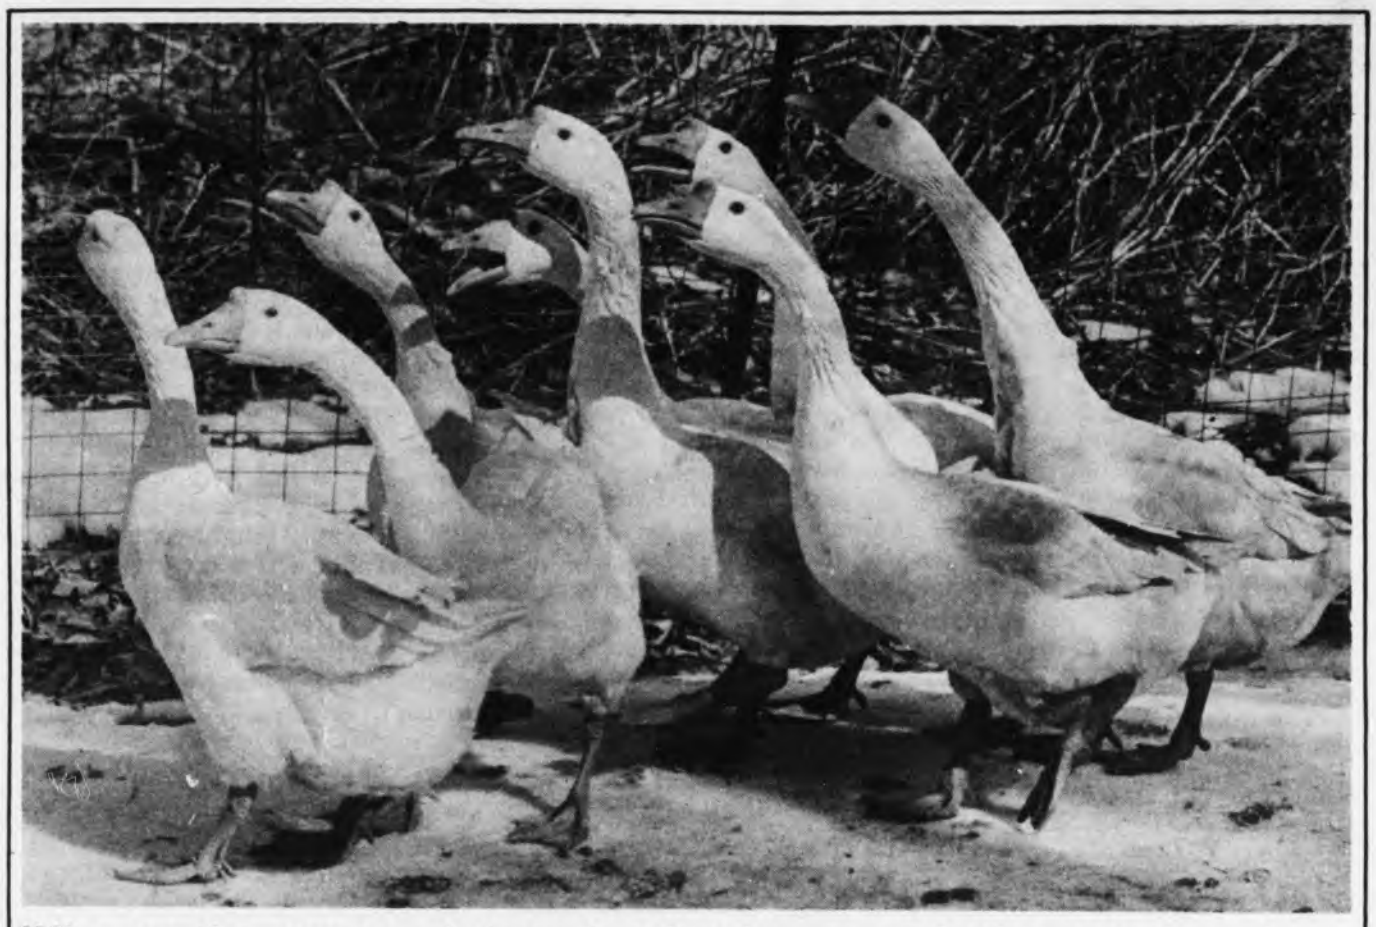
Wednesday afternoon, after another call from a concerned resident, Officer Yokum traveled to the King Street neighborhood. Eight geese had walked onto a tennis court near the Pond and King Street intersection.

"It was pretty easy to get the geese because they were fenced in by the tennis court," he said this week. "They are really nice. They are very tame and didn't peck at me at all."

The eight geese are now temporarily residing at the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham. Officer Yokum is eager to know who owns the geese. It seems someone didn't want the domestic geese and decided to dump them along King Street early last week, he surmised.

Full-grown geese need a lot of care and feeding, the officer said. But they make excellent watch dogs, he added.

If anyone knows the identity of the owner or would like to adopt a goose, contact Dr. Pratt at the New England Wildlife Center at 749-1248.



Who are the owners of these lonely white geese? (Carol McCann)

If you can't draw a straight line, take this course

A drawing course for the absolute beginning artist and even for those who can't draw a straight line is one of many courses offered on the spring schedule at the South Shore Art Center.

A new term begins Monday, March 31 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. An open house on Sunday, March 23 from 5-7 p.m. provides an opportunity for returning and new students to meet instructors and enroll in courses. Advanced registration is required for all classes and workshops at the Center.

Albert Abany will teach a course for "people who can't draw a straight line" Wednesdays from 12:30-3 p.m. beginning April 2. This is an introductory course and offers an opportunity to relax and enjoy drawing as a new way of seeing. He will work on line, form, proportion, perspective and structure.

At the same time he will also lead an oil and acrylic painting course for all levels of artistic ability. This course offers an opportunity for students to explore their own personal visual and color vocabulary based on sound painting practice.

David Tandy returns to teach both Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting, offered Thursdays from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. beginning April 3.

His painting course places heavy emphasis on drawing, composition and image-making working directly from still-life or model. Color, painting techniques and form will be explored as well as covering theoretical problems.

His drawing course is for the absolute beginner as well as anyone wishing a fundamental grounding in drawing skills. He will explore how and why to use line and mass in relation to a two dimensional surface.

Two portrait classes are on the schedule—Basic Portrait taught by Katherine Smit on Mondays from noon to 2:30 p.m. beginning March 31 and pastel Portrait taught by Constance Flavell Pratt on Tuesdays from nine to noon and 12:30 to 3:30 p.m.

In Basic Portrait students will learn structure of portraiture by learning how to make a sound, accurate drawing. Charcoal or pastel may be used.

The Pastel Portrait course, open to advanced students, will emphasize light and shade, color and likeness. The objective of this course is to encourage students to produce a saleable pastel portrait.

Watercolor artist Virginia Avery will teach Watercolor for all levels of artistic ability. Individual attention will be geared to the students' abilities and desires to progress.

Judeth Van Hamm Wiers will teach Selective Seeing designed to explore the contents of painting on Tuesdays from 7:30 -10 p.m. beginning April 1.

Wyman's course is for ages nine to twelve and will meet Thursdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. beginning March 20. This course will explore a variety of art forms--mixed media, 3—D, collage--and students will experiment with color, design and structure.

The official beginning to the Center's spring term is March 31. An open house to meet instructors and enroll in courses will be on Sunday, March 23, 5 to 7 p.m. Call the Center, 383-9548, for a spring term course schedule.

Sunday art center series

Patriot Ledger art critic Charles Guiliano and Boston Phoenix art critic David Bonetti come together for a lively discussion of "Is It Art", addressing the re-occurring question of why one work is considered art and another is not.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, brings these two critics together on Sunday, March 16, at 3 p.m. as part of its Sunday-at-the-Center continuing series. Advanced registration is required.

Both critics will use slides of works by known and unknown contemporary artists to illustrate their points. The dialogue between Guiliano and Bonetti, considering their individual backgrounds as critics, should give participants better insight as to how a work or artist becomes accepted.

Sunday, March 23, at 3 p.m. realist artist Susan Belton comes to the Center for a painting demonstration, A Realist Artist At Work. She will demonstrate for the audience how she perceives what is fascinating and how that is translated onto her canvasses. She will illustrate the choices and changes that go into the process of creating a painting.

The Sunday-at-the-Center series is funded by the Joseph Drown Foundation and the Marion Huse Memorial Fund. For further information or to register, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Plante, Deveney capture Spelling Bee titles

During the week of March 3, the CHS English department conducted two spelling bees for students in Grades 7 and 8. Jennifer Plante captured the Grade 7 championship and Sara Deveney was runner-up. The winner for the eighth grade championship was Jonathan DeLima and Greg Knowles was runner-up. The champions received medals provided by the Patriot Ledger and the runners-up were awarded framed certificates.

Awards were given out at an assembly presented by Mrs. Scheliff and Mrs. Cronin. At that time a school champion was determined. Jonathan DeLima of Grade 8 will represent Cohasset High School at the regional championship on April 12. Ian Browne, also of Grade 8, will be alternate.

All 17 participants received cetificates, silver dollars, and gift certificates from Bergson's. Awards were funded by the PSO.

St. Stephen's

Sturtevant assists rector - Good luck for St. Stephen's was the recent decision of Peter and Kitty Sturtevant (after Peter served as interim rector for a year) to move here and become members of the church. One of the blessings of having a retired priest in the congregation is the opportunity to avail ourselves of his skills and ability.

The Rector has asked Peter, with the approval of the Vestry, to help in certain areas. Among these are to assist Rev. Cutler in the visiting of shut-ins, to represent the rector when necessary at committee meetings, to take the session on the prayer book in the counseling of couples intending to be married at the church, to take services at the church while the rector's away, and to assist in services on Christmas, Palm Sunday, and Easter.

His work, particularly in the area of visiting, is in no way to replace Rev. Cutler's own visiting in the parish, but is an addition to this ministry. In the same way, the majority of counseling sessions for couples to be married will remain the Rector's responsibility.

New Hymnal - Approved at the Church's General Convention in 1982, the new Hymnal 1982 was dedicated recently at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C. It will be gradually introduced in course of the next year through articles, hymn songs, and anthems by the choir at worship.

It is an impressive book which has retained 90 percent of the hymns we sing at St. Stephen's.

Second Congregational

Choir note - Choir volunteers invited to join now! We rehearse every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Bates Hall, the interesting cantata, "Daniel." It's a good way to serve your church; and besides, you're needed and wanted.

Search committee - The following people have been selected by the Church Committee to be on the Search Committee for the purpose of securing a minister: Isabelle Wilson, Tish Jordan, Carol Sandblom, Dot Parmenter, Muriel Wheelwright, John W. Campbell, Osborne Ingram, Bradford Ketchum, and Richard Silvia. Meetings have begun and will continue weekly.

Note from the minister - Did you know that you may have played a part in keeping hope alive in Haiti? Your gift last year to One Great Hour of Sharing enabled Church World Service to build twenty-five wells in rural villages of Haiti, bringing clean water for drinking and seasonal irrigation. This year, with a cooperative government, even more help will be provided to the desperately poor people of Haiti, along with aid to people in seventy nations around the world.

Your gift to One Great Hour of Sharing this year will help to provide the luxury of hope to people who often lack it. The envelope sent to parishioners may be sent or brought to church during the next few weeks.

In a time of increasing needs in many nations, when problems of short-term famine and long-term economic development seem harder than ever to solve, Rev. Benbow is hopeful the church's support of One Great Hour of Sharing will be greater than ever before.

One Great Hour of Sharing--
Please mail or bring your gifts to the church, supporting relief and development projects in 70 countries. Thank you!

In The Family--
Our sympathy is extended to the family of John Hunt, who died last Sunday.

Food Drive--
Palm Sunday and Easter are the days set aside for a spring food drive to support the Quincy Crisis Center's feeding programs. Non-perishable packaged food (especially large-quantity canned foods) will be most helpful.

Clean Your Attic--
A church Yard Sale to support Heifer Project will be held in April. As you clean attics and closets, save saleable items for the Yard Sale; more details will be available later.

Open House Reception--
There will be an Open House Reception for John and Mary Benbow on Sunday, March 23, from 4 - 6 p.m. in Bates Hall. All are welcome to attend. Volunteers are needed in various capacities. Please call Debbie Anderson, 383-6345, after 6 p.m. for more information.

St. Stephen's choir program

The Choir of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., under the direction of Richard Hunter, Organist and Choirmaster, will perform Maurice Durufle's Requiem, Op. 9 for their annual Passiontide Musical Offering on Palm Sunday, March 23, at 4:30 p.m.

The performance accompanied by organ and chamber orchestra, will feature soloists: Sarah Jones Avery, soprano; Sarah deLima, mezzo-soprano; and Philip Lauriat, baritone.

Durufle composed his Requiem, Op. 9 in 1947 while Professor of Harmony at the Paris Conservatoire. It is generally considered his finest work.

The Musical Offering will also include organ works of Durufle and J.S. Bach performed on the St. Stephen's organ, an Aeoalin-Skinner instrument of 3,108 pipes arranged in 52 "ranks" with 57 speaking "stops."

For more information regarding this 4:30 p.m. Palm Sunday performance of Durufle's Requiem and organ music, you may call St. Stephen's Church at 383-1083.

Skippers turn on 'cruise control' against Medfield

Larson's reverse tip in capped a ten point run by the Skippers and Medfield called a timeout as the lead ballooned to 14-4.

At the beginning of the second quarter, Creed took control, shaking off defenders like flys and scored almost at will. Creed blocked a shot which led to an Edwards dunk shot and the Cohasset audience roared with approval as the Skippers now led 29-15 with 4:05 remaining in the first half.

A steal by Shultz and another inside move by Creed powered Cohasset to a commanding 35-22 lead at halftime.

Medfield cut into the Skipper lead at the beginning of the half (41-31) and the Medfield crowd could sense a comeback. But here, Cohasset substitute David Schumaker made a very important basket on a give-and-go and spoiled the Big Blue momentum. Medfield stole the ball on the next Skipper possession, failed to hit the layup and Edwards hit two key foul shots to give Cohasset a 47-31 lead at the end of the third quarter.

Hyland tried mightily to keep Medfield in the game in the fourth quarter but Creed, Edwards, Schultz and Larson matched basket for basket and the lead grew to 59-22 with 2:29 remaining in the game.

Even though Bogarty scored 10 and Schultz did not enjoy a good shooting night (four points) their floor game, defense and playmaking were exceptional.

They could be one of the top backcourts in Division III as the Cohasset turnovers were almost non-existent.

After the game Coach Minelli credited the win to the team's defense and acknowledged his Cruisers are for real.

"Beating a team like Medfield is no easy task. They were the best team we've faced so far in the tournament. After this win, I can say that this year's team is as good as last year's state title winning team."

"The idea of being a dynasty is more or less in the eyes of the beholder. It really hasn't sunk in yet how dominant we are."

Bogarty said the team was definitely "up" for the game and acknowledged how serious he was as he threw his hands into a victory sign, directed at the Medfield crowd toward the late stages of the game.

Shultz said even though Cohasset didn't have use of their sixth and seventh men (Mike Smith and Matt Maloney), Bogarty said the Cruisers blocked any negative aspect out of their minds and set their course on winning.

"We decided that every man who comes into the game must fit in as a role player and do their job. We play this as a team game. Another thing you have to remember is that the nucleus of this team has been together since the 10th grade. We know each other very well."

Larson said the team played exceptional team defense and concentrated on boxing out Medfield rebounders in the second half. When asked to comment on his performance he said, "Well, I was wide open. I should have made the shots. In the second half my shot came together. But this is not a one person team but a total team effort."

Creed said some Medfield players and fans had a few things to say after the Wareham game that it would be a different score this year. "Everyone was up, both offensively and defensively. We had four or five players in double figures."

Edwards noted the intensity of the game was very high but it spurred Cohasset to play even better. He said the team goal was to get the early lead and maintain it.

WAREHAM WIN

The Cruisers advanced to the semifinals, burying Wareham 78-40 March 5 as Creed scored 23 points.

Cohasset led throughout the game, 14-6 at the end of the first quarter, 34-22 at the half and 72-32 at the end of the third quarter.

Cohasset went to the free throw line 31 times, connecting on 24 shots. Bogarty went 11-for-11 at the line including four technical free throws and finished with 19 points.

Smith was lost for the Medfield win when he was involved in a fight with a Wareham players. Both were ejected which meant that Smith had to serve an automatic one-game suspension. He was expected to play Wednesday night against Lynn Classical.

Todd Trautwein puts a tight rein of defense on this Medfield player.

If Cohasset wins
Wednesday night,
the 'Cruisers' will likely play

EASTER EGG HUNT

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the ninth annual Easter Egg Hunt, for children three thru 11 years old Saturday, March 29, at Noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

This year there is a distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand to help out with the hunt. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt, as well as the other attractions.

Children will be divided into three chronological groups: Group 1—Ages 3 & 4 (with parent); Group 2—Ages 5-7; and Group 3—Ages 8-11.

Please gather around your designated area sign before Noon. Bring a small paper bag or container for your candy.

Individually-wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group, five or six of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape and will have a number on the tape. Should you find one of the numbered eggs, hold on to it. You will receive a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, American Legion Post # 118, the Cohasset Police Association, and the members of the Cohasset Call Fireman's Association through personal donations.

Rain date will be Saturday, April 5, at Noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

ART CLASSES

We told you in the February issue of the Senior Vista that we're arranging for a series of Art Classes for all the would-be artists among us.

The teacher-to-be is Maura Ditmar who is known to many of us, and for those who don't know, here's a bit about her. She is eminently qualified and has a fascinating art and teaching background. Maura has a B.A. in Art from U. Mass., Amherst, with a major in art education and a minor in sociology.

In addition, she studied at the Boston Museum School in several programs. Maura directed the Art Dept. in Maynard, Ma. Jr. and Sr. High Schools. More specifically, for our interests and needs, she founded the Adult Art Education in Maynard and Acton, Ma. and has some thirteen years of experience here, where she taught oil painting to beginners through advanced students.

She is offering to us March 7, 14, 21, and 28 all Fridays from 10:30 to noon, the following program: Introduction to painting for the senior citizen — using acrylics, water colors, oils on canvas and charcoal. The order of teaching will be the following: Two weeks or so of still life, and easy step-by-step to a balanced still life in neutral tones and a freeform design.

This will be followed by two or more weeks of basic landscape lessons, in a spring or fall theme, and introducing the use of color. You don't need to know you have artistic ability, we all do, in some way or other; you need interest and enthusiasm, that's all!

Don't say you can't draw a straight line. Who needs a straight line? This is to uncover hidden talents, to have fun, to express yourself in a new-to-you medium, and who knows, maybe bring out a little Picasso or Rembrandt that is hidden way down deep inside. Let's go for it.

Let's sign up for Maura Ditmar's Art Program. Call in advance if you need more information or please just come. Senior Center — 383-9112.

Volunteer needed

A volunteer is needed to handle telephone messages at the Senior Center, 3 North Main Street.

Anyone interested in handling the Center's incoming phone calls, any day of the week for as little as one hour per day, is asked to contact Director Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

Silver haired election

South Shore Red Cross needs help to help

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

It's been 105 years since Clara Barton and associates formed the first American National Red Cross chapter in Washington, D.C.

The service organization has its roots in the history of mid-19th century warfare, stressing the universal need for assistance to those wounded in battle, regardless of ideology.

In addition to disaster relief and service to those in the military, Red Cross has since become an organization upon which millions rely for health and safety information, instruction, blood donations and other life-saving and enhancing programs.

Disaster relief and military services are the two requirements all Red Cross chapters must meet to carry the name, according to Merle Jones Lindsay, volunteer services director of the Red Cross South Shore region.

The South Shore region covers 17 communities from Scituate to Foxboro and is one of six such regions around the Boston area, she said in an interview last week. The region includes towns to Scituate and Norwell; other area communities are served by the organization's Old Colony region based in Brockton.

Area residents have some exposure to Red Cross disaster relief, but the organization is more familiar as a blood-collection agency and instructor of water and boating safety, first aid, lifesaving and home-safety skills.

It's a quiet organization, yet 13,000 people across the state are regular Red Cross volunteers, Lindsay said.

The regions were formed in 1982 to centralize Red Cross services and save money, Lindsay said.

An example is the message service Red Cross offers to military personnel stationed overseas. Where a family member has died, the Red Cross network delivers the message to the GI and verifies the emergency for his superior officers. If needed, the Red Cross will loan money to him for the trip home.

It's far easier to relay messages and handle such cases when Red Cross regions deal with one another, she said.

Formerly, chapters were formed in communities under the Red Cross name. Scituate, Cohasset, Weymouth and Hingham are among towns that formerly had local chapters.

The South Shore is a net donor to the Red Cross, Lindsay estimated, meaning it gives more money and volunteers more time than it gets in Red Cross services. But through the region's Quincy center offices, the organization is prepared for any emergency in the area.

Lindsay said volunteers set up feeding stations and shelters in Scituate, Hull and Quincy as Hurricane Gloria struck lat last September.

But the effort was limited when compared to that after the blizzard of February 1978, she said.

Though it has been closely allied to government throughout its history, Red Cross receives no public funds for its efforts. In southeastern Massachusetts, 65 percent of the organization's operating funds come from United Way donations.

Though it is not subject to government budget constraints, funds from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay have been limited because that group now funds nearly 200 organizations, Lindsay said.

The region thus relies on direct donation campaigns and fundraisers to fund the rest of its activities.

Events include annual Red Cross nights at the South Shore Music Circus and the Annual Ball.

"The ball used to be called the Blizzard Ball in the years after that storm struck," Lindsay said.

The national organization in Alexandria, Virginia directs disaster relief through the regional offices when a storm threatens large areas.

"Many people don't realize how extensive the organization is. It's pretty complex to explain it all," she said.

In addition to instruction for safety and health, Red Cross is involved with health inventories and blood-pressure screening and counseling employees of area businesses.

Its newest program is called KISS, for Kids in Safety Seats. Introduced last year, the program furnishes certified car seats for children under five, required by state law since 1981.

The seats are available through Quincy City Hospital on a long-term basis to residents who don't have the money to buy a safety seat immediately after a birth in the family. Red Cross also offers the seats to South Shore visitors for periods of up to three weeks. The cost is $5 or $10 plus a security deposit.

Though it has enough volunteers to populate a small town, the organization needs others who are willing to give time to the Red Cross, Lindsay said.

It's a good way to donate to the organization if funds are limited, and the Red Cross "has gained many, many valuable volunteers" in this manner, she added.

There is no profile of a "typical" Red Cross volunteer, she said, since residents of all national, racial and economic groups are involved.

One factor has been changing in recent years. Volunteers today give time to a specific task or project or devote monthly or bimonthly time periods to the Red Cross.

"We're getting more specialized volunteers, those who have skills in specific areas," Lindsay said. For example, regional manager Lance Hartford needs volunteers to assist with finance and accounting in the regional office.

Though Red Cross needs the help, it's not necessary to make a daily commitment to the organization, she stressed.

"If one wants to be active every day, that's fine, but any donated time is appreciated — even just a few hours every other month or so," she said.

it's like a breath of spring....

☐ More news on our town's youth and their athletic prowess...Stephen Pozatek, son of Zig and Ellie Pozatek of Surrey Drive, has made the New Hampshire State Junior Racing Team. There were 23 skiiers named, and in two weeks they will be racing to qualify for the Eastern United States Junior Team. Stephen doesn't stop at skiing either, as he is also making quite a name for himself in the tennis world! He is now ranked 18th in the 12 and under category in the New England Lawn Tennis Association! On top of all that, he still finds the time to study, he made honors at Derby Academy last semester!

☐ Katie Lord also makes the skiing news this week, she finished third in the State High School Alpine Ski Championships at Berkshire East in Charlemont. Katie will now compete in the Eastern States at Pico Peak, Vermont.

☐ Julie May Hoogeveen, a sophomore at Wheaton College, was named to the Dean's List for the fall semester. Julie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hoogeveen.

☐ Congratulations to Craig Mulcahy, who made the All-Star Team in hockey. Craig was the only sophomore in the League to make the squad, a real feather in his cap!

Riding Club announces awards

The Riding Club held its annual banquet and awards night Friday evening, Feb. 28. Sally Davenport presented several 4-H awards to the junior members of the club.

Members receiving their First Year Pin from the county 4-H office were: Abby Barrett, Martha Curran, Shelby Woodmansee and Jillian Green.

Second Year Pins were awarded to: Meg Cosman, Michelle Hart, Sarah Barrow, Sarah Douglas, Julie Nussdorfer, Jennifer McKenna, and Michelle Babin.

Receiving Third Year Pins were: Jennifer Powers, Cindy Spooner, Tanya Stein and Lisa Harris.

Four Year Pins were presented to: Anne Marie McKenna, Jill Hamilton, Heather Ripley and Erin Powell.

Laura McKenna and Lorie Marshall received Fifth Year Pins, and Jean Garvey earned her Sixth Year Pin.

A special bronze medal award for completing Level 1 of the 4-H Horsemanship Ratings went to Abby Barrett, and for completing Level 2, Meg Cosman received the silver medal. These awards require successful completion of written, oral, and riding tests, as well as participation in specific mounted activities and fitting and showmanship competition.

Following dinner and awards, club members and their guests were treated to the movie "Riding for America," produced by the United States Equestrian Team. It was a very enjoyable evening.

The Riding Club would like to extend congratulations to one of its junior members for her outstanding recent accomplishments with the Ponkapoag Pony Club. Jill Hamilton, daughter of Jim and Laurie Hamilton of King Street, recently represented her club in a regional competition testing the contestants' knowledge in all areas of horsemanship. The competition, called a "Know Down," was held on Sunday, March 2 at Weston High School.

Jill and her partner won the Regional Championship for their age group and will now advance to the National Championship to be held in Kentucky during August.

If You're Installing A New Telephone System, Our List Of Standard Features Looks Like Their List Of Options.

Feature Comparison

Feature	Executech™	Merlin™
Personal and System Memory Dialing	Standard (34 #s)	Optional Cartridge I
Non-Square Line Assignments	Standard	Not Available
Call Announce with Hands-free Answer	Standard	Adjunct Unit (Plus Optional Cartridge I)
Music on Hold	Standard	Optional Cartridge II

Auto Redial	Standard	Not Available
Last Number And Saved Number Redial	Standard	Optional Cartridge I
Common Audible for External Ringing	Standard	Optional Cartridge III
Area and Zone Paging	Standard	Optional Cartridge II
Toll Restriction	Standard	Optional Cartridge II

You have to buy all three optional cartridges if you want to get even the most common key system features with AT&T's Merlin™.

That is, if you can get them at all. (Even the optional cartridges don't give you automatic redialing with Merlin. It's standard with Executech...)

Or let's say you decide to get a speakerphone. The speaker's built into our Executech telephone. It's a costly, extra box with Merlin.

Just as important, unlike Merlin, Executech has a flexible, non-square design. So you can assign and group Executech lines any way you want.

So, what it all comes down to is this. Feature for feature, and dollar for dollar, their Merlin just can't compare with our Executech.

Call Comdial at 1-800-526-5627 to find out more.

We've been building telephones right here in America for almost 100 years. So it's really not surprising that we've built the one that proves Merlin is just another myth.

Emmett Wood

Emmett W. Wood, 68, formerly of Cohasset and Scituate, died Friday, Feb. 21, in Rockledge, Fla., after a long illness.

A native of Detroit, Mich., he had lived in Cohasset for 12 years before moving to Florida and was a summer resident of Scituate for a number of years.

A commander in the Navy, he was a veteran of World War II and was a pilot for many years.

After retiring, he taught math at Thayer Academy in Braintree and coached freshman football.

He was named All-American, honorable mention, in football at the U.S. Naval Academy from which he graduated in 1940.

He was a member of the Retired Officers' Association and was a former member of the Cohasset Golf Club.

He leaves his wife, Virginia (Stuart) Wood, of Scituate and Rockledge, Fla.; two sons, S. Bradford Wood, of Zaragoza, Spain, and W. Bruce Wood of Hingham; a daughter, Andrea J. Wood of Newport, N.H.; and four grandchildren.

Memorial services were held in Florida. Donations in his memory may be made to the Brevard Hospice, Longview Avenue, Rockledge, Fla., 32955.

Sydney Bubbers

The Hull house fire on March 7 has claimed the life of one of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's most valued members. Sydney Bubbers. Having escaped to safety herself, Sydney rushed back into the burning apartment to rescue her two cats—a selfless act very much in keeping with Sydney Bubbers' character.

Although a talented actress in her own right, Sydney was always ready to take on the less rewarding aspects of the theatre and could be found working backstage in nearly all Dramatic Club productions. She was last seen on stage in Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman, and behind the scenes as prompter and general factotum in Agatha Christie's mystery, The Hollow.

Always a modest, private and caring person, Sydney had requested in her will that formal services be omitted and any memorial observance be made in the form of donations to the M.S.P.C.A. The Cohasset Dramatic Club would like to pay her tribute here. She will be sorely missed.

Pierina Frugoli

A funeral Mass was celebrated Feb. 14 for Pierina "Irene" (Salls-Omodeo) Frugoli, 85, who died Saturday, Feb. 7 at South Shore Hospital after a brief illness. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Born in New York City, Mrs. Frugoli lived in Marshfield before moving to Cohasset 40 years ago. She and her late husband, John P. Frugoli, owned John's Service Station 30 years ago.

She had been employed by the Cohasset School Department.

Mrs. Frugoli was a member of the Cohasset Ladies Auxiliary and the Sixty Plus Club of Cohasset.

She leaves her son, Robert E. Frugoli of Marshfield; a sister, Agnes Tomassi of Whitestone, N.Y., five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Donations in her memory may be made to Children's Hospital, 300 Longwood Avenue, Boston, Mass. 02116.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sparrell-McNamara Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street.

Emma C. Flint

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday for Emma C. Flint, 90, who died Sunday, March 9 at the South Shore Hospital. Burial was private.

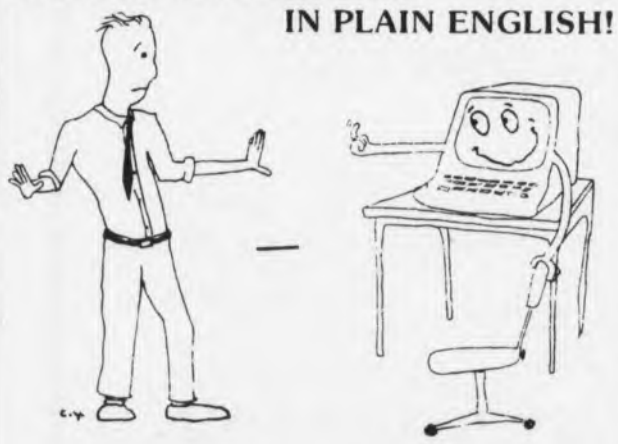
Mrs. Flint is the mother of former Cohasset Town Treasurer Gordon E. Flint.

Born in Cambridge, Mrs. Flint moved to Cohasset 73 years ago.

Wife of the late George W. Flint, she leaves another son, George W. Flint Jr. of West Roxbury; a daughter, Beverly Burnside of Norwell; a brother, Ralph Keegan of Cohasset; a sister, Violet Toye of Cambridge, nine grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Donations in Mrs. Flint's memory may be made to the Cohasset Community Center, Barn-Raising Fund, c/o Joyce Hoffman, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, 02025.

COMPUTERS...
IN PLAIN ENGLISH!



Most adults have not had an introduction to computers. The age of high tech came upon us so fast, schools couldn't respond fast enough to teach all of us. This seminar is an opportunity to catch up; to get the conceptual fundamentals of what a computer is and what it does. And you'll also learn the language of computers.

The seminar will be given in a comfortable setting, in small groups, on Saturday mornings and afternoons, at the Sheraton Tara, Braintree, and Kimball's By The Sea, Cohasset.

Tryouts for 'Gramercy Ghost'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be holding tryouts for its Spring production of playwright John Cecil Holm's lighthearted comedy "Gramercy Ghost" this coming Sunday, March 16, at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

Time of the tryouts will be 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Directing the show for the Dramatic Club is veteran director Brewster Pattyson whose past directorial experience for the Club includes "Best of Friends" in 1977 and "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" in 1980. Producer is Wayne Miessner.

"Gramercy Ghost" is a delightful three-act play calling for a cast of a dozen actors and actresses of various ages. There are several major roles and a number of "minor" roles to be filled. "Gramercy Ghost" is perhaps unique in having four "ghosts" among its cast; three of them young men dressed in uniforms of the American Revolution, the fourth a "ghostly girl," and therein rests the tale of this comedy set in modern day New York.

The Dramatic Club welcomes anyone desiring to try out for a role in "Gramercy Ghost," whether experienced or a beginner in community theater. Playbooks are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset.

Schedule dates for performance of "Gramercy Ghost" are Friday through Sunday, May 16 to 18.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes, to be taught by Ms. Laurie Ann Clevland.

All clases will be held at the G.A.R. Hall in Scituate, and will begin Sunday, April 6, 1986. Beginner training classes will be held at 6:30 p.m.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice, pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects tobe covered: proper use of voice commands, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience.

An intermediate/advanced class will be held at 7:30 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Dept. Beginner class.

The fee is $17 per dog for the eight week, one-hour program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age.

To register please call Recreation Dept. at 383-6791.

Advisors, school board agree on school budget

The School Committee voted Monday night to present a budget of almost $4.5 million to Town Meeting as a result of a compromise with the Advisory Committee.

Further fuel cost reductions and lower step ratings for an Adjustment Counselor and Special Education teacher were major factors in reducing the budget to a 5.7 percent increase.

Requests for an Adjustment Counselor, instrumental music instructor and an expanded gifted and talented program remain in the budget.

The School Committee orginally voted for a 6.6 percent increase in budget, while the Advisory Committee recommended a 4 percent increase. Advisory Committee members Bill Lean and Denis Rossi met with the School Committee last week and were able to work out a compromise of 5.7 percent increase or $4,492,126.

The School Committee was pleased with the budget and expressed their appreciation to Lean and Rossi.

"The very special items we've been discussing are still in the budget," Superintendent Eugene Crowell reported in reference to the Adjustment Counselor, gifted and talented program and instrumental music instructor.

According to Assistant Superintendent Stephen Hart, who presented the budget, the committee was able to cut another $10,000 from the budget for fuel costs due to increasing oil costs.

Ten thousand dollars had already been cut from last year's fuel requests. The Advisory Committee previously told the School Committee $10,000 would be available in the reserve fund if it became necessary to exceed the budget.

Supt. Crowell asked if $10,000 more would be in the reserve fund as a result of this additional cut.

Lean and Rossi informed him that only the original $10,000 would be provided.

Hart showed that $10,000 was cut from the budget by hiring an Adjustment Counselor corresponding to the third step in the master's program.

The counselor will service students in the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

The other large savings Hart pointed out was the unexpected adjustment in the special education account, which was discovered last week.

A number of minor decreases brought the total decrease to $36,000. These include $1,000 reduction in textbook, $1,000 from the library, reduction in athletics and an anticipation of staff changes resulting in lower steps.

A town resident expressed concern over the decreasing student enrollment and suggested a consolidation of some of the schools.

This idea was rejected by the committee which said neither the Deer Hill nor the Osgood Schools were large enough to house all the elementary students.

They also stressed that the junior high must remain in the high school building to have access to the facilities.

Chairman Joseph Nedrow defended the budget saying, "We did not create the quality of Cohasset's school system, we inherited it. We see ourselves as custodians of it."

At the close of the meeting, member Barbara Bliss thanked Rossi and Lean for their cooperation. She also suggested that after Town Meeting they sit down and discuss ways to facilitate budget preparations for next year.

Hahn outlines goals for schools

Initiatives for schools

Dane Hahn, candidate for Cohasset school committee, has released seven written goals designed to foster awareness of school needs, create discussion points among the present school committee, and point out the differences between the candidates for the two seats presently open.

"My marketing background has always taught me that written goals which are attainable, are the only way to measure whether progress is being made. If the goals are not written, or not attainable, they have no value in and of themselves. My seven points are clearly ambitious, but lead in directions that have been dealt with only as crisis management would allow.

"As Vice President, Marketing for Bell & Howell, Co., Inc., our very structured approach to solving problems had to start out with goals developed by the Board of Directors and the company president. What I've done for the Cohasset voter is simply put forward a series of goals which they may feel are consistent with their wishes. If these goals are consistent with their own, I would hope to have their vote on election day," Hahn said.

"Additionally, I would welcome suggestions and concerns from all voters in Cohasset. Please mail your opinions to my home at 44 Black Roack Road," he concluded.

GOALS FOR COHASSET SCHOOLS

Improve guidance services—Establish the needs of the Cohasset special student, and develop the alternatives for students in "at risk" categories.

Improve and review the curriculum (and related course material). Develop workable scheduling, allowing students flexibility to take courses as a survey of given disciplines.

Capitolized Assets Review with an eye toward future improvements, phase-outs, and unfulfilled needs.

Encouragement of parental involvement.

Development of a private endowment program.

Review personnel in place, and positions prior to filling them. Attrition in the face of declining enrollments is not a dirty word, and could apply to administration as well as rank and file teachers.

Diligent efforts to increase communication with the public and other town committees, as well as the various media in the region.

Town population figures

Cohasset's population has shown a slight reduction since 1980, according to recently released 1985 state census figures.

The new census lists the town's population as 7,149, a decrease of 25, or 0.3 percent, from the 1980 federal census figure of 7,174.

Cohasset has lost 600 residents since the last state census in 1975, a decrease of 7.7 percent from the 1975 population figure of 7,749.

The federal government conducts a census in every year ending with a "0." Cities and towns in Massachusetts conduct censuses in years ending with a "5."

Town Clerk Frances Marks said that Cohasset's population stays relatively stable.

"I think it's been that way a number of years," she said. "The population stays balanced."

"Some people may move out of a house," said Marks, "but new people move right in."

Population changes affect state aid to cities and towns, and census figures are also used to make political districts and precincts.

Rev.Edward Atkinson leads the Unitarians to the truth

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

Built in 1747, the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common is the oldest church in the town. Reverend Edward Atkinson, pastor since 1969, is the senior pastor in the town. But the doctrine of the church is far from being the most established.

As a member of the Unitarian Universalist Association, it is the church's creed not to have a creed. Instead, it is the goal of the church to gather together in search of truth.

"Most religions are based on a revealed truth," explained Rev. Atkinson, "and exist to preserve, promote, and promulgate that truth.

"Ours is more a questing," he continued. "We subscribe to the belief that we have remained open as this world continues to unveil itself to us."

The Unitarian Church resulted from a split in the Congregational Church in the early 19th century, corresponding with the separation of church and state in Massachusetts.

A liberal movement at Harvard Divinity School, away from the Orthodox Calvinist position was reflected at the First Parish Church under Rev. Jacob Flint. As a result the more orthodox members of the parish broke away and formed the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset. The new liberals were accused of heresy of Unitarianism, hence their name. Later they joined with the Universalists another heretic group which believed in humanism.

Rev. Atkinson pointed out that the growing liberalism was actually a growing respect for the human mind and intelligence.

"And the idea that you have to practice religion through good works," he added. "This led to an application of reason to the Bible."

He maintained the church still stands for a respect for human reason, putting religion into practice through ethical behavior, democracy in human relations and the freedom for people to speak their conscience.

Rev. Atkinson said that while his church is somewhat traditional, there is a variety of beliefs among the congregation. Some members are humanistic, some non-theistic, some theistic, and some who emphasize and revere Christ.

In a pamphlet prepared for the Unitarian Universalist Association, Rev. Atkinson wrote, "We have resisted the temptation to overlay these personal beliefs with a common formula of doctrine."

The church meets each Sunday morning at 10:30 in the Meeting House for a service of singing and a message from Rev. Atkinson.

"I present a thought as articulately as I can," he said of his sermons. "Not as a revealed truth but as an idea for the congregation. My task is to provoke thought.

"We try to be inclusive and pluralistic. Our wisdom may be drawn from the Bible, the Koran, the Dhammapada, Shakespeare, or the morning newspaper.

"Openness implies you take something and try to find some element of truth."

He explained that sometimes a little different terminology is required to encompass the beliefs of all individuals.

The church observes no sacraments. Instead the members make covenants or agreements. To join the church you sign a book and shake hands with church members.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

'The reign of Lord Cisco the Lost'

By Darrell Berger
Special to the Mariner

In the summer of 1973 I was near the end of my theological education. I was completing a stint as chaplain intern at Central State Psychiatric Hospital in Nashville, TN.

The purpose of the internship was to give budding clerics a deeper understanding of the human condition. For three months I wandered among lost and ravaged psyches. That's why Cisco was so different.

He asked for a match and I gave him one, as we stood together outside the cafeteria. He was of average height and very thin, and could have been no more than 20. His blond hair was long and curly, and he was attempting a moustache. At a time when so many kids had long hair and wore jeans and tee-shirts almost exclusively, he could have been either a college student or a street urchin.

We smoked and he told me about himself. He lived there, he said, pointing to a forbidding building I had never visited. He was in and out of the hospital because he couldn't get along at home.

His father was a wealthy contractor. All his family was in the business, but Cisco refused. The battle for his future was so intense it had finally brought him here.

He began to brag. How nice his room was; how many girl friends he had; how many cakes and cookies they sent him. Suddenly he ran away from me.

He had seen the men in the white coats approaching.

Cisco cavorted around the green while the men chased him. He laughed as he avoided them but soon they closed in, though not without the help of a net.

As they carried him away, Cisco called back, "Come see me tomorrow."

I tried but the aides at the desk of Cisco's building were having none of it. I persisted and finally persuaded a doctor that I would do no harm.

The only entrance to the ward was past a locked door and guard. The door led to a narrow stairway. This was the most secure ward I had visited.

At the top of the stairs was a large room. I was unprepared for what I saw.

There were perhaps 30 people in the room. Most of them were naked or wearing only underwear. There were no sounds, few movements. They paid me no heed.

I was a philosophy major. I had no words, no categories for the people there. I looked at them only briefly, for a sense of shame rose in me, not because of their nakedness, but because of their very existence.

Can I say, "They had genetic defects?" Will that convey how deprived these beings were of the minimum gifts one needs to function? Perhaps I should not have been there. I did not know what connected life as I knew it with what was before me.

Then I heard Cisco. He walked into the room from a hallway opposite me. He greeted me with ease and confidence, like Hugh Hefner welcoming Norman Mailer to the Playboy Mansion. He led me to the end of the hall to his room.

It was as promised. Posters on the wall, a writing table, and on the bed a huge tray of brownies. He offered me one and told me of the beautiful girl who had sent them.

As I ate a hulking body filled the doorway. A very large, very frightening presence stood there, wearing a kind of diaper and grunting loudly. He pointed to the brownies, then moved toward them.

"No!" Cisco shouted, placing both hands on the great, thrusting forearm. "First say hello to my friend, Darrell. John, this is Darrell. Darrell, John."

We shook hands after a fashion and as soon as John touched my hand it headed for the brownies.

"No!" Cisco said again. "If you want a brownie, you have to write his name."

God, no, I thought. What had I gotten into? Cisco thrust a pencil into John's hand, after printing my name in large letters on a piece of paper at his table.

John threw down the pencil and went for the brownies again. Cisco grabbed him around the waist and, using all the leverage available, threw John toward the door. "Write first, then eat."

This exchange was repeated several times, but finally, with great resignation and greater effort, a D appeared below what Cisco had written.

After every letter of my name, John went for the brownies and Cisco threw him back. Once, as a corrective measure Cisco hit him as hard as he could on the jaw.

I suggested I had to go, but Cisco was having none of it. At long, long last, the three of us were exhausted and John had written my name quite clearly, every letter neatly printed.

As soon as John finished he rushed for the brownies, grabbed the entire tray, shouted triumphantly, and ran from the room. Cisco said, "I knew he could do it."

Cisco now allowed me to leave, and we exchanged farewells. I thought, "How had he escaped yesterday? Why was he in that ward? Who was he? And what had he shown me?"

I had to walk through the large room, past the naked souls, to get out. This time they looked at me. Some smiled. They were all eating brownies.

Nostalgia: Remembering a Boston shopping trip

By Dorothy Squier
Mariner Correspondent

Mama never seemed to mind if I talked a lot. She was a great talker herself, she knew lots of lovely words and would explain them to me and tell me how to pronounce them. And Papa was a good listener. When she had to go into Boston to shop she'd take me along and answer all my questions and we'd have a fine time going from store to store to choose dress materials and patterns. Not that she always used patterns...she could just look at a dress in a window and copy it.

There was a store on Boylston street called Yamanaka's. She liked to do Boylston Street first so we could stop to gaze into the exclusive shop windows while she memorized lines and fashions. In the window of Yamanaka's, beside bolts of cottons, were adorable Japanese dolls with straight black hair, cut in bangs like my sister Esther's, tiny tea sets in flaky brown cardboard boxes and silk fans with lacy ivory handles. Everything had a mysterious sandalwood smell.

We bought yards of Japanese cotton crepe in blue, jade green and lilac for dresses for my sister, Marie. They were to be trimmed with flat, smoked pearl buttons big as silver dollars. Then Mama bought me a Japanese flowered paper parasol with a black wooden handle that smelled of lacquer. I was in a dream world for the rest of the day.

I carried it open on the walk to Thresher's on West Street. Mama was to make an evening gown and wrap for Grace Corson, who was an illustrator for Filene's. Grace had a grand figure and a lot of style and Mama enjoyed making clothes for her.

After fingering yards of taffetas and moires and chiffons, we went on to Jordan Marsh to continue our search. I had turned into a Japanese princess wearing a silk kimono with a wide sash and wooden clogs for shoes. I minced in the aisles twirling my flirty parasol while Mama took her time with colors, textures, quality and prices.

She had elegant taste and was an expert needlewoman with a great knack for thinking up names for colors that made you see them in a new light. Geranium red, leaf green, cherry, delft, taupe, cocoa, banana...and she could combine these with swift, sure decision.

One dress she later copied for Marie was of taupe velvet with a long straight skirt (that was when long dresses were being worn). The top had a boat neck and bell sleeves banded with ribbon embroidered with tiny beads of pink, green and blue. It had a wide taupe taffeta sash with a big bow in back. It was a stunner!

Another she made for Esther had a skirt of four tiered ruffles all picot-edged. The dress was of sheer navy voile with a sash of cherry red velvet ribbon ending with small clusters of cherries. She wore a Milan navy straw with cherries on the brim.

That day at Jordan's when Mama had finished her shopping, we crossed Washington Street and stood in front of the Bijou Dream, the treat she had promised.

She bought tickets for the movie and at this point I was faced with the most momentous decision of my life. I could choose one of two ways to ascend to the second floor where we were to sit. I couldn't do both. Mama wouldn't wait that long. I agonized as I faced a magic staircase of pale green glass under which flowed a shimmering waterfall! In all the fairytales I had never come upon anything like this! The other choice was a mesmerizing, humming, moving staircase. The steps rolled out from under nowhere and flattened out. You had to jump on fast and hang on to the thick, black rubber rail and hope you wouldn't slip on your Mary Janes. Then at the top the stairs slid back into nowhere again. They disappeared.

Mama helped me to decide.

She said, "When we come out you can walk down the waterfall. I'll stand behind you on the moving stairs. Hurry now before the show starts."

After the movie there was one more treat. Again shading my face with my parasol, Mama took my hand and we went to Ginter's Restaurant on Winter Street. She chose apple pie a la mode and the waitress brought it while I deliberated. When I saw the hot pie with the ice cream melting and running down the sides, I soon made by decision...Mama drank tea and I had milk.

Our exciting day was ending. A short ride on the subway and we were near home. My five sisters were home from school. There was no such thing as baby-sitters in those days, so Mama always took me along on her shopping trips. And I had learned enough from my siblings about what happened if you didn't mind and do what Mama told you. But she knew well how to deal with me. She always encouraged my fantasies. She had more than a few of them herself.

At supper time Papa was an attentive listener and, although my sisters pleaded with Mama to make me shut up, he heard me out with great gasps at my thrilling experiences, he admired my parasol, and put me to bed still talking.

Life was — it still is — a Bijou Dream!

Medical insurance costs, a doctor speaks out

(Editor's Note: On Feb. 14, Mike Barnicle of the Boston Globe wrote a column on the skyrocketing malpractice insurance costs of the medical profession; the column was called, "Crybaby, heal theyself." The following response to that column was written by Dr Stanley Leitzes, a leading orthopedic surgeon on the South Shore.)

Dear Mr. Barnicle:

President Kennedy's baby was suffering from Hyaline Membrane Disease, and was obviously dying. The night of his death a friend of mine who was an intern at Children's Hospital and helping to care for the baby was informed by the primary physician on the case that the outlook was hopeless and the baby would not live through the night. The intern was on his way home shortly thereafter when he heard Pierre Salinger on the radio referring to the child's condition. Salinger announced that he has just been in touch with the hospital, and that the prognosis had been changed for the better. The press secretary was so convincing that the intern was sure that the baby would live. However, the facts were that the prognosis had never changed, and that night the Kennedy baby died.

The media has great power, and certainly this is not the only example of the use of that power to misinform the public. Doesn't the media have the responsibility to not only disseminate the truth, but also to be truthful? In my naive way I still expect honor, truth and integrity in a newspaper. It is extremely depressing to see in writing facts that I am familiar with, but which are so convoluted that they are virtually unrecognizable. I am not sure if this is intentional, or if it is just due to ignorance.

Your article on Feb. 14 (the St. Valentine's Day Massacre) is disgraceful. It is shameful to see anyone writing an article which shows such disrepsect for the facts. Any clear thinking or reasoning is obviated by the inflammatory language used. Are you merely interested in rabble rousing, or do you actually care to educate yourself about what is really going on?

What exactly do you mean when you say the doctors refused to work, and that they could sit on their assets? The doctors still worked. Check your facts. And they still paid their office costs, phone bills, etc. How long do you think their assets would last? Why don't you check and see what the assets of those doctors are? What exactly does $147,000 gross income mean? Does this take into account the overhead, salaries of secretaries and technicians, office rent, and other costs which must be considered in the business end of medicine?

Are insurance rates too high only when someone ends up on welfare? Can't the price be too high in and of itself? What about the cost of repaying loans to finance oneself through four years of college, four years of medical school, a year of internship, four years of residency, and one or more years of fellowships? Should the rates be based on what a doctor can afford?

Attorneys instruct their clients not to pay medical bills until their accident or injury cases are settled. Should this two-or three-year delay in payments of bills be considered? Should the high number of bills that are never paid be considered? If orthopedic sugeons received 50 percent of these outstanding bills they could afford the new malpractice rates.

Lawyers would have you believe they are the watchdogs of our society. Stop committing malpractice and we'll stop the suits, they say. In Massachusetts the tribunal for screening malpractice cases is made up of two attorneys and one doctor. Are lawyers, with three years of training in the law, qualified to judge, in medical matters, a doctor who has trained for ten or more years in medicine?

Eighty percent of the obstetrician/gynecologists in NYC have been sued at least once. The remaining 20 percent are generally those who have only been in practice for a few years. Do you really believe all those doctors were guilty of malpractice? Paul Sugarman says 72 percent of the malpractice suits are won by physicians, and that the rest of the cases are either settled out of court or lost. Malpractice rates go up because of the number of suits, whether malpractice has been committed or not.

I should not have to remind you of the huge amounts ski resorts, skating rinks, taverns, and even towns have to pay for liability insurance. The U.S. Attorney General considers the problem of the exorbitant cost of liability rates to be a major priority, and 30 states are now considering action.

I challenge you to look into the question of the number of attorneys in this country. That number has doubled since 1967, and law schools are now graduating 35,000 law students a year. Are you aware of the solicitation by lawyers of family members who have suffered tragedies? I challenge you to explore how attorneys are paid in litigation cases. They generally receive a high percentage of the take. And further amounts are charged for fee splitting.

Lawyers are allowed by law to receive a kickback for referral — sometimes as much as 30 percent of the total lawyers' fee. For example, if a "Constitutional" lawyer refers a client to a "malpractice" lawyer, he receives payment for that referral. (Incidently, a law prohibits a doctor in one specialty from receiving payment for referring a patient to a doctor in another specialty — and I am certainly not advocating that I would want this system to change.) James Sokolove allegedly refers every case he gets from his media ads.

You say our rates have not been raised since 1983, and that we knew far back that our rates would be exorbitant in 1986. I challenge you to print the table of rates and to explore the truth concerning these rates. For example, in 1983 I recieved a bill for $10,000 plus to cover that year; eight months later the rate was recomputed, and it was decided that I owed an additional $6,000 plus. Now we are being told that for that same year, 1983, we owe $7,600 more.

Please understand that I have never been sued. We received the first installment of the 1986 malpractice insurance bill in December. We were told that it was for over $8,000 plus, and that if we didn't pay it within ten days our insurance would be cancelled. Where was our year grace period? As of next May I will owe a total of about $50,000 more. Even if I can pay it over a period of a year, where in that time could I raise the money?

It is illegal for me to charge my patients more to cover a portion of the cost — the insurance company legally decides how much I can charge a patient for my services. The same insurance company which says it needs more money is offering me a loan to pay them at only 11.5 percent interest a year. Blue Cross, which charges patients more for insurance than is charged in most states, and which in turn pays doctors less than they would receive in most states, is also interested in offering us loans! And if I were to take a loan, how would I ever repay it while trying to earn enough money for next year's bill?

Heal yourself you say. How? Doctors in this state have few rights. You may not be aware of the legislation that the medical community has been trying to get the Legislature to consider over the past years. This is the route we've wanted to take, but it has proven to be a dead end. Nothing has been done.

Someone in an exalted position such as yours ought to feel the responsibility for learning and publishing all the facts. I wonder if you have the backbone, or even the desire, to seek the truth either from me or from others so you can rid yourself of your lack of knowledge of the situation. I really wonder if you care at all. After all, it is simple to write attention-getting, inflamatory statements, and most people will probably trust that you are telling the truth." To thine own self be true."

Stanley Leitzes, M.D.

Political activism doesn't allow for campus 'highjinks'

By Marc Sperber

Commentary

The political life of college students is usually ridden with slogans and poor on substance. Many 18-year-olds go off to college and find that being a campus "liberal" or a "conservative" is an easy way to name recognition among peers and a surefire method of resume-enrichment.

But the recent turn of events at several colleges in connection with establishment of campus shantytowns as clarion calls for divestment from South Africa have revealed a troubling and ugly face of student ideological debate.

A group of Dartmouth students affiliated with the Dartmouth Review, an off-campus archconservative newspaper funded by the Institute of Educational Affairs, took it into their heads that an alternative political voice on campus had to be quelled. So in January a cadre of students demolished a shantytown built on the College Green with sledgehammers.

The 12 students who vandalized the structure built by students protesting Dartmouth's stock holdings in South Africa were dumbfounded to find out that the Dean had decided to suspend them. It seems you just can't get away with campus highjinks anymore.

The "Dartmouth Review" was not officially implicated in the act, but many of the Hanover campus felt that the paper's inflammatory stance on campus issues had helped to foment the ugly and intolerant mood of the transgressors.

Since is it independently funded, the paper has thumbed its nose at propriety and fairness and engaged in truly irresponsible journalism. In 1982 the paper printed a piece called "Dis ain't no jive, Bro" protesting minority recruitment at the college and slandered the reputation of a black faculty member. In 1984, a reporter for the paper attended a meeting of Dartmouth's gay and lesbian student association, and printed the transactions of the meeting and a list of those in attendance in the next issue. Nice kids, eh?

Well, now those 12 students who vandalized the shantytown are protesting their suspension and claiming that they are "the victims of discrimination." After all, being a white male in this morass of affirmative action and civil-rights legislation just makes a guy snap sometimes.

It should be noted that the builders of the shantytown violated no laws, nor did they ask for anything other than the freedom to be left alone and make their statement. Conversely, the conservative students, in making their statement, had to trample on the rights of others. I seem to recall from my schooling in history that there was a precedent for this sort of thing in Nazi Germany — it was called the Kristallnacht, and "a few" Jews got bashed.

Some might excuse this recent action as merely another chapter in the sophomoric stunts that collegiates love to play. But the students who so peremptorily took it upon themselves to stamp out an opposing viewpoint may well harbor political ambitions in the future. The 12 students have managed to garner the money and sympathies of the Heritage Foundation, always ready to stand up for the white male against the silliness of a heterogeneous and multi-ideological America, and Senator Gordon Humphrey (R-NH). At a fundraiser for the students' defense last week $7,000 for "the cause" was raised. It should be pointed out, by the way, that Humphrey's press secretary, Wendy Stone, is a former editor of the Review and her sister is currently the paper's managing editor.

When I was an editor of The Justice, the Brandeis University student newspaper, I wrote and published a story detailing an attempt by a group of conservative students to pack the editorial board of the other campus newspaper with a position viewed by many to be far left. There were some indications that the president of the Student Senate was amenable to the idea and the plan might go through during a closed session of the Senate.

After the story was printed, various persons on the campus attempted to have me suspended and sought to have me barred from attending my own graduation ceremonies. The president of the senate, in a telephone call to the editor-in-chief of The Justice, even suggested that I be deprived of my diploma. A series of phone calls to the Dean and the President of the University quickly quelled the megalomania of the conservative undergraduate junta.

I don't deny that there are dirty dealings among the leadership of liberal groups of all strata — from the U.S. Senate to the student leaders of Campus Democrats.

It seems, though, that the most egregious examples of the abuse of campus power seem to have come from students that call themselves "conservatives." I have no problem with honest political debate, and I respect the intellectual rigor of many conservative thinkers.

But I do have a problem with young campus Turks who think that their political label allows them to do as they please under the rubric of "conservative representation." These students are neither fighting for a legitimate cause nor engendering the respect of others. There's a word for what they are — and that word is punks.

Parent aides needed

The Diane DeVanna Center, a private agency established for the prevention of child abuse and neglect, needs volunteers to work as a "special friend" with families under stress in the South Shore area.

Volunteers should be good listeners, have their own transportation and be available to parents on a weekly basis, both in person and by phone, to help them handle stress, give encouragement and act as positive role models. A commitment of one year is requested.

FROM THE GARDEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Spring springs into the headlines in March

Soon the forsythia will explode in exuberant fountains of yellow to reassure us that once again spring is here. If you can't wait for the sight of their golden blossoms, cut an armful from the yard, place in a tall vase and enjoy. Leaves and roots will form if kept in a cool, bright place and forsythia cuttings may be planted in a sheltered corner of your garden when the ground is a little warmer.

Spring is the swiftest time, when growth is most visible and changes most frequent. As the sun creeps northward, the birds follow in its wake and thoughts begin to stir of another season in our garden.

Jean Kilborn encourages imaginative plans such as landscaping with edibles. Decorate your light posts or fences with cucumbers, pole beans, or squash vines. A fence five feet high and 20 feet long translates into 100 feet of vertical growing space.

You might even consider edging your front walk with a ferny frill of carrots. Then, too, take a look around the kitchen where pots, pans, cans, and milk and egg cartons can be used as containers for planting seeds. Cover the container with a sheet of plastic after planting seeds and sprinkling with water.

Put your mini-greenhouses in a warm place that gets six hours of light each day, check periodically to make sure soil has not dried out and in six to eight weeks, they will be ready for your garden.

Just when everybody is sick of winter's pewter skies, north winds and storm warnings, along comes the New England Spring Flower Show, this year from March 8 to 16; Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Staff members and volunteers from the Horticultural Society are putting in 18-hour days, readying the 115th show at Bayside Exposition Center.

If you have a choice, visit the show in late afternoon or early evening — when the crowds are thinnest. The theme this year is "Enchanted Places," and the first sight to greet us will be an entrance alley formed by the golden blossoms of the famous Stone Family acacia trees. Guaranteed to bring on a severe case of spring fever!

Winter birds who linger at our feeders pause from time to time these days to vary their winter twittering with at least a fragment of song. Beverly Litchfield has seen flocks of cedar waxwings near the Ferry Hill thicket and flocks of robins along Winter Street in Norwell, but she's really looking forward to a first glimpse of the woodcock in a nearby field. Red-winged blackbirds and grackles usually are first seen in the North River marshes at the foot of Brick Kiln Lane in Pembroke.

Willows show a livening amber color, pussy willows are in bloom along the Driftway in Scituate and Jack Lawrence saw his first crocus in Randolph as he was driving through our latest blizzard. In his lecture to Seaside Gardeners of Marshfield, Paul Parent had everyone at Nancy Frazee's house jotting down notes on vegetable gardening. Now is the time, Paul said, to bring home kelp and seaweed from the beaches and oak sawdust from Greenbush where lobster pots are made all for mulching your gardens.

Gypsum and lime pellets can be scattered on top of the snow to enrich the soil, and did you know that planting tomatoes on their side — trench planting — will result in a much earlier and heavier yield? Or that growing lettuce and broccoli together does wonders for both?

He suggested Dick Raymond's new book with its 500 colored photos, charts and gardening tips, Gardening Year, as a wonderful source.

The Braintree Garden Club's 70 or so members are an active group, meeting each month at the Thayer Public Library. One of their civic projects is their memorial scholarship program in honor of former members Jean Silk and Mina Blazer. Applicants are asked to notify Mrs Walter Kennedy, club president. They learn a lot at their meetings; i.e., this month's meeting is on container gardening. They have fun, too, as they plan to charter a bus to tour the spring flower show.

Warren Harrington is a birder par excellence and knows just about all there is to know about avians, although he would modestly deny it perhaps. However, he confesses to having never seen both a red-headed woodpecker and a red-bellied woodpecker in our state on the same day. So, it was a most exciting day when he led members of the Brookline Bird Club on a birding trip through Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Duxbury.

The red-headed woodpecker has attracted birders from all over the state in recent weeks as it winters in Marshfield, and now that the red-bellied has been spotted off River Street in Norwell, birders will be making tracks there too. It's a female and is seen feeding in a red maple tree.

Both are familiar sights in the South but cause for comment among knowledgeable birders. Brookline Bird Clubbers also spotted a hermit thrush, Carolina wren, four rough-legged hawks, three red-tailed hawks, two harriers (sometimes known as marsh hawks), one kestrel — all in the Dwyer Farm meadows in Marshfield.

Experienced birders don't get too excited over the mute swans seen this past month in Cohasset and Scituate Harbors and most recently in the waters of Green Harbor. To me, these graceful, white long-necked wild birds are a noble sight. Those in the know, however, call these migratory ferrile birds "pests," who decimate the winter food supplies for the ducks. Sometimes, ignorance is bliss.

Mrs. Donald Bentley of Weymouth who has chaired the Abigail Adams Village Green project for the past six years, suggests you set aside April 17 when the public is invited to an "old fashioned fashion show" Costumed models will appear on the program to be held at 8 p.m. at the Viking Club, Quincy Ave., Braintree.

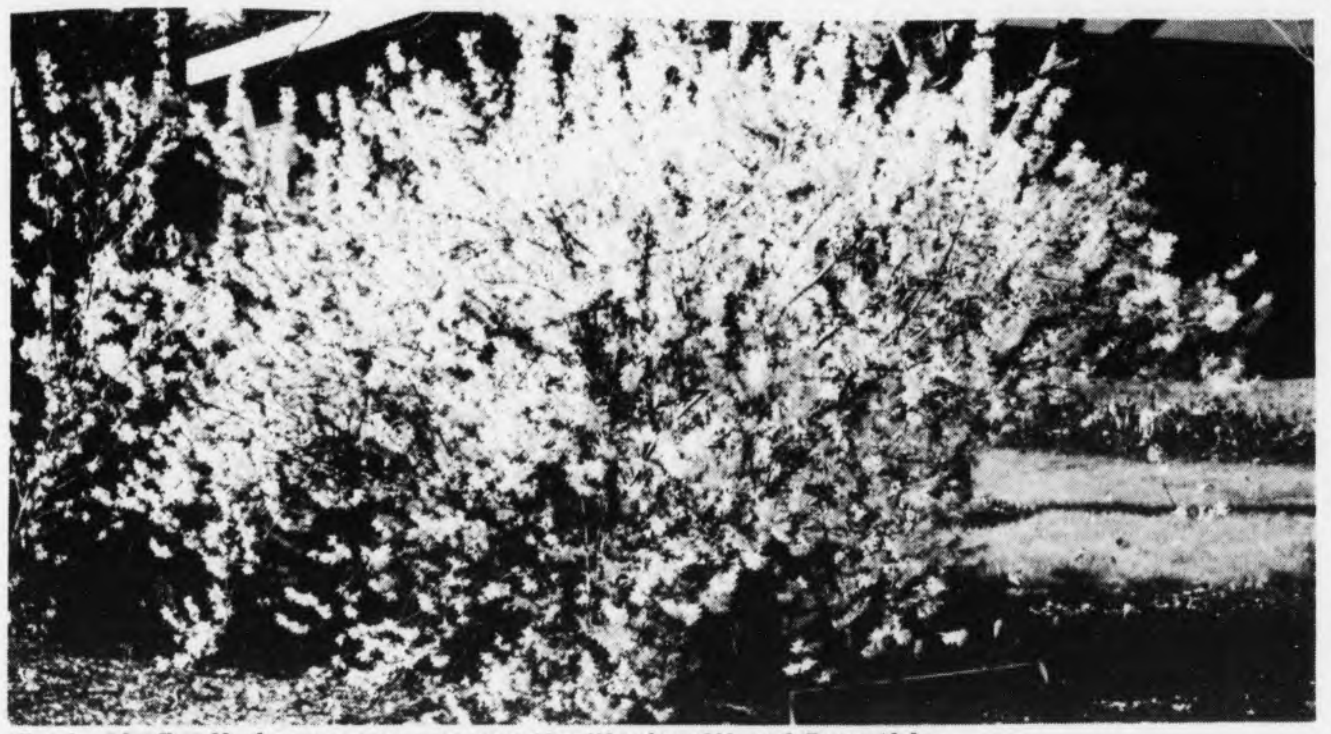
Beginning in late March and progressing week-by-week into June, the Arnold Aboretum in Jamaica Plain is awash in spring blooms. For tour reservations and fee information, call 524-1718.



Spring is finally here wnen you see the 'Spring Glory' forsythia.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

All Irish appetities come to surface March 17

This weekend the Irish (and some who are not), join in the "Wearing of the Green." Not only do they delight in meals with an Irish flair, but the traditional shamrock in one's lapel is a must when one sallies forth on St. Patrick's Day.

When the holiday revelry ends, the story goes that the shamrock should be drowned — removed from the lapel, placed in the final drink of the day and tossed over the left shoulder for good luck. That final toast could be Irish coffee — a bit of Irish whiskey in your brew, with a dollop of cream on top for a touch of glamour.Here is a light dessert to top off your corned beef and cabbage. This is simple to make and called

IRISH MIST MOUSSE

1/2 C. vanilla ice cream, softened
1 C heavy cream, whipped until it holds soft peaks
6 small sponge cakes or
1 3oz. pkg. lady fingers, broken into pieces
1/4 C. Irish Mist
Strips of orage peel
Sprigs of fresh mint

Mix ice cream and whipped cream gently. Sprinkle cake with Irish Mist. Fold cake pieces into whipped cream. Spoon mixture into sherbet glasses. Garnish with a strip of orange peel and a sprig of mint. Serves 4. Keep in freezer if not serving immediately.

A great way to start celebrating St. Patrick's Day is with a fragrant slice or two of Irish bread. The aroma alone will bring the leprechauns out of hiding. If, by chance, any of Helen Garvey's bread is left uneaten, it will toast nicely for the next morning. Helen got this recipe from her friend, Carol Kenealy of Milton, and likes it becuase it's quick and easy to prepare and more flavorful than many Irish bread recipes. The caraway and blend of raisin flavors seem to make it a little different. See if you agree that this is a tasty

IRISH BREAD

4 C. all-purpose flour
1/3 C. granulated sugar
1 tsp. each salt, baking powder, and baking soda
1 or 2 T caraway seeds, to taste
1/4 C. butter or oleo
2 C. raisins, combining brown and golden
2 C. buttermilk
1 egg

Sift dry ingredients. Stir in caraway seeds. Cut butter until consistency of cornmeal. Add raisins. Combine egg and buttermilk and stir into mixture. Work with hands. Add flour as needed to keep a good texture — not too dry, nor too moist. Shape gently into ball. Place in a 2 qt. glass casserole, greased. Cut a cross on top and brush with milk. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 min., lowering to 350 for 25 min.

Good friends, warm hearts, sparkling crystal glasses raised in a toast and a bit of the Blarney usually prompt the occasion for a few well-chosen words by the sociable Irish. Jack McGowan of Irish Distillers International says that the custom of toasting grew out of the Irish custom of giving a blessing by way of greeting, and so it naturally evolved that when friends and family gathered, a toast was given by way of a benediction.

As the custom grew, so did the variety and length of toasts, with the gift of the Irish for linking poetic thoughts and humor, evident in their toasts, as in their well-known: "May you have warm words on a cold evening, a full moon on a dark night and a smooth road all the way to your door."

For a festive dessert — colored green, of course —here is a grasshopper pie, a recipe shared by Cohasset's Red Lion Inn with Scituate Harbor Yacht Club ladies who prepared a very special cook book several years ago. Carol MacNeill and Nancy Callanan were co-chairpersons of the committee and just might have a few copies left if you'd like one for your collection.

GRASSHOPPER PIE

1 prepared chocolate crumb pie crust
1 13 oz. jar marshmallow fluff
1 pt. heavy cream
1 oz. each white creme de cocoa and creme de menthe

Whip fluff at low spped. Whip cream and fold in the liqueurs. Fold fluff into cream and fill a deep pie pan already lined with pie crest. Freeze.

A different perspective on the Kennedy family

By Peggy Beals
Mariner Correspondent

By Peggy Beals
FROM THE bookshelf

By next January there will be a new book about the Kennedys, a biography of the Kennedy family from the maternal grandfather John "Honey Fitz" Fitzgerald, Rose Kennedy's father, up to President John F. Kennedy's inauguration.

The author is Doris Kearns Goodwin, a small, neat woman brimming with vitality, quick to smile and laugh. Her credentials are impeccable — a graduate of Colby College, a former White House fellow, protegee of President Lyndon Johnson, an instructor at Harvard, where she received a doctorate in government, author of Lyndon Johnson and the American Dream.

She was the featured speaker at the Friends of the Scituate Library tea-with-the-author series recently.

Goodwin wore no jewelry or makeup, as though she has eliminated frills to concentrate on what's important. The Kennedy book — which runs some 1,000 pages — has taken almost 10 years to complete. Unlike many of the famous she has known, she sandwiched her research and writing in between motherhood.

"When I'm tucking my little boys in at night, I realize the world doesn't care when my book comes out," she told her audience. She said she has seen how easily people get sucked into the fringes of power, forfeiting their families and their privacy. "If one came to the White House at 7 a.m., the next would come at 6:30 and stay an hour later," she recalled.

While working with Ted Kennedy during his presidential bid, she obtained his permission to go through cartons of Kennedy family letters not yet documented, invaluable material, at the Kennedy Library.

"The job of the biographer, I think, is to understand, not to judge," she said. "I wanted to find out what the family was like before politics, about the first 100 years, how they kept the family ties so strong.

"Boston," she said, "is a delightful place to find old material. I found the exact questions asked on a Boston Latin test John Fitzgerald took."

By contrast, when she asked in California for records from the 1920s, people laughed at the idea of anyone preserving "that old stuff."

She shared a story about Rose Kennedy. One day during a conversation, she asked what Mrs. Kennedy's greatest regret was, expecting an answer about the family's tragedies.

To Goodwin's amazement, the reply was: "Not going to Wellesley College." And, Mrs. Kennedy snapped her mouth shut, indicating, "Subject closed."

Through her research, Goodwin pieced together a fascinating sequence of events which explains that remark made so many years later.

The Kennedy book, she said, is much different from her first one. Goodwin went to Washington in the 1960s as a White House fellow. In a much-publicized incident, President Johnson invited her to dance at the same time an article she authored appeared in the New Republic, advocating a third party candidate to challenge Johnson in the 1968 elections.

She became his favorite for a time, often traveling to the LBJ ranch.

Vividly describing a huge man with an overpowering personality, she said, "When he spoke to you, he stood so close he was almost on your toes!" He seemed to need to dominate, to break the independence of everyone close to him, she said. "He had a terrible need for power."

She described the ritual daily tour of the Texas ranch, with the current favorite riding in the front seat with Johnson. It was a heady position for a 23-year-old, with world-famous cabinet members relegated to the back seat.

Boring as it became, she admits to a touch of pique when, in turn, she was demoted for another favorite. What did Lady Bird think of these "favorites?" She was delighted, according to Goodwin, for they gave Lady Bird a breathing space to go shopping and spared her the antelopes.

Goodwin has much praise for Lady Bird and for Rose Kennedy as women who found the rewards of being married to powerful men worth the strains.

She described one dinner, with Hubert Humphrey, Billy Graham, the Johnsons and herself at the table. LBJ stuck his hand across the table to Lady Bird, demanding, "Lady Bird, file mah nails."

In disgust, Lady Bird did so, but Goodwin noted that her eyes were gazing on the ceiling, detached. "Ah cain always tell," Johnson said, "when Lady Bird is mad at me. She just flies away. That's why ah named her Lady Bird.

Goodwin said she suspected the filing included some good pointed jabs.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Spring is in Madam Zolar's stratosphere

By Claire McDonough
Mariner Correspondent

With spring lurking right around the next transit, I knew you astrophiles would be just mad with worry about your vernal wardrobes, right?

So I schlepped on over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff and asked her how the various signs should invest their spring shopping dollars.

After relieving me of a number of my own spring shopping dollars, Madam vouchsafed the following sartorial advice:

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): People are still pretty ticked off at you for what you did during the last planetary aspects, so you might do well to choose a wardrobe that will provide maximum physical protection. Consider camouflage patterns and helmets.

(N.B. It may break your heart to learn this, but the "Rambo" image is out — people have discovered that S. Stalone spent the war years serving as a guard in a Swiss girls' school. I consider this unfair, as the Viet Congs did not get their hands on even one of his charges.)

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): You don't really care what you wear so long as it's expensive and everyone knows it. Buy tons of designer clothes, sew the labels on the outside, and have a terrific spring. You'll look marvelous, dahling, simply mahvelous!

GEMINI May 21 - June 20): Poor Gemini! It's so difficult to find clothes that reflect your constantly changing moods. Consider investing in a wardrobe of reversible tee shirts. If you are weary — for example, of being No-Nuke, you can turn your garment inside out and be instantly Pro-Nuke. With a little imagination you can be for, then against whales, seat belts, surtax, Gramm-Rudman, granola or impoted cars. Your friends will go bonkers, another nice plus for you.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Spend all your fashion dollars on a wardrobe of those over-sized clothes that are so popular. Not only will people think you've had a recent weight loss, you'll have lots of places to hide candy bars, sandwiches, and if, the clothes are really big, pizzas and baked hams.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): I hate to be the one to break it to you, but crowns and sceptres are out, and wearing bumper stickers that proclaim your own virtues is considered tacky. To present a regal appearance and inspire the respect you consider your due, try simple but elegant clothes made dramatic by a few pieces of really good jewelry. (Leo's believe that television's Mr. T wears really good jewelry.)

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): I have all kinds of fascinating fashion advice for Virgos, but I won't bother giving it to you. You'll be so busy lovingly cleaning out closets and bureau drawers and washing and ironing last year's wardrobe before throwing it away, that you may never find time to shop, and you certainly will never find time to wear your new clothes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): I know it's painful to hear, but you really shouldn't wear wedding garments everywhere. If the occasion arises you'll have plenty of time to go home and change. If you're missing any of your gold jewelry, check out your Leo acquaintances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Scorpios love to be mysterious, and are often found wearing jeweled daggers, cloaks and masks. Avoid Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck masks — they definitely aren't you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21): Madam Zolar finds it as difficult to advise Sagittarians as Virgos. In your case, her advice is apt to be useless because, although you will spend a great deal of money on new spring fashions, you will never put any of your purchases away, will forget where you left them, and will wear last years wardrobe — if you can find it.

CAPRICON (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): You might want to consider incorporating a grappling hook and climbing boots into your vernal costumes. So handy for clawing one's way to the top, don't you think? Other than that, if doesn't matter what you buy. No one looks at you that often, anyway.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Dear Aquarius! Can I possibly convince you that peace signs, love beads and bare feet are no longer in? Settle for dressing to look like Halley's Comet. I know you consider it dreafully conservative, but your personality attracts sufficient attention. You don't need far-out clothes to do it. Trust me.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Your desire for drama and high tragedy is counter productive if you wish to look stylish this spring. Please remove the black arm bands from your sleeves and buy some bright attire. If you sob once in a while, people will still realize that you are suffering nobly.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Ignore any advice you have been given by a Sun Sign astrologer. She's just trying to finance her own spring raiment by writing newspaper articles.

The computer line continues to talk

Letter

To the Editors,

We have all probably received a "computer telephone call." You know, the kind that start with: "Hi, I'm your friendly computer and I have a ..." Depending on my mood, I have found them amusing, irritating or frustrating. I also just found out that they can be dangerous!

Here's how I found out. The other day, I got one of these and I simply hung up. About 30 seconds later, I went to make a call and found the computer still talking! A little experimentation showed that you cannot hang up on these things. In all, my line was tied up for over a minute and a half.

Granted, there was no emergency that time, but suppose there had been? You cannot get a call out while it's on. Calls to the telephone company got a "we know nothing about it" response. Maybe a concerted effort by several people might get to the bottom of what could be a real problem situation.

I have no objection to salesmanship, but this goes beyond the bounds of fairness and safety.

Thanks for listening.

"GRIEF, LOSS AND MOURNING" program, in Walton Rodger's Hall, St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset, Thursday, March 13 at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Edward Atkinson & First Parish Church. . .

bears, the responsibility for the governing of the church lies with the members of the parish.

"There is no hierarchy within the church," Rev. Atkinson stated. "The Unitarian Universalist is an association of free churches and fellowships."

"We can say proudly that our church practically makes a religion of democracy," he claimed.

A centralized Parish Committee operates the church, but it must do so within the church bylaws. The committee appoints the other boards but can not appoint or dismiss pastors.

At the annual Parish Meeting required in the bylaws, budget decisions and elections of officers are made. The highest authority is the meeting of the parish.

In addition to the 10:30 a.m. service, Sunday school classes are held at the same time at the Parish House across the street.

At 10:10 a.m., a program called Family Circle is also held at the Parish House.

This is a small informal gathering around the piano to provide fellowship, friendship and to sing favorite songs. Every six weeks a family service is held at the Meeting House.

To Rev. Atkinson, the youth program is one of the greatest strengths of the church.

Under the direction of Jane McGinnis, who has coordinated the program for the last six years, the senior high youth group meets weekly for different activities. They go to the movies together or do fundraisers.

Rev. Atkinson is particularly enthusiastic about the junior high program called, "Coming of Age."

" 'Coming of Age' is the Unitarian Universalist answer to confirmation," he said.

The program was established several years ago when the church realized that young people were often drifting away when they reached junior high school.

This program is designed to help kids understand their religion. Seventh graders sign a covenant agreeing to complete a two-year course.

But Rev. Atkinson emphasized, "If they don't complete it, they are not looked at as failures."

The requirements include visits to all kinds of churches to understand different religious practices. The young people must also perform services to the church and to the community.

Each young person is also matched up with an adult member who acts as a mentor and friend.

At the end of the two-year program they are recognized as "coming of age."

Currently 20 young people are participating in the program. Rev. Atkinson maintained that it succeeds in retaining youth in the church.

Part of the ministry of the church also includes a responsibility to the community. The church tries to accomplish this by making its buildings available to various groups.

"In the past year as many as 38 different groups met here," Rev. Atkinson estimated.

"We're hosting any activity that serves the community. In a broad concept this is one of the ways our church serves," he said.

Rev. Atkinson added that he would like to see the Meeting House used for a wider variety of community activities such as dramatic productions and concerts.

Rev. Atkinson is a graduate of M.I.T. and the Crane Theological School. Before coming to Cohasset, he served as a Naval officer and as a pastor in Stow, Mass.

Plans for elderly housing on Main St. will continue

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Despite a rejection from the Zoning Board of Appeals, local developer Wayne Sawchuk will proceed with plans to build 36-units of housing for the elderly on North Main Street.

Sawchuk envisions that if he is now granted a comprehensive permit from the appeals board, construction will begin within a year.

The appeals board denied a request by developer Sawchuk for a variance to construct 36 units of low and moderate income housing for the elderly on North Main Street.

Sawchuk requested a variance to construct multi-family homes in an area of town zoned for single-family dwellings. The developer has stated his intention to construct at least 20 percent of the homes for low and moderate-income rental.

The board denied the variance, saying there is not sufficient hardship to warrant approval of the project, and that the plan "raises some significant issues of public health and safety."

The developer will now proceed with an application to the Cohasset Housing Authority. Once that board, which has twice issued a 'vote of confidence' in the project has completed its public hearing process, the plan will turn back to the appeals board.

The appeals board will then proceed with a public hearing on the request for a comprehensive permit. The board, with input from all other town regulatory boards, will develop a workable plan for the project, complete with conditions issued by the other town agencies.

The zoning board noted in its March 6 decision that because they can not control whether the housing will be rented or sold, the focus of their inquiry would be whether the applicant showed a hardship as defined in Section 12.5 of the By-Law.

Minelli wants to stay in Cohasset

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

Everyone wants a piece of a winner and that's what CHS basketball Coach Eddie Minelli has found out recently.

Minelli has acknowledged there has been some informal talk from college administrators asking him whether he would be interested in coaching elsewhere.

But Minelli wants to clearly stress he would prefer to remain coaching in Cohasset provided he has some kind of a commitment from the Cohasset School Committee, preferably a long term commitment.

Money is not a factor here. Minelli wants to stay in Cohasset because he enjoys the support of the town.

It touched him that hundreds of cars and police were waiting for the team to give them a hero's welcome three hours after the game ended Saturday (knowing the team bus broke down on the Southeast Expressway.)

It has also touched him that many sixth and seventh graders have told Minelli, "please stay so we can get involved in the basketball program."

Another factor which Minelli cited was the recent decision by Head Basketball Coach Gary Williams to leave Boston College for Ohio State.

Minelli believes the freshmen and sophomores which were recruited by Williams were short-changed by his decision to leave.

Minelli said he would like to be in Cohasset next year for the Tom Larsons, David Shumakers, Mike Obviously, Coach Eddie Minelli isn't holding the Boston Globe. This special edition published the correct (and only) outcome.

Cruisers claim championship

By Lisa Shumaker

Two years ago at Brockton High School many unhappy Cohasset Fans were left wondering if the Boys Basketball team had reached its peak after losing to Cardinal Spellman in the South Sectional Finals.

They were wrong.

One year ago at the Worcester Centrum many jubilant fans were convinced this was the last State Championship for a long time in Cohasset.

They were wrong.

This year the Boys Basketball team, affectionately known as "Eddie and the Cruisers," did what no other Massachusetts Division three team has ever done before, they won their second straight state championship in a row. The boys have set many records this year, but this one is perhaps the most impressive of all.

However, the road to the State Championship was not as easy as it sounds. First, the major difference between this season and last was the fact that the boys were "expected" to win the championship this year.

Last year the state championship was a goal, but this year it was a requirement. Not only were the boys expected to bring home a championship, but they were also expected to win every game.

These expectations put tremendous pressure upon the team and were handled exceptionally well.

Oil spill contained

An oil spill resulting from a Monday morning fire at J.J. Henry's on South Main Street was contained in a brook that feeds into Cohasset Harbor.

The No. 2 heating oil spilled from the South Main Street building into the sewer system and then into the brook. Firefighters and pollution control workers from Jet Line Services worked throughout the morning to keep the oil within the brook.

The Scituate Coast Guard was notified of the spill at 5:20 a.m. Monday and responded to the scene. They remained there until they were sure the oil had been contained.

The fire at J.J. Henry's, a naval architectural firm, caused some damage to the boiler room at the building. The small fire was extinguished by the building's sprinkler system.

Limited gypsy moth spraying

The Tree and Park Department notes there is a small amount of Gypsy Moth egg masses around town. We feel that there will be limited spraying.

The department advises the public to have their property checked from a private concern, and that they be licensed and insured.

On other insects or diseases that may occur the department will take the appropriate action if needed. The town will use only spray material licensed by the State and EPA.

Any questions regarding the material used or insects that may occur, the department will advise you what action should be taken.

Please call 383-6789 from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The Town of Cohasset Tree and Park Department does not spray for mosquitoes. The Town belongs to the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project which handles all spraying of mosquitoes and all questions that may occur regarding spraying.

All residents should contact Plymouth County Mosquito Control at 585-5450 regarding mosquitoes.

Jet Line Services of Stoughton contained an oil spill within a brook adjacent to J.J. Henry on S. Main Street. The spill, which occurred after a Monday morning fire in the building, was contained before it leeched into Cohasset Harbor. (Carol McCann photo)

Two teens injured in crash

Two teens were treated and released from South Shore Hospital after the car in which they were passengers struck a pole on Beechwood Street. The accident, which injured Susan Barrett, 17, of 156 Linden Drive, and Virginia Nussdorfer, 18, of 76 Jerusalem Road, occurred Friday night.

The vehicle was driven by John Froio, 18, of 30 Surrey Drive. According to police, the driver apparently veered left and the car struck a utility pole at 287 Beechwood Street. The street was slippery from rainfall, police confirmed.

Barrett and Nussdorfer were treated and released from the hospital. Froio, and another passenger, Michael Gentile, 18, of 91 Aaron River Road, did not require medical treatment.

Car dealership counts

The Building Inspector recently reviewed used car dealerships in towns that hold Class II licenses. During his review, Inspector Edward Poskus noted that Beechwood Auto Sales of 740 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. had one car on the lot in March although the license allows six; the Car Barn had 19 cars on that lot at 574 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. The license allows a limit of 20 cars; Cohasset Imports had 21 cars on March 6 when Poskus viewed the site at 508 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. Their license is limited to allow 20 cars on the lot; European Car Connections Ltd. at 190 King Street had six cars on the lot. Their license allows that number of previously-owned vehicles on the site. Randy's Cohasset Auto of 190 King Street had six vehicles on the lot, which is the allowed limit at that business.

Coalition to meet in Cohasset

Solid-waste disposal, municipal-liability insurance and regionalization of animal-control shelters will be included in the agenda of the South Shore Coalition in its next meeting at 8:00 p.m. Thursday, March 20 in Cohasset Town Hall.

Coalition members expect to form a subcommittee to study alternatives to municipal landfills, including regional facilities and trash-to-energy plants. Members of each town's health boards, departments of public works and other concerned officials will be invited to attend.

Members may also seek the input of trash haulers and landfill operators when the subcommittee begins its work.

In its February meeting, members learned that towns can combine forces to purchase municipal liability-insurance coverage. Premium costs for towns has skyrocketed in the last two years.

In a brief written report, Hanover Selectmen Chairman Janet W. O'Brien, who had agreed to research the issue for the coalition in January, said Chapter 802 of the General Laws of 1985 authorizes such municipal contracts.

The Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association is compiling a package for towns that could be ready by April.

Hull Selectman John Silva proposed that representatives discuss regional dog pounds in the March 20 meeting.

"We're running out of space in Hull, and I imagine other towns have the same problem," Silva said.

Childrens Shop sold

The Cohasset Children's Shop, located at Cushing Plaza for nearly twenty-five years, has been sold to Kathleen Heyl of Weymouth. Luverne Messinger owned the business for 21 years.

"After so many years of nourishing this business (my baby)", Verne Messinger said, "I really feel lost- and even though I will be around for a while assisting Katie, the new owner, it just won't be the same. I will miss seeing the hundreds of good friends, many of whom first came into the shop to outfit their new babies and are now coming in as grandmothers."

She feels that success in small specialty shops comes only after paying close attention to the needs of its clientele. The Children's Shop has tried to provide an attractive and friendly place where customers can find helpful, trained salespersons to assist them in selecting the very best in quality clothing at reasonable prices.

Mrs. Messinger continued,"I just can't believe our good fortune in finding such an ideal new owner; Katie Heyl is young, attractive, knowledgeable and enthusiastic. Our faithful customers may rest assured that she will continue, and improve upon, the traditional fine service and merchandise that has merited their support over the past twenty years. And I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to the thousands of folks who have visited theChildren'sShop, whether once or a hundred times- and to say 'come in and meet Katie...you'll like her!' ".

Smiths, Matt Maloney type players, i.e. the underclassmen.

Minelli wants some kind of contract with the school committee which will give him some kind of security. He acknowledges that the school committee will change every April and every year: "I am subject to the whim of a new school committee." He would like the decision to be made as soon as possible.

Almost three years ago, Minelli was recommended not to be hired by School Supt. Eugene Crowell, High School Principal Richard Streeter and Athletic Director Clark Chatterton. The School Committee reversed that decision.

Now, Crowell will be leaving as superintendent leaving Stephen Hart as the new school superintendent and Streeter as assistant superintendent.

The decision to appoint coaches is made by the athletic director, high school principal, school superintendent and finally, the school committee.

"There is no question I want to stay here. My heart and soul wants to be here. There have been so many fifth, sixth and seventh graders who have come up to me and said they want to play for me. I feel it is important that these kids have direction," Minelli said.

Selectmen's briefs...

School facilities board

Selectmen appointed Robert Julian a member of the School Facilities Committee retroactive to July 1, 1985 to June 30, 1988.

Beechwood non-sale

Selectmen decided Monday night that a parcel of land at 282 Beechwood Street, taken by the town for non payment of taxes, will not be sold to William Dennehy. It is the policy of the town not to sell town-owned land, they stated.

In a related issue, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said the recent sale of the Independence Building on Elm Street had not been finalized. Town counsel has been unable to find a title reference for the building which was recently sold to the highest bidder for use as an office and residence.

Priority list of projects

Selectmen asked the Capital Budget Committee to prioritize a list of capital budget requests made by town departments this year.

Committee Chairman Ned Tebbitts explained Monday night that about $4.4 million worth of capital expenditures have been requested over the next three years. He predicted that unless the projects are phased over a period of years, the town will have to decide whether to override Prop. 2 1/2.

Tebbitts said he did not think voters are ready to vote for an override. But he added that such a procedure would be necessary if voters approve $500,000 projects for the town hall and police and fire station renovations, and $750,000 for the Milliken Field refurbishing.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said the town, because of its A credit rating, will be able to finance a $2 million bond over the next three years. The town's current debt total is being retired, he explained. With a $2 million bond, it will not be necessary to override Prop. 2 1/2, he said.

Tebbitts warned that even if the town borrows to pay for some projects, there will not be enough to cover the costs of all capital requests.

Selectmen then requested the committee submit a prioritized list of capital requests at next week's meeting.

"Town Meeting has to make these decisions - there are choices to be addressed," Selectman Frank England stated.

Gravediggers fee reviewed

Selectmen will delay a decision to change the fee for the town's gravedigger until the salary can be studied by the consultant firm currently reviewing the town's personnel classification system.

Selectmen previously discussed the problem of a Tree and Park employee conducting grave diggings and openings beyond his 40-hour work week. When the federal Fair Labor Standards Act takes effect in April, they anticipate a salary problem with the current system.

If the worker was hired as an independent contractor, he could dig the graves after work hours and on weekends for a separate fee. Otherwise, the town will have to pay him time and a half for the weekend and afterhours work.

Selectmen deferred a salary or fee change until the consultant reviewing the town's personnel classification system can look at the situation and make a recommendation.

No seat belt policy

Selectmen voted not to establish a policy requiring town employees to wear seat belts while on town business, or while riding in a municipally-owned vehicle.

"Why should we have a separate policy? That's ridiculous," Selectman Clifford Mitman said. "We already have a statewide policy. We don't have a separate policy on driving 55 m.p.h. do we? Why have a policy stating it all over again?"

Police and fire department would have been exempt from the policy.

By a split vote, a vote to implement the policy was defeated.

Building permit charge

Selectmen voted to require a $725 building permit fee from the architect selected to complete renovation work at 90 Elm Street. It is the policy of the town not to waive permit fees for any construction in town, even on municipal buildings.

Architect Paul Barry, who is designing the renovations to the elderly housing complex, waived the permit fee in his bid to the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she would have favored waiving the fee, but the project "will take a lot of Ed Poskus' (building inspector) time."

Advisors fund senior shuttle bus

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

The advisory committee Tuesday night voted to support funding for a new senior citizen's shuttle bus and listened to testimonies on the Water Commission computer, a new fire hydrant for Newtonville Lane, and a proposed bylaw regarding control of beach stickers.

Tony Finegan and Ray Remick, who operate the shuttle project for the Council on Aging, presented their case for a new bus. The Capital Budget Committee had recommended delaying the purchase until Fiscal 1988.

"I don't think it will last another year," Finegan told the advisory board.

"The bus is seven years old and has 69,000 miles on it."

According to Finegan the bus broke down at the Hanover Mall while transporting a group of senior citizens.

He also noted that the advisory committee had reduced the maintenance budget figure to $600 in anticipation of the purchase of a new bus.

"In 1984, repairs were $2,152. So far this year repairs are at $800," Finegan said.

Remick said the Council had $1,800 in its account for a new vehicle. Arne Gjesteby added that the Rotary Club also had $1,800 it was ready to donate.

The Committee decided to recommend a sum of $8,000 to complete the balance. The original article requested $11,500.

The advisory committee also approved a transfer request to the Water Commission for $1,000 to complete an evaluation of their computer system.

Sheldon Cohen of the Massachusetts Municipal Association has already completed the groundwork for the report, one thousand dollars for the written report.

The committee's recommendation on a new computer system for the water commission will take into account that report which is expected early next month.

The commission presented their reasoning for a new computer system at the meeting.

Currently the commission is tied into the town computer system by Data National.

According to water commission chairman Peter Pratt, Data International does not have the software to age accounts or provide a mail/merge function.

"All we can do is run various fields against standards," says commissioner Bill Montgori. "We cannot segregate against people who did not pay their bills."

"We are starved for capital," Pratt explained.

The commission has been trying to pay off a $359,000 debt to the town that was first accumulated when the water commission went out and bonded for millions of dollars in the early 1970s.

"Our biggest problem is that we don't have something that will give us a printout to tell us who is in arrears," Pratt stressed.

He presented a list to the committee compiled by hand of overdue accounts. Next week, following a mailed notice, the water supply will be shut off to those on the list not determined hardship cases or elderly.

The water commission also explained its position on the taking of Lily Pond Estates by eminent domain.

"It is much more of a threat to our potable water supply than anywhere else," they said.

Pratt expressed the fear that, "if we don't do it, a bulldozer will be up there within days."

In other business, Jeff Nothnagle appeared before the committee with a group of residents from Newtonville Lane to seek support for an article to install a fire hydrant off Atlantic Avenue.

A similar article was passed at Town Meeting last year which stated the residents of Newtonville Lane, which is a private way, finance the cost of the project themselves. The article was declared illegal by the Attorney General in February because of a contingency.

According to Nothnagle, the residents would receive equivalent adjustments on their taxes so they would

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

MAKE YOUR KITCHEN SHINE!

Most of our customers rank a good kitchen very high on their priority lists when looking for a new home. They'll consider the layout, the amount of counter space and storage, and the age and overall condition of the appliances. Even more important, however, they will see their new kitchen as the center for nourishing their family and sharing many meals.

When you're thinking about selling your home, take a hard look at your kitchen, and consider how to make it an asset. First, have any plumbing leaks or broken appliances repaired. It also pays to scrub the room down, paying special attention to the range and oven. Go through the refrigerator to make sure you throw out last year's onion dip and any other moldie oldies that look or smell offensive, and place a box of baking soda inside.

Sometimes little fix-ups can do wonders. Hang some pretty pot holders over the stove. Make some new curtains or wash and starch your present ones. You don't need a brand new, high-tech kitchen to impress buyers, but whatever you do have should look as homey and well-maintained as possible.

Advisors will wait on hydrant recommendation

not have to pay for fire protection twice.

Advisory committee members said this tax adjustment was not clear in last year's article.

Nothnagle explained the necessity of a hydrant for the neighborhood of eight houses and thirty-five residents.

Newtonville is a private way which is narrow and winding. Five trucks cannot fit up the road and turn around. It would take ten minutes to lay the hoses up into the neighborhood.

The houses built around 1890 are wood and stucco over wood. After the winter, the wood is tinder dry.

Nothnagle quoted Fire Chief Daniel Brock, former fire chief Martin Dooley and Captain Mark Trask, as saying this area may be the worst situation in the town.

Committee members expressed the concern that this would set a precedent for developers seeking similar abatements from the town.

A resident told the committee, "This improvement for a group of residents is going to have to be extended to another group. The town will have to take a more responsible attitude."

Some confusion arose over the dollar amount of the article. The request is for $53,000. Nothnagle told the committee he didn't know where that number came from. A more accruate number is $24,000.

Wording of the funding article also caused confusion. The article said it would be funded as a loan to the water department. The water commission said they would support any article to improve the water system, but not from their own funds.

The committee will listen to testimony from Fire Chief Brock before making a recommendation.

Richard Barrows, chairman of the recreation department, and Jack Worley, Recreation Director, explained a change in Article 34 regarding control of beach stickers.

According to Barrows, the article on the beach sticker policy was approved by the selectmen with the omission of a section putting the control of the recreation budget into the hands of the recreation department.

Barrows said that Worley supervises the payroll and issuing stickers. However, any money spent must be rubber stamped by selectmen first.

He added that on occasion there was no money available for the recreation budget.

"I intend to make a motion at Town Meeting to put [the section] back in the article," Barrows explained.

"We have administered the program for the last three years," Worley said. "The only thing that isn't running smoothly is when we go to pay our bills and the money isn't there."

Sawchuk to proceed with elderly housing plan despite ZBA denial

Sawchuk stated at the Jan. 30 public hearing that certain hardships did exist, including a 50 foot change in grade between the front and rear lines of the land, substantial ledge outcroppings within the premises, and a stream that crossed the entire width of the land.

The board noted in its deliberations that the characteristics of the land "are the same characteristics shared by a substantial portion of the RB district in which the majority of the premises lies."

Patricia Walsh of North Main Street demonstrated at the January hearing the existance of ledge and slope along most of the land in that same district.

"Accordingly, the Board cannot find that the condition which affects the Premises does not affect generally the zoning district in which the Premises is located, one of the tests for the establishment of a hardship under Section 12.5 of the By-Law," the decision stated.

The plan proposed by Sawchuk contains 36 units on 9.5 acres of land at 320 and 330 North Main Street. According to plans developed by Wallace, Floyd Associates, Inc., the project would contain 36 housing units, including 18 one-bedroom units and an equal number of two-bedroom units. The 36 units would be contained in eight four-unit buildings and two, two-unit buildings.

Testimony from abutters at the Jan. 30 hearing indicated that properties in that vacinity are plagued by drainage problems. "Development of the Premises with substantial additional areas which are impervious could exacerbate the drainage problem experienced on Cedar Acres Lane," the board stated in its decision.

Several Cedar Acres Lane residents attended the January hearing to voice their objections to the proposal. Last week, a meeting was held at the home of Laura Doherty at 36 Cedar Acres Lane, to discuss how they would continue their efforts to discourage the planned construction.

According to Doherty, many Cedar Acres homes are currently affected by frequent drainage problems. An additional 36 units in the neighborhood would increase their dilemma, she said.

At Monday night's selectmen's meeting, Donald McLeod of Cedar Acres Lane presented a petition and requested that selectmen ensure all town boards see copies of the protest.

The residents of North Main Street and Cedar Acres Lane are petitioning that selectmen convey the abutters' concerns to the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD). That state agency is responsible for issuing the TELLER grant which will be used to finance the housing project.

The petition outlined the neighbors' concerns about the negative impact the development will have on their drainage, water pressure, sewerage, traffic and water contamination. "We are not sure we have the power to stop his application to the state," McLeod warned selectmen. "Sawchuk is apparently pursuing to override the powers of this town. We want this evaluated by the right people."

According to developer Sawchuk, the plan will be reviewed by town boards including conservation, planning, health and the water commission. They will all have input into the final conditions ordered by the appeals board, he said this week.

At the January hearing, the water commission emphasized it would not authorize water connection to those lines on the property "because such connection could have a significantly adverse impact on water pressure problems already existing in the neighborhood, particularly for firefighting purposes."

Commission Chairman Peter Pratt also noted the applicant did not "speak to the issues of the Watershed Protection District in which the premises lies."

Regarding the neighbors' petition, Selectman Clifford Mitman said the concerns raised were not under the jurisdiction of selectmen. "But we will send copies of the petition to all those town boards," he said. "And we will see where it goes from there."

David Shumaker, pointing his finger upward, knew the outcome of the Cohasset-Frontier Regional title game.

□There's a new addition to the Cohasset Little League. John Joseph Andrade is a true "short" stop. He was born Feb. 28, weighing in at seven pounds, seven ounces. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Andrade.

□Congratulations to Jennifer Jackson, who swam in the New England Age Group Championship Meet at Brown University on March 6-9. Jennifer's relay team placed 1st in the 200 Yard Free Relay and 1st in the 400 Yard Free Relay. Fifty four teams from New England were represented in this meet. Jennifer placed 5th in the 500 Free, 7th in the 100 IM, 6th in the 200 IM, 6th in the 50 Back and 7th in the 100 Free. A high fever and flu symptoms kept Jennifer from swimming her three favorite events on Sunday. After a three week break, Jennifer will start training for the Long Course Championships in August. The best of luck for the up-coming season, and here's hoping there is no more flu!

□Walt Sweeney received quite a commendation from Governor Dukakis last week, in the form of a letter. In it he stated what an outstanding job he is doing in his battle of kids staying away from drugs. "You reached those kids in a way I never could, effectively communicating the dangerous and insidious nature of apparently 'casual' contact with drugs and alcohol. I admire your courage and commitment to helping others, and am grateful for your willingness to work with us and do other events with me." Everyone is certainly proud of Walt's efforts, and here's to his continued good works in his battle against drug and alcohol abuse.

□We welcome new little "Cohassetites" that were born recently. . .John and Sylvia Paradiso became the parents of a son, born on March 2; and James and Karla Watts had a daughter born to them on March 6. Nice to see the town filling up with little ones, isn't it?!

□Congratulations to our basketball team as they did it again, and were "crowned" champs of the State in our division. Nice to see that all of their hard work paid off. We should all be very proud of them. Be sure to tell them how you enjoyed the season when you see them!

□If you are wondering where all of the goldfish that are supposed to be in the common duck pond have disappeared to, blame that lone seagull that stands on the rock in the middle. It was spotted tossing them down by the "beakfull" last week!

□We certainly will be represented at the Republican Convention on April 12! Patricia and Raymnond Buckley, Jonathan R. Creighton, George Marlette, Lillian Murray, Nancy O'Toole and Burtram Pratt will be delegates for it, as well as Mary Jeanette Murray and Massachusetts State Committee woman Polly Logan. A lengthy list indeed!

□Mr. and Mrs. James Farren of Stockbridge St. are new grandparents. Their son, Patrick, and his wife Laura of Wollaston, recently had a baby boy.

Daniel James Farren was born Feb. 28 at St. Margaret's Hospital.

□We welcome Jo-Ann Whittemore of Bridgewater as our new accountant, and wish her success.

□Good work, Jennifer Plante and Sara Deveney, Jonathan DeLima and Greg Knowles. Jennifer won the Grade 7 championship and Jonathan won the 8th Grade award, in the Patriot Ledger spelling bee. Jonathan will represent CHS in the regional championship on April 12, with Ian Browne as an alternate. Continued success, guys!

□Have you got any extra time on your hands? If so, why not consider being a volunteer to handle telephone messages at the Senior Center, located at 3 North Main St. If you are interested, and can spare even an hour, call Director Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

□Nice to see a good turnout for the Cohasset Sports Award Night, held by the Cohasset Boosters. The club really works hard to reward our athletes for all of their time and efforts, and the kids are always appreciative. Congratulations to all of the award winners (as voted by fellow teammates).

□How would you like to get a picture of your daughter standing outside of Gucci holding up her credit cards? That's what Ken and Sue Fone received from Joanna last week, isn't that maavel-ous? They really got a kick out of seeing it, she certainly is enjoying her semester in Rome!

□ Jeffrey C. O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neill received a Varsity Letter in Hockey at the Belmont Hill School. O'Neill attends Belmont Hill as a five-day boarder, a program which permits students to live at the school from Monday through Thursday and to be with their families on weekends.

□ Carla Lucas is doing splendidly...she is a member of the Wheaton basketball team and they have made it to the State Tournament, which she feels they will do well in. Carla loves the college life, and reports that she will be playing softball this spring (it starts the day after the basketball season ends!) She is also working in the Athletic Department, answering phones, running errands, typing, etc. (a job that she did admirably at CHS when she was a student there!). She can't wait until next year, when her team will face John Anderson's team ..."it's going to feel so weird."

□Paul and Karen Laugelle of 96 Pleasant St. had a boy born Feb. 16 at the South Shore Hospital.

□Keep your news coming, its fun for all.

Cohasset recreation news. . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the ninth annual Easter Egg Hunt, for children 3 thru 11 years of age, Saturday, March 29, at noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

This year there is a distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand to help out with the hunt. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt, as well as the other attractions.

Children will be divided into separate chronological groups: Group 1- ages 3 and 4 (with parent); Group 2- ages 5-7 and Group 3- ages 8-11.

Please gather around your designated area sign before 12:00. Bring a small paper bag or container for your candy. Rain date: Saturday, April 5, noon at the Deer Hill School.

After School Game Program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a boys' and girls' after school sports and games program for kindergarten thru third grade at the Deer Hill School gym beginning Mondays and Fridays March 24 and 28.

Kindergarten and first grade will meet on Mondays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. and second and third graders will meet Fridays from 3 to 4:30 p.m.

Various low-organized games, team sports and group activities will be offered each week by Recreation Department supervisors. The fee for registration is $6 for the six-week program.

If interested call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 for registration. Groups will be limited in size.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes, to be taught by Laurie Ann Clevland. All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall in Scituate, and will begin Sunday, April 6. Beginner training classes will be held at 6:30 p.m.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice, pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered: proper use of voice commands, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience.

An intermediate/advanced class will be held at 7:30 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Dept. Beginner class.

For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed! It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions. For all classes: the fee is $17 per dog for the eight week, one-hour program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age.

To register please call Recreation Dept. at 383-6791.

Editorial

We are the champs

We won. Twice. State champions. Two undefeated seasons in Division III play. Unbelievable.

Think about that for a moment. These relatively small players, from a very small community, in a really small high school, brought us the state title two years in a row. Terrific.

This is the team that has everyone talking. They were exciting, talented, spirited, bold, and intelligent. And they are the champs. Inspiring.

But you know, they're not the talk of just our town. People in other communities are having their say about the Cruisers. Naturally.

Why, just Sunday morning, a Scituate man came up to one of the Mariner reporters and said dejectedly, "gee, I guess Cohasset lost Saturday."

Looosssssss? A word that has never been uttered from the lips of Coach Eddie Minelli? Impossible.

But there it was. After Channels 4,5, and 7 told us Saturday night the Cruisers had creamed Frontier, we woke up to find the real truth. The Sunday edition of the Boston Globe stated the Cohasset team lost to the Western Massachusetts school. Right there on the front page. No way.

Were we just dreaming? Is the only reality the Boston Globe? Get outta here.

Thankfully, (newspaper people being what they are) they had the wrong score on the front page and the correct results on the inside story. Phew!

And here we sit, on top of the world. Little old Cohasset. The state champs.

Rocco Laugelle said at Monday night's selectmen's meeting that this very special team should be honored by the entire town in a very special way. A ticker tape parade? This isn't exactly Wall Street. A banquet for the team? It's been done before.

The collective brains of the town officials couldn't quite decide on the perfect way to salute these kids.

If anyone has any suggestions as to how the town should celebrate this tremendous team, let's hear about them. Let's involve the entire town who has silently and quite loudly at times, supported this team throughout the season.

Let's plan a great celebration for a great bunch of kids. Think.

Cohasset spirit was in full force Saturday at the Worcester Centrum, aided by cheerleaders and hometown fans.

Let's hear your ideas on honoring the

CHS basketball team.

Sewer commisioners invest in a lemon

Letters

To the Editor:

It's a good thing the sewer commissioners aren't looking after transportation. They'd have convinced the town that $12,000 for a new and reliable Chevrolet was too much even though $10,000 was funded by the state and only $2,000 by Cohasset, and would have convinced the town to spend $500 studying an innovative pedal-powered vehicle. Glowing promises for funding would have dazzled the voters, including promises that those not served by the vehicle would get state funded pogo sticks.

Finally, after repeated warnings by the state, it would have to be accepted that pedal power and pogo sticks won't work. So our heroic Sewer Commission would return to us, full of pride, to announce that they'd bought a small share in a used Edsel in poor condition for only $3,000 and a share in its operating and maintenance costs. The state would fund the ramp to get into the Edsel, but would not fund our share of the Edsel.

Unfortunately, our share of the Edsel won't carry as many people as the wholly-owned Chevrolet would have (even though our share costs $1,000 more than the unfunded part of the Chevrolet would have), and delusions about funding for pogo sticks has evaporated. Unhappiness about this would be haughtily dismissed by the Sewer Commission as the feelings of ingrates who don't appreciate the commission's commitment to cost effectiveness.

Some think we can fix up the existing Model T. (Younger residents can ask parents or grandparents what is a Model T.) But its carrying capacity can't be increased enough without encroaching on the sacred wetlands, so maybe we'll have to learn to live with the Edsel. Unless somebody is smart enough to go back and recompare the long term bottom line costs of a new Chevrolet versus a piece of a used Edsel (not neglecting operating and maintenance costs.)

Selectmen and commissioners bumbling

To the Editor:

A few days prior to the town meeting on June 18 and 19, 1984, the Selectmen rejected a proposed article which would have given voters a choice of proceeding with the Ward Plan, returning to the M&E Plan, or perhaps doing nothing. The article would have reopened the discussion of the relative merits of the two plans — the M&E Plan versus what the Ward Plan had become — and would have provided the opportunity for badly needed and perceptive questioning, and hence the opportunity to properly inform those who might have attended such a debate.

After all, the pretence of the town was that it was merely investigating alternatives, not turning its back on the Agreement for Judgment. (See letter Henderson to Rogers August 30, 1983.) The town thus should have continued to make objective comparisons, as would any well run business. The "comparisons" peddled by the Sewer Commission were wildly inaccurate.

But the Selectmen voted to use the article essentially as composed by the Sewer Commissioners, which in effect gave voters a simple choice — vote "yes" to proceed with the Ward Plan or vote "no" and be subject to a fine of perhaps $2,000 or more per day for failure to proceed along some constructive path.

The Selectmen (and the Advisory Board) endorsed the Ward Plan, presumably because the Sewer Advisory Committee (selected by the Sewer Commission) had endorsed it! Sort of like elephants, with each trunk firmly grasping the tail of the preceding elephant, bumbling in a circle.

Perhaps the vote would have been to proceed with the Ward Plan, given the hype, the misinformation, the abhorrence of the M&E Plan, the uninformed who still think we can escape cheaply, the decentralized few who see the merits of the M&E Plan as greater than those of the Ward Plan, the devoted gaggle of lemmings for the Ward Plan, the late hour, etc.

But, had an opportunity been provided, and recognized, then perhaps there would have been useful discussion, so at least the vote to proceed would not have been with such joyous innocence. A little doubt, trepidation, and unhappiness would have prepared the town for bitter fruits it will have to chew on soon.

So intrigued was I by these and preceding shenanigans that I put together an 80 page treatise entitled "The Sewer Follies of Cohasset", and distributed about 130 copies to those who currently had elected positions, or who had been identified to me as interested and active in town affairs. Naively, I expected that a few of these would react with a "Hey, what's going on here — let's get some truth and common sense back into the process."

Well, 'twas like casting pearls into a bottomless well — no splash was heard. Oh, there was one response, about 18 months later, when I was collecting signatures at the town dump for Barbara Anderson's bill to repeal the surtax. A man with a pickup truck identified himself, and asked in an annoyed tone why he had been selected to receive the treatise. He didn't seem much mollified at being told he was said to be a public spirited citizen, gave me a foolish reason not to sign the surtax repeal petition, and drove off huffily.

Come hear the candidates

Once again, the Cohasset League of Women Voters is sponsoring their annual Town Affairs Night. This opportunity to hear the candidates declare their positions through an unbiased forum is one that shouldn't be missed.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 1 at the Town Hall. Refreshments will be served.

Don't miss this informative evening.

Skipper ski team slaloms to tournament success

The boys basketball team was not the only successful group of athletes at Cohasset High School this year.

After just their second season, three members of the high school ski team were invited to the state tournament Feb. 26, and later to the Bay State Games.

The girls' team recently ended their season as fourth in a ten-school Mass Bay Ski League East. The boys, who had stiff competition throughout the season, were named number five in that same ten-school league.

Thirty-eight students participated on the ski team this year, as compared to 14 last year, team coordinator Robin Suhrbier said. "Not everyone is there to race. Many of them just like to ski. They've never raced before," she said.

At the conclusion of the season, Katie Lord was asked to take part in the League tournament. She placed third in the slalom. The two boys, Kurt Weisenfluh and Mike Suhrbier, placed in the top third in their slalom event.

The following week the trio was invited to the Bay State Games. The official results of that competition have not yet been received, Suhrbier said, explaining the best high school skiers, figure skaters and speed skaters were asked to participate.

There's been a huge increase in the number of ski team members this year because, Robin noted, "Most kids love to ski, and you don't have to be an experienced racer to join. And it's co-ed. The girls team practices with the boys and we travel together to the races. No other sport does that. The kids really have a lot of fun. That's what makes this different."

The team does not have a fulltime coach. The tri-captains, Weisenfluh, David Caffrey and Jim Dormer, develop and supervise the dryline training prior to actual ski season. Suhrbier as the coordinator is responsible for everything except the coaching. She arranges the competitions and schedules the practices.

The actual ski practices are held at the Blue Hills every Tuesday and Thursday. There is a coach there to arrange the workouts.

Down hill races take place at Waltham's Prospect Hill every Monday. There is cross country competition every Wednesday.

The self-supporting team held a fundraiser this past winter to help defray costs of the program. Raffle tickets were sold. Prizes included skis and bindings, a boot bag, ski bag, a sports bag and a sweatshirt.

New tri-captains for next year's team were recently elected. They include Katie Lord, Adam Durant and Mike Suhrbier.

Cohasset is notable as the only local school with a ski team. Their competition is located in Waltham, Wellesley, Newton North and South, Dover-Sherborn, Milton, Westwood, Brookline and in Danvers at Xaverian Brothers High School.

It is a time of growth for the ski team, but also one of continued success. Suhrbier, for instance, was the only member selected for the state tournament a year ago.

The team's coordinator predicted the girls' teams will finish strong next year "The competition for the boys looks really tough, although they could do really well. Their competition is always tough," she stated.

The team concluded their first year number eight in the ten-school League. This year their standings improved to fifth.

Science teacher David Magnusson frequently attended the team practices at the Blue Hills. Acting as a chaperone on the school bus to and from the practice, Magnusson took advantage of the ski time while the students worked with their coach.

"They had a good season, especially considering their competition," Suhrbier said. "But the main thing was, they had a lot of fun."

State agencies telling us facts of life

Of course, the unfolding of events has been a revelation to some, although there are many still who sneer at the M&E plan, but when pressed reveal that they don't understand it, don't understand the economics, mutter about the high cost of laying sewers in Cohasset's rocky soil and don't understand that the size of the sewered area is the same — and think that the cost of laying a big pipe to Hull is insignificant.

But things are changing — more and more people seek me out to say they are unhappy with the Hull connection — but don't know who is going to take the lead to straighten out the mess. Those elected to handle the matter continue to exude empty optimism and don't even seem to comprehend the sorry state of affairs. They've still got a cohesive following that think it's the big bad State that's done us in — but Pogo said it for us 20 or so years ago — "we have met the enemy, and it is us".

Objections to my speaking at the recent town meeting were expected. I'd refrained because of that expectation, and only tried when it became evident that no one else was going to seek the hard explanation. What did shock me was that the objectors were not answered by cries of "fair play" etc., as one would expect in such a cathedral of democracy as the New England town meeting. It's amazing that at least one "constant talker" has tagged one of my defenders as "having a special interest," and another attempted to justify the objections, in this newspaper, under the banner of maintaining electoral purity.

Letters

Well, ad hominem attacks serve no useful purpose. What is needed is for some concerned citizens to get both informed and active — and not just sit back and hope that the hopelessly inadequate town meeting process will do it by itself. Nor should it be left to DEQE to remold the behavior of our sewer commission. It's sort of like parents abdicating to the schoolteacher the responsibility for correcting their children's behavior. If home rule is so great, why have the townspeople left it to DEQE and EPA to acquaint our sewer commission with the facts of life?

Public meeting for Wompatuck Park

The Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council and the state Department of Environmental Management will co-sponsor a public meeting March 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the park Visitor's Center to discuss the park's future growth.

"The meeting will serve two purposes," DEM planner Jack Lash said. "First we want to alert the public to park issues and get citizens' comments. Also, we want to get ideas for the park that we haven't thought of."

"The meeting will alert the public to the planning process that's going on," said Jon Geer of the DEM. "Public input is a main component in the planning process." Lash told the advisory council last week that different options for the park will be discussed at the meeting.

"We feel that we will be able to present options of the levels of development at the public meeting," he said. "I'm going to meet with engineers and legal counsel before the meeting.

Among issues to be discussed is the recent acquisition of federal land that was used by the U.S. military. "The park just jumped from 2900 to 3500 acres in one fell swoop of the federal pen," Lash said.

"I've talked to engineers and they say clean-up will be an 18 to 24 month project," he said.

The property, 604 acres in the northwest section of the park, contains several dilapidated buildings that contain asbestos, said Park Superintendent Robert MacKenzie.

"The federal government should clean the area up," said council Chairman Robert Garvin of Hingham. "They were warned that they were not taking care of the property by local officials and by the state.

"I think the proper question is who caused the condition," he added. "The state did not cause the condition."

The council urged citizens to attend the meeting. "It's nice to see some interest in Wompatuck State Park," Garvin said. "The DEM is interested in the growth of the park, and I hope the public will take part in the planning."

Cruiser machine stops at a state championship. . .

The second obstacle the boys had to overcome was a tough road trip to Richmond, Va. Here the boys faced bigger, stronger, and quicker teams from all over the East coast. Furthermore, many of these teams had already completed half of their season, while Cohasset had only been practicing two weeks.

However, the Cruisers overcame this obstacle and came away from the tournament with one tremendous victory and two respectable losses. Many thought these two losses might leave a mar on Cohasset's unblemished record, when in fact they became an honor instead, showing the Skippers could play evenly with any team in the country.

When the Skippers returned from Richmond, they faced even more hurdles to jump. Not only did the press of other towns give Cohasset a hard time, but other teams did as well.

These teams did not want to beat the Skippers, they wanted to beat upon the Cruisers. Teams like Sandwich and Duxbury began to show some muscle hoping to lead Cohasset into a full fledged bench clearing brawl. But the Cruisers kept their cool and as coach Minelli put it, "traded baskets for punches."

Finally, when the dust of the regular season cleared, Cohasset was once again on top and was ready to face some stiff competition in the tournament. Here lies yet another problem.

In the tournament, the Skippers hoped to face some tough competition in order to put to rest any rumors doubting the talent of the team. Critics felt that Cohasset had not faced enough good competition during the regular season and therefore could not be called a legitimate state championship contender. When Cohasset sailed by its first tour opponents, many felt that if tested, the Skippers would crumble under pressure. They were wrong.

The Skippers got their test Wednesday when they faced an unbelievably quick Lynn Classical team at Braintree for the Eastern Mass. Championships.

After the opening tapoff, Cohasset was stunned by Lynn Classical's incredible speed and athletic ability. The two teams traded baskets, and the Skippers managed to come away with a 16-15 lead at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Cohasset recovered from its shock and settled into its own game leaving Lynn Classical 12 points behind midway through the quarter.

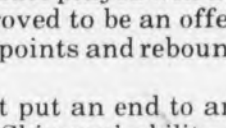
This was to be Cohasset's biggest lead until the final seconds of the game, as Lynn started hacking and led James Creed into foul trouble. Creed had to sit out the rest of the second quarter. This enabled Lynn to come within two at half time.

When Creed picked up his fourth foul early in the third quarter, the trouble really began for Cohasset. The Skippers managed to trade baskets with Lynn and leave the third quarter in a tie, but the problem was not in the score.

During the third quarter, Lynn turned the contest into what seemed to be a wrestling match or rugby game. The lazy officials benefited Lynn, for the referees let many of the fouls go unnoticed. Thus, when the fourth quarter started, a bumped, bruised, and banged Cohasset team not only had the task of winning the game, but surviving it as well.

Lynn battered its way through the fourth quarter and led by three points with about five minutes left. Then a Lynn-Classical player decided to tackle Tony Bogarty. Wrong move. Bogarty then utilized the old saying, "Don't get mad, get even," and sunk two free throws and immediately afterwards converted Bobby Shultz's deflection into another two points.

The Cruisers kept their cool and as Coach Minelli put it, 'traded baskets for punches.'



The rest of the Cohasset team decided they had had enough of Lynn's bullying, and the Skippers clinched the victory with a 10 point run which left Lynn stunned.

With four minutes left, Minelli called for a new press which rattled Lynn and caused it to use its last time out. Minelli felt this time out was Lynn's final surrender; for after this break, Lynn crumbled after Cohasset went up by 6. The Skippers finally won 71-59.

Minelli felt the victory was the result of an entire team effort with different players making outstanding contributions at crucial moments.

Minelli cited Tony Bogarty as having a tremendous game. Not only did Bogarty have 17 points, but he also took it upon himself to run the entire offense the second half when the crowd noise prevented Minelli's instructions from reaching his players.

Mike Smith, Tom Larson, and James Creed all had great rebounding games against much quicker opponents. Bobby Shultz had a few key steals and along with David Shumaker played well defensively. Bryan Edwards proved to be an offensive machine pumping in 17 points and rebounding well also.

After this game, Cohasset put an end to any rumors which doubted the Skippers' ability to play under pressure. Now Cohasset had one final and ultimate challenge to face, the state championship at the Worcester Centrum against Frontier Regional High School.

During the season when James Creed was used to being the tallest person in the building, he must have been surprised to see several Frontier players looking down at him.

Cohasset has not had to face a team with a height advantage many times this season, but Frontier proved to be one of the tallest teams in the state.

However, what Frontier gained in height, they lost in speed, and thus Cohasset led 30-17 at the end of the first half.

In the first half Cohasset picked away Frontier's defense, took away their offense, and played flawlessly missing at most, two free throws and having very few turnovers.

Minelli felt that because his team played so well, the Skippers made Frontier look bad when in fact Frontier is one of the finest teams in the league.

Frontier decided they did not want to run with the ball, and Cohasset was only too happy to oblige, beating Frontier with its own half court game. In fact, in the third quarter, when Minelli took James Creed and Bryan Edwards out, the Skippers went into their spread offense and slowed the game down so much that Cohasset held the ball for a full two minutes without scoring.

This gave both Creed and Edwards an opportunity to rest and kept Frontier from closing the gap while these two were out. Cohasset's patience and smart strategy eventually led the Skippers to their second straight state championship.

The scoring went as follows: Tony Bogarty had 14 points along with Bryan Edwards, James Creed had 13, Bobby Shultz had 7, and Tom Larson had 4.

Senior Bobby Shultz was pleased with the victory and felt, "it was a great way to go out." Shultz was also pleased with the season and felt this winning attitude carried over into his other sports, soccer and baseball.

When asked how he felt about his varsity basketball career at CHS, he simply replied, "No kid could be luckier to win two straight championships."

Shultz who has the opportunity to play at least one of his three sports in college feels this year's experience will help next year's team. When asked what advice he would give to next year's team, Shultz replied, "Take your own initiative. Keep working hard and keep striving for more."

Minelli shared Shultz's pleasure in this year's season and felt his team was, "playing as good as any team in any division." He felt his team set a standard this year which can only be strived for but never equaled.

Minelli is sad to see Tony Bogarty, James Creed and Bobby Shultz graduate and feels they can never be replaced.

However, Minelli is still optimistic for next season. He feels that although next year's team will not have the explosive power of this year's, they have a shot at winning the league championship and making the state tournament.

Minelli feels that he has built up such a strong program that the 3-17 teams of the past are long gone. Minelli is looking forward to working with a new group of kids next year and facing new challenges.

There's an old saying that says good basketball programs don't rebuild, they reload. Hopefully this saying will hold true for next year's Cruisers.

Shooting down the Boston championship theory

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

Commentary

Why do Eddie and the Cruisers keep on winning?

Anyone who answers "because of the Boston kids" should earn a trip to the nearest supermarket and wait in a long line for a half pound of pure bologna.

And that's putting it mildly.

Many a person has whispered in the crowds and in the media that Cohasset High School Coach Eddie Minelli has recruited all these kids from Boston which aids him to win championship after championship.

Not only is the Boston theory pure bologna but it also is blatantly racist.

To begin with James Creed never played organized basketball until the ninth grade. Tony Bogarty was thought of as a small guard and neither he nor Brian Edwards are the same ballplayers now compared to when they entered Cohasset High School.

First off, these players are students and it doesn't matter if they come from China, Yugoslavia, Hungary etc. Once they enter the doors of CHS, they should be treated as students and human beings.

Most important, Eddie and the Cruisers won because they out-thought everyone else. They became Larry Bird type players. The Cruisers play basketball the way it was meant to be played. They are in effect, scientists and craftsmen of the game.

Consider Larry Bird. They say Dr. J. (Julius Erving) is a much flashier player. But most experts agree Bird is the more complete player who can not only damage you with his shooting but can also dominate a game in rebounds, defense, assists, playmaking and also blocked shots.

In addition, Larry Bird outthinks his opponents, especially on offense. He keeps them guessing. As in a expert chessman, the opponent keeps turning his head, wondering what Bird's next move will be.

Cohasset's opponents were guessing all season. When the opponents decided they could not compete with the Cruisers on a physical level, they turned to brute force and muscle. But when tempers were raised, the Cruisers decided they would destroy an opponent on the court, rather than a fistfight. They traded baskets for fists.

Coach Minelli taught his players the intricacies of the game, both offensively and defensively. He taught them the basics of playing defense, rebounding and playmaking.

Minelli stressed that although their opponents were taller, it did not mean the game was lost. The Cruisers could still win by playing fundamental basketball, boxing out and playing tough defense.

The Cruisers did not play wildly or force up stupid shots. More important they did not panic. Minelli took each dangerous situation and made it a positive one.

His players knew there was a solution to each problem and in time the negative would be turned into a positive.

This is a tremendous extension of the classroom. Imagine taking every negative aspect of life and turning it into something positive.

Another constant argument heard is that the three Boston kids won the championship for Cohasset so it is not the championship of Cohasset High School.

It takes an entire team to win a state championship. I acknowledge three superior players could lead a team to a league title but winning a state championship takes superlative efforts from eight players.

Case in point, James Creed. Throughout the playoffs, the opponent's defense stacked three men on Creed, allowing forward Tom Larson to sneak inside for a high percentage shot.

Case in point, Bobby Shultz. It is acknowledged Tony Bogarty ran the offense. But Shultz was the perfect complement, adding speed, tough defense and a capable outside shot to keep the defense honest.

Case in point, the Cohasset bench of David Shumaker, Mike Smith and Matt Maloney. To keep the upbeat, fast tempo style of basketball, Minelli had to substitute freely.

Every year Minelli worried how he would replace his substitutes. He was concerned when his best rebounder David Barcomb graduated three years ago. Answer, he developed David MacDonald and Phil Bernstein to fill in the defensive and rebounding gaps.

Minelli was even more concerned when MacDonald and Bernstein graduated. Out of the blue came Larson, Smith and Maloney.

Many people are whispering Cohasset won't be the same without Creed and Bogarty. I grant you maybe the team won't be as explosive but I feel it is a good bet Cohasset will be in the basketball playoffs next March.

Why Eddie Minelli won is because he taught his players to play fundamental basketball. Then he took it a step further by making his players into smart players. A combination of talent, dedication, hustle, smarts and off course teamwork.

That's what made the Cruisers nearly unbeatable this year.

And by the way, the Cruisers are fine examples of youth today.

And if you're sick of hearing about drugs and alcohol on the sports pages, Eddie and the Cruisers should make you feel a whole lot better.

Easter lilies: It has been our custom in the past to display Easter lilies on the chancel table on Easter Sunday morning. If you would be intersted in donating a plant for our Easter Service of Worship, please call the church office, 383-1100, as soon as possible.

Ministerial Relations Committee met Tuesday, March 4, and welcomed Colin Studds to the committee which includes Dottie Booth and Sine Pounder and Ed Atkinson as well.

Our primary purpose is to serve as a communication channel between congregation and minister which strengthens the ministry and the spirit within the church.

We would like to hear from you regarding ideas and observations or concerns you might want to have addressed in confidence.

Our next meeting will be Tuesday, April 19 at 8 p.m.

Please feel free to contact one of us or grab us after the service to share your thoughts.

Parish Meeting: At the Parish Meeting it was voted to expand up to $15,000 for expenses related to our 1986-87 Every Member and Friend Canvass and Capital Fund Drive. Of these funds $10,000 will be used to employ the services of Mr. William L. Jacques as a consultant and administrator for the drive. Mr. Jacques is a Senior Officer with the Harvard University Development Office and has worked with fundraising for the Noble and Greenough School, Dedham, and St. Mark's School, Southborough.

During the meeting John Kornet announced with regret that he will be unable to continue as co-chair of the drive but that Bill Bell and Diana Kornet have agreed to serve in this capacity.

St. Stephen's

QUIET PREPARATION—A Quiet Day will be held from 9 a.m. to noon, Saturday, March 22. In quiet prayer, Bible reading, contemplative walks, we will begin to prepare ourselves and put ourselves in mind of the significance of the days of Holy Week and Easter ahead. The quiet time will be bracketed by morning prayer and noonday prayer with meditations on the hour in between.

PALMS AND PASSION—Weather permitting a blessing of the palms will take place in the courtyard of the church. And just as Jesus processed with a palm-carrying crowd into Jerusalem, so will we go into the church. Our song will be "All Glory, Laud, and Honor" accompanied by the carillon. Upon entering the church, the organ will pick up the hymn "Ride On, Ride On in Majesty" which we will reenact the stories of Holy Week. They will move from the entry to Jerusalem, to the upper room, the garden, and other places of importance in the passion narrative.

EASTER EVE CELEBRATION—The service begins at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 29, with the lighting of the first fire of Easter. From this is lit the Paschal Candle, the symbol of the light of Christ. This candle is processed into the darkened church, and from this candle the candles of the congregation are lit.

After readings and prayers, the altar candles are lit, the lights of the church are turned on, we hear the organ for the first time since Maundy Thursday, and all sing the Gloria. It is a dramatic representation of Christ's resurrection, the victory of light over darkness.

EASTER DAY CHOIR—The joy of Easter morning will sing out in prayer and preaching, song and organ, at both the 8 and 10 a.m. services. We share in the joy and shock of discovery of the empty tomb, the sign of the risen Christ.

ATTENTION ALTAR GUILD—Meeting with the top brass Wednesday, March 26, at 11:30 a.m. Bring your best polishing cloths!

After the meal we will enter the church for the stripping of the altar. This is the removal of all hangings and brass until Easter Eve.

GOOD FRIDAY—A Good Friday service will be held from noon to 3 p.m. The service will be marked by times of silence, readings of the Passion from the different traditions, a sermon and prayer.

Communion will be administered at the conclusion of the service from the bread that was consecrated the night before.

CHILDREN'S SERVICE—Children will gather on Good Friday at 2 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall to organ and chamber orchestra will feature soloists: Sarah Jones Avery, soprano; Sara deLima, mezzo-soprano; and Philip Lauriat, baritone.

MAUNDY THURSDAY—Maundy Thursday, March 27, will be observed with a Eucharist, Agape Meal, and stripping of the altar, beginning at 7 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall.

Boosters slam dunk for dollars

Come one come all to the Annual Basketball Boosters Club fundraiser to be held this Friday Night (March 21)!

The festivities start at 6:15 p.m. with the recreation league's foul shot, lay up, and hotshot contests which include grades 2-7.

Then at 7:30 begins the main event, a basketball game pitting the State champion boys' basketball team against the equally threatening team consisting of recreation league coaches and alumni.

The game will last three thrilling quarters while the girls' varsity basketball team takes a shot at beating the girls' alumni team in one breathtaking quarter of unforgettable action.

The alumni team consists of such greats as Nat Salerno, Tim Salerno, Mark Buckley, Al Buckley, and the "legend" Larry Hoogereen. Also, Philip Bernstein and David MacDonald of last year's state championship team will be joining the squad.

The recreation coaches include powerhouses like George Ellinger, Tom Trauwein, John Rolandelli, and Steve Golden.

At half time there will be a heartstopping slam dunk contest. (Hopefully James Creed won't be the only contestant.) Also at half time exciting door prizes will be given out including two tickets to a South Shore Music Circus production and two tickets to the Celtics/Detroit game on April 12.

The cost is a mere $3 for adults and a petty $2 for students.

The proceeds from the event go to support the recreation basketball leagues, junior high, J.V., and varsity basketball teams. Come and behold a night which you won't soon forget and support a great cause while you're at it!

Sunday reception for Rev. & Mrs. Benbow

Following 13 years of dedication to the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, Rev. and Mrs. John M. Benbow will be honored at a Palm Sunday tea from 4 to 6 p.m. at the church on Highland Avenue in Cohasset.

Rev. Benbow, a 1960 graduate of the State University of Iowa and holder of Baccalaureate and Master's degrees from Andover Newton Theological School, said in leaving his Cohasset service, "Serving this congregation and community for the past thirteen years has been enjoyable and exciting. The volunteer work of scores of members has made the church a vital place of worship and learning. I am proud to have been a part of it, and confident that the church will continue to live as a community of faith and service."

Rev. Benbow came to Cohasset February 6, 1973, from Union Congregational Church in Amesbury, Massachusetts, where he served while earning his graduate degree at Andover Newton.

He was ordained in June, 1965, while Minister of the Community Church, Newfields, New Hampshire, and holds current standing in the Pilgrim Association of the Massachusetts Conference, United Church of Christ (Congregational).

Known for his ecumenical work and civic activities, Rev. Benbow guided much of the development of Cohasset's popular cooperative five-church Village Fair at the Town Hall, village green and adjacent churches.

Rev. & Mrs. John Benbow

He has served as Chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Education Committee; Police Chief Search Committee; Child Abuse and Neglect Committee of the Coastline Council for Children and the Social Service Planning League. In 1979, he was the State and National Delegate to the White House Conference on Libraries.

Rev. Benbow and Mary, his wife of 26 years, have two sons; Scott, a University of Maine graduate who begins Columbia Law School this fall, and James who graduates this spring with a degree in Optical Engineering from the University of Rochester.

Mary Benbow, who also holds a 1960 degree from Iowa, is an Occupational Therapist working with learning-disabled and special needs children, as well as teaching handwriting, in the Cohasset Public Schools.

Area friends of the Benbows are cordially invited to the reception tea on Palm Sunday afternoon before they move to the First Congregational Church in Milton.

Fishermen find the insurance market troublesome

U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds of Cohasset has introduced legislation to ease the "crippling shortage of affordable insurance within the commercial fishing industry."

This bill is intended to lend stability and predictability to the insurance market, while treating fairly both the owners of fishing vessels and their crew, said Studds' Washington office.

"The key to the insurance crisis is the vulnerability of boatowners, and those who insure them, to huge settlements in cases involving personal injury.

"The legislation I have introduced would restrict the type of damages for which an injured crew member may sue — thus guaranteeing equitable, but not excessive, compensation for a loss," Studds said.

"Fishermen are today faced with the choice of paying for insurance coverage that they cannot afford, or of going to sea without insurance, which they cannot rationally do. They are the pawns of an insurance market over which they are too small to have leverage, but upon which their survival depends," he said.

Under the Studds bill, fishing vessel owners would be encouraged to provide the full cost of medical care plus at least $40 per day in maintenance payments to crew members sufferng an illness, injury or disability. Owners who comply with this requirement would be entitled to limit their overall liability to a list of damages specified in the bill.

These damages would include the full amount of wages and other compensation lost as a result of the injury or disability. A boatowner would not be entitled to a limitation of liability, however, if the injury were caused by his own gross negligence or willful misconduct.

Cohasset candidates corner. . .

Opinions by Gallgher

Recently, a coffee was held at the home of James Corcoran for James Gallagher, a candidate for a three year term of the Board of Selectmen. Approximately 25 persons attended, and enthusiastically expressed their concerns on several major issues facing the Town.

Pertaining to the extension of the Town Pier on Government Island, Gallagher, who served on the committee to study this project, agrees with the local fishermen's plans.

Using diagrams, he explained how extending the pier 30 feet straight out from the existing pier and installing floats along all three sides, would result in no loss of mooring in the Harbor. This plan would increase docking facilities for the fishermen.

"Most importantly," Gallagher stated, "this plan is much lower in costs. Cohasset should be able to finance the project with Town funds and eliminate the need for State or Federal monies."

Explaining why this is desirable, he said, "Any time we accept funds from the State or Federal government, we must abide with all regulations laid out by that agency. In this case, we would no longer be able to restrict parking at this area to residents only. The entire area would, by law, be open to the public. I feel this would put us at a distinct disadvantage, in that we would lose jurisdiction over land that has been in our Town's name for more years than most of us can remember."

Gallagher is in favor of the recently-enacted building moratorium in the Lily Pond area. "Unless and until someone can come up with an iron-clad guarantee that our water supply is in no jeopardy," he said, "We must do everything in our power to protect it."

"However," he continued, "I would like to see careful and controlled growth of light industry along the business zoned areas of Rte. 3A. If accomplished following the proper guidelines, new businesses would give our tax base a boost, and, also, enhance some unsightly areas along the Highway."

Of major concern to those attending the meeting was the never-ending problems regarding the Cohasset Heights landfill. Recently, citing harrassment by various boards, the owners of the landfill have filed suit against the town.

If the owners are not allowing any dangerous materials to be taken into the facility, they should not, in good conscience, object to these inspections," Gallagher stated.

In the meantime, he feels it is time to "get tough" with the DEQE by demanding better cooperation and help in solving this serious problem. He would like to see comprehensive testing of samples taken from the leachate working its way from the landifill's immediate area.

Gallagher's campaign committee announced an "Open House" to be held at the Red Lion Inn dining room Monday, March 31 at 7:30 p.m. Gallagher would appreciate hearing from citizens who share his concerns for Cohasset; and, more importantly, for those whose opinions differ from his own. "When I am elected I will be serving all people, not just the person who happens to agree with me. I would like to know all sides of an issue—pro and con, and I depend on my fellow citizens to let me know their feelings and opinions."

For information of future locations, times and dates of coffees, please contact Pat Gallagher at 383-0494.

Kasperowicz's message

In a recent release, Tanna Kasperowicz, candidate for a three-year term on the Cohasset School Committee said, "I have a perspective of the Town no other school committee candidate can offer. That perspective comes from spending three years at Town Hall and the schools as a member of the press, and many additional years as a publications consultant at Cohasset Public Schools."

If elected, Kasperowicz said the message she will take to the school committee from citizens is: continue to stand firm in your resolve to maintain educational excellence.

"Do keep your administrative salaries in perspective. The documented 38% increase in administrative salaries over a five-year period is questionable, when compared to a 17% increase in teacher salaries and a 30% decrease in student population during the same period of time. Whether we like Prop 2 1/2 or not, we must live under its mandate.

"Continue to support teacher sabbaticals. But do not support any of this at the expense of the program or the instructional budget, because it is in these areas which education takes place."

Kasperowicz said in 1990 we will have 1,000 students attending our schools, a 900 student decrease from 1972. Those numbers are going to substantially affect our varsity sports programs, our curriculum, our teaching and our administrative staff. It's going to be difficult, perhaps impossible, to justify or financially support the operation of three educational facilities."

Mitman's experience

Cliff Mitman, a candidate for re-election to the Board of Selectmen, is stressing the valuable experience he has gained in town government during his first term as Selectman.

"The Board has operated more effectively since the increase in size from three to five members," he said. "I feel that in the past three years we have developed better coordination among various town committees and boards. Having been involved in that improvement, I believe we can do an even better job in the future."

Mitman also pointed out the planning the Board is now doing to upgrade town facilities, including Town Hall, the Town Garage, and the Police and Fire Station. Since Mitman has been a Selectman, the Board has improved licensing procedures and has increased income from licensing fees.

Mitman stated, "Another example of better planning is the study, now underway, to set town employee pay rates in a more rational and consistent way." This study, encouraged by the Board of Selectmen, is being undertaken by the Personnel Committee.

Mitman feels it is important to the Town that there be continuity on the Board in order to carry forward the work started by the Selectmen during his first term.

Anybody interested in helping on the Committee for Cliff Mitman's re-election, call Bob Ciciotte at 383-6322.

Coffee for Gjesteby

The committee to elect Martha Gjesteby selectman for Cohasset announces a coffee March 23, 3 to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main Street.

Interested towns people are invited to come and share their concerns as well as discuss issues with the candidate.

Handicap Awareness Program

March 19 and 20, a program on Orthopedic Handicaps was presented to Osgood third graders by Karen Coyne, Cohasset's PSO Special Needs director.

Points of discussion were: causes of orthopedic handicaps (accidents, illnesses, prenatal factors); using equipment (wheelchairs, braces, communications, boards); adjustments made by handicapped persons to live in a non-handicapped world; safety in play.

Primary emphasis, said Mrs. Coyne, "is placed on feelings — the need of handicapped individuals to be treated with respect." The March of Dimes film, "The Same Inside," was seen by the children.

Part II of the "Orthopedically Handicapped" program will take place during the week of March 24. Parents are invited to attend any session. Please call the Osgood School for information on dates and times.

Excuses

Mrs. Silvia's fourth grade class made up pretend excuses for why they forgot their homework. Then, to make it more exciting, Mrs. Silvia let the class vote on the most outrageous excuse. The winner was Brendan Mulligan with a story about aliens that attacked him and then stole his homework. And then as they were flying off, they dropped it in the San Francisco Aquarium. A dolphin used it as a ball and it bounced and landed in the Bronx Zoo. A tiger pounced on it and it landed in an airplane going to Russia. When they saw an American name on it they blew it up.

There were lots of others, such as getting it confused with salami, and eating it in a sandwich.

Everybody thought it was a fun assignment.

By Jennifer Foulke

(Brendan's class assignment follows:)

Dear Mrs. Silvia:

The reason I don't have my homework is that three aliens attacked me and stole it. As they were flying off, they dropped it into the San Francisco Aquarium. There a dolphin saw it and thought it was a ball. It bounced it so hard it landed in the Bronx Zoo. There a tiger saw it and pounced on it and it landed in an airplane going to Russia. I never saw it again after they saw an American name on it and blew it up with a nuclear missile.

Scituate visits Cohasset

February 27, some fifth grade Scituate students with teachers Mrs. Nugent and Mrs. Pratt came to the Deer Hill School in Cohasset.

The teachers and students came to meet the famous author Lois Lowry.

The people at Deer Hill School were very fortunate to have such a wonderful experience. The children from Scituate schools told me that they like authors and wanted to ask Mrs. Lowry what being an author is like.

The boys and girls also told me that they think Mrs. Lowry is awesome. Finally, they told me that they really enjoyed meeting Mrs. Lowry. I sure did!

Troop 28 mourns loss of Barbara Pape

Troop 28 is saddened, with great regret, in the death of Barbara Pape. (Her son, John, had earned the highest scouting award of Eagle Scout with Troop 28 last year. John now is an active member in the Post 28 Explorer Program). Barbara had volunteered to organize and coordinate the Cohasset Country Fair on Cohasset Common as she had last year. She was a great asset to our Troop 28. We are all fortunate to have known her and will miss her enthusiasm, devotion, friendship and work, greatly.

There will be a scholarship fund established in her memory from Troop 28 and anyone who wishes to donate. A committee to handle the Trust and to set up the guidelines will include Joe McElroy, Jane Long and Arthur Lehr. (For any donations or info., please notify Arthur Lehr 383-0388).

The Troop 28 Scouts participated in a District Swim at Mass. Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay on March 15. They went camping in Plymouth for the rest of the weekend.

The Den Chiefs: Nicholas and Michael Lelecas, David Farrag, and Chris McElroy were given a Recognition Award and pin for their assistance for Cub Scouting at the Cub's Blue and Gold Dinner.

The Troop Committee will be setting up a date for the Scouts to go to see the Red Sox play at the Fenway.

The Scouts will be traveling to Niagara Falls, Toronto and Montreal, Canada this summer and hopefully will exchange ideas with Canadian Scouts. To help finance some of the expenses of the trip or scouting summer camp, The Friends of Troop 28 will be having various fundraising events:

April 5 at the Cohasset Town Meeting there will be a refreshment table of coffee and baked goods.

June 7, the Cohasset Country Fair on Cohasset Common there will also be a refreshment stand. Anyone interested in participating in the Craft Fair: with arts and crafts, antiques, collectibles and treasures can have a 10' space reserved for $20.00. Please call Michael and Pam McNamara 383-9706 or Joe and Mary McElroy 383-0505 for further information.

A conversation with Town Counsel Richard Henderson

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It has been said we live in a litigious society.

Attorneys are a necessary part of life as neighbors sue neighbors and corporations wage battle against competitors.

In a small town such as Cohasset, there is no less a need for legal defense when lawsuits are filed against the municipality.

Atty. Richard Henderson has been the town's counsel for more than two years, and an assistant town counsel for ten years. Last year, the law firm of Thaxter, Beckwith and Henderson earned about $55,000 in legal services rendered to the town.

Among the services the firm's three attorneys provide to the town are responding to requests from town officials and employees for legal advice, and writing legal opinions. Questions from the town's planning, zoning and health boards are often directed to the town counsel's office, he explained.

The lawyers must also review and advise on all legal contracts and documents to be signed by town officials. Contracts regarding a computer or telephone system will always be reviewed by an attorney prior to its execution. Contracts with engineers or consultants will also be scrutinized by the attorney's staff.

The most expensive service provided to the town is litigation and enforcement procedures. Litigation is initiated to ensure compliance with the town's zoning and general bylaws.

Litigation may also include a breach of contract, although the town is involved in only one such case regarding the 1981 incomplete property revaluation, Henderson noted.

Another area of litigation in which Cohasset's counsel is involved is the defense of its 'quasi-judicial' boards. An appeal of the board's decisions will necessitate legal defense by the town's attorney. Usually a plaintiff will appeal a board's decision based on a claim that his civil rights have been violated, he explained.

There are currently two such cases pending under the town counsel's direction. In both instances, the plaintiffs charged that town boards have not treated them fairly under the town's regulations and bylaws. "They claim this is a violation of the town's regulations and their civil rights," he explained.

In recent years, there have been three or four other similar cases, Henderson said. "One was against the conservation commission, and the other was against the planning board. With the exception of one, they were all settled before a trial or they were dismissed."

The fourth function of the town counsel's office is to assist in the drafting and review of all Town Meeting warrant articles. All articles for annual and special Town Meetings must be put into proper legal form by the attorney's office. Town Counsel will also be available on the floor of Town Meeting to answer any questions at the meeting.

Town officials have access to the town counsel's office after approval from the executive secretary. If a town employee or official seeks a legal opinion, the proper route is for that person to request access from the selectmen's executive secretary. The procedure, Henderson said, "works reasonably well." Since all bills for legal services must be approved by the selectmen, it is sensible that they first approve access to the town's attorney.

"The economic climate in Cohasset allows access to legal services for most people, and that results in the town having to provide legal defense."
—Town Counsel

There are times, he noted, when town board members need immediate answers and access to counsel. They are allowed in these emergency situations to contact Atty. Henderson for an immediate response.

"The building inspector and the harbormaster often run into situations when they need quick action and they come to us directly," he added.

Advice is not offered to town residents who call the office with a random legal query. Atty. Henderson and his staff will work with residents, however, if they need assistance in forming a citizens' petition for the Town Meeting warrant.

"I've done this recently," Henderson explained. "Because if a group of residents wants to get something in the warrant, I don't want them to be denied because it isn't written properly. I can help them formulate the article and that's it. At first I discouraged this practice, but then I saw some people were deprived of having their concerns heard. Helping them form a warrant article is different from dispensing legal advice to a private resident."

Collectively, the town's business averages two full days of the three attorneys' work week. That average can be altered by a particular court case, or during the preparation of the Town Meeting warrant.

Last week, for instance, Henderson tried a case in Superior Court during the day, and worked on the April 5 warrant at night. "But that's an unusual week," he commented.

The attorney noted that trial litigation escalates the budget of any town's legal counsel. An annual legal budget of $120,000 in many area towns is not unusual, he said.

Many towns, including Barnstable, Dennis and Brookline, have added a fulltime attorney to its list of employees. That would make sense, Henderson said, "if the person who took the job is capable of trying cases in court. If a town could retain a general counsel who would be capable of trying the most difficult cases, then it would be economically good."

Atty. Henderson explained that for his firm, that $55,000 annual budget must cover secretarial costs, employee benefits, and computer costs in his office. "And truthfully, with the amount of work I do for the town, there is a substantial reduction in the income we receive from our general practice," he added.

For a municipality to hire a fulltime attorney, there would be overhead costs in addition to his salary, Henderson explained. Secretarial expenditures and extensive library needs are but a few 'extras' that comprise an attorney's office. "If you hire an attorney without a full library, there's no way they can practice law," he stated.

There are alternatives to help reduce rising municipal legal costs, he explained. Among those alternatives is to discourage boards and committees to retain special counsel unless it is "absolutely necessary," he said. Currently, the sewer and the water commissions have secured the asssistance of special counsels because of the highly specific and technical nature of their litigation.

"More thought must also be given to what cases will be defended in court, and what cases can be resolved out of the courtroom," he added. Controls on access to town counsel, requiring permission from the executive secretary, will help defray legal expenditures for a municipality.

"Litigation can be controlled," Henderson continued, "if matters before municipal boards are considered with long-term economic factors. Then maybe some litigation will be cut down."

The town's counsel agreed the "economic climate in Cohasset allows access to legal services for most people, and that results in the town having to provide legal defense." More than ever before, applicants before a municipal board are accompanied by professional attorneys, engineers and architects.

In turn, these boards require "more technical assistance to make the proper decision," Henderson noted.

All towns on the South Shore are in similar circumstances, he added, as continued population and commercial growth spawns an increase in litigation against the municipality.

Most of the legal challenges facing the town are settled out of court or dismissed. Only two or three cases per year make it into the courtroom. At least one of those will be a tax appellate case, he noted.

Zoning appeals, and an open meeting violation comprised the remainder of Cohasset's court docket the past year. There are five cases scheduled to be called this month in Superior Court. Henderson is confident that two of those cases will be dismissed or settled, and perhaps only two will be tried in a courtroom.

When asked if the town was getting its money's worth from legal counsel, Henderson answered, "an unqualified yes. I rate my competency with my experience. I was assistant town counsel for 10 years and have been town counsel for two and a half years. Municipal law is becoming second nature for me. I am capable of trying cases in a courtroom and I'm knowledgeable in land title matters.

"As I become more experienced and capable, I like this type of law much more. This position is much easier for me now than a few years ago. I am enjoying it a lot more than in the past."

The town counsel previously worked in a Boston corporate law firm. He came to Cohasset 14 years ago and joined this local law firm two years later.

"I've spent so much time in this practice and in municipal law, I feel a certain sense of accomplishment," he noted.

Why not throw the diet out with the winter?

Friday is the 21st, bringing with it the promise of sunshine and warmth. It is cause enough for celebration and throwing the diet to the winds but could bring on a severe case of spring fever.

Ever ready with an excuse to indulge, her guests gave not one moment's thought to passing up dessert when Ethel Page set out this pretty, mouthwatering pie. As we happily savored every delectable bite, our hostess claimed no credit for the recipe, explaining she had come across it some time ago in a magazine. She added her own little touches such as brushing the crust with egg yolk and baking five minutes, cooling while making this filling for

CHERRY CHEESECAKE PIE

1 graham cracker crust from frozen food sections (brush with yolk and bake 5 min.)
Soften 8 oz. cream cheese
Add (beat in) 14 oz. Eagle condensed milk
Add 1/3 C. lemon juice
1 tsp. vanilla
Pour in cool shell. Chill at least three hours. Top with canned Comstock (or similar type), cherries or blueberries. Do not use Lite variety. Chill until serving.

Do you ever feel like throwing up your hands in despair after reading yet another article on good nutrition? "Eat fewer additives, less salt, less sugar, less fat and alas little or no milk or cheese." The list goes on and on, with red meat a no-no and eggs and butter off limits for those concerned about cholesterol. Then for those who are watching their weight, there are a multitude of fad diets and ways of counting calories (but the one I find right for our family is one movie star's simple way of getting down to the basics: "I eat well-balanced meals, but less than I used to. I'm always a little bit hungry."

The American Heart Association, located at 33 Fourth Ave., Needham, offers a booklet called "Healthy Menus for the Week." Here is one of their recipes called simply

FIVE MINUTE SOUP

4 C. chicken broth
1/2 a raw cucumber, scrubbed, unpeeled, sliced thin
4 raw mushrooms, sliced
2 C. shredded spinach, lettuce, or cabbage
1 tomato, cubed
1/2 C. leftover lean meat, shredded
Heat broth. Add veggies and meat. Bring to a boil and simmer 5 min. Yield: Approx. 1 1/2 qts. 1 cup yields 45 calories.

When our oldest son was born, I avidly read every book I could find on "bringing up baby." After studying reams of conflicting advice, I was so confused that I finally settled on just one to use as a guide. "Better Homes and Gardens Baby Book" was my Bible with all three of our sons. With the help of a caring family, a little common sense and the guidance provided by the book's suggested methods, I like to think the results were special indeed.

In today's increasingly unpredictable world, one of the ways of weighing the odds and exercising control over one's life is the belief that we are what we eat. At this season of the year when seed catalogues are arriving in the mail, a crucial part of every home garden is the vitamin-laden fresh vegetables. Shepherd's Garden Seeds, a catalogue from California, is special indeed, for it includes recipes and seeds and herbs needed to grow fresh ingredients for Italian, French, or Mexican dishes. Here is a recipe that catalogue features for

BROILED EGGPLANT

Slice an eggplant thin and spread each slicesparingly with mayonnaise. Then dip each slice in freshly grated Parmesan cheese, covering both sides. Arrange slices on a no-stick or slightly oiled cookie sheet and broil them on each side just until they are golden brown and crunchy outside and soft and tender inside.

Healthy indeed are the garden vegetables picked that very day and the first spring seeds to go into the ground are peas. Shepherd's has a recipe using French "petits pois," tiny sweet peas favored by European gourmet cooks and sometimes served this way

PETIT POIS SALAD

3 1/2 C. petit pois cooked in a little water, drained and chilled
1 C. sour cream
2 green onions, finely chopped
6 slices of bacon, cooked crisp, drained and crumbled
1/2 tsp. salt and freshly ground pepper
Toss peas with rest of ingredients and serve as a side-dish or picnic take-along.

So. Shore Hospice fundraiser draws area interest

When a cause is worthwhile, caring people in our community generously support it. On Friday evening, April 11, the second annual dinner-dance to benefit the Hospice of the South Shore will be held in the ballroom of the Braintree Sheraton Tara Hotel.

It may not seem appropriate to "celebrate" about care for the terminally ill, but the Hospice program has completed its first five years of offering compassionate, comforting care to those who have a great need for it.

One of those honored will be Dick Flavin of WBZ-TV who receives the Sunshine Award for the pleasure he adds to accounts of daily events.

The Hospice is not a place, but rather a program of home health care and supportive services for patients and families coping with life-threatening disease. Since its inception in 1980, the program has helped about 250 families each year in the South Shore communities of Briantree, Cohasset, Holbrook, Randolph, Scituate, Weymouth, Quincy, Hingham, Hull, Milton and Norwell. Care is provided by an interdisciplinary team of nurses, physical, occupational and speech therapists, a medical social worker, home health aides, a nutritionist, and trained volunteers.

During the benefit evening, awards will be given to two South Shore physicians, James R. Everett, M.D. and Albert L. Sullivan, M.D., who have served as Medical Advisors to the Hospice program since its start. The doctors will receive the Ruth Sleeper award for excellence in the field of health care. Sleeper, a Braintree resident, has had a long and distinguished career in nursing and nursing education.

In their capacity as medical advisors, Drs. Everett and Sullivan work with the Hospice team and with patients' physicians to consult on pain management and planning for care. Their involvement has done much to foster the interdisciplinary approach that is the hallmark of the Hospice program.

Gerald T. Reilly will receive the Community Service award recognizing his 30 years of involvement in South Shore business and service organizations. Mr. Reilly is founder and treasurer of Gerald T. Reilly and Co., C.P.A.'s located in Milton and Boston. he is a past president of the Quincy Rotary and South Shore Chamber of Commerce and is presently a Director of the Quincy Savings Bank and the Family Counseling and Guidance Center.

Sponsoring the Benefit for Hospice is the VNA Foundation of the South Shore, Inc., the parent organization responsible for fundraising and planning for the Hospice of the South Shore, Inc., and the Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore, Inc. The organization's offices are in Braintree and Scituate.

Tickets for the Hospice Benefit are $50 per person and must be reserved by March 26. Contributions to the organization are tax-deductible. For more information please call Barbara Ross at 849-1710, ext. 62.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Our passivity: A prescription for a Class III railroad

It is becoming clear, even to a dullard like your reporter, that the Dukakis Administration, whose transportation policies sometimes get bad notices in this space, is both honest and earnest in its stated commitment to bring the passenger train back to Southeastern Massachusetts.

That the commitment is twelve years late in arriving (I told the governer-elect exactly what needed to be done in a 31-page letter in 1974) is of little consequence: if he can pull this one off, he will set himself apart from his contemporaries on what for our region is the dominant issue of the day.

With the state at last serious about going to work on our transportation problem, we as a region have to be ready to go to work as well. It just could be that we have grown a bit comfortable grousing about our plight, lamenting our invisibility on Beacon Hill, and gleefully pointing out that we have been discriminated against since the absorption of the Old Colony into Masschusetts Bay in 1691. The moral choice, therefore, that confronts us today is: had we rather continue in such a vein to lament the darkness all around us, or had we rather light the candle of rapt involvement in the preparation of an exciting future?

If we make the enlightening choice, the first thing we need to understand is that our involvement in the preparation of our transportation future is very needed. If left to its own devices the state will pay boundless lip service to the need for our "input," and will assign us a pleasant Department of Transportation public relations person, probably female (were I truly the scoundrel some of you take me for I'd tell her name right now) whose duty it will be to keep us entertained while the state builds us the railroad it pleases.

The great danger there is mediocrity. If left to its own devices the state will build us a railroad that gets the job done after a fashion, but one that is conceived in mediocrity and dedicated to the proposition that no train of the 1990s shall do the job any better than the last train on the last day of June, 1959.

Proof perfect of intended mediocrity comes from the M.B.T.A.'s own "project brief" on the subject (thanks to Sen. Ned Kirby of Whitman for passing along the applicable document). According to the project brief the state (does the M.B.T.A. really have to get into it?) proposes to facilitate class III service, which in railroading jargon means a top speed of 60 m.p.h.

That doesn't mean the thing will ever go 60 m.p.h., it merely means that under penalty of the wrath of regulation, 60 m.p.h. is the ordained top speed. The next increment of regulatory definition, one that would cost somewhat more to build, would allow a top speed of 79 m.p.h.—a much more hopeful number, I submit, although still 31 m.p.h. shy of the 110 m.p.h. top speed in the Northeast Corridor from Boston to Washington. (I won't depress you by talking top train speeds in France or Japan).

The state's conception of a 21st century railroad with a 60 m.p.h. top speed is instructive in the task before us in getting our leaders up to speed in the body parts said to be above their necks. What they do not seem to understand is that in railroading, 79 m.p.h. is the standard national speed limit for both passenger and freight. (Higher speeds in the Northeast Corridor and on parts of the Santa Fe Railroad are a legal exception).

Seventy-nine m.p.h. in railroading thus corresponds to 55 m.p.h. in motoring. To plan a railroad from scratch and assign it a top speed of 60 is to come short of the 79 m.p.h. parameter by 25 percent. That is the equivalent of saying, "We're going to build you a $300 million 21st century highway, and we're going to plan it so that the maximum speed is 41¼ m.p.h!" There would of course be a motorists' rebellion come such a proposal; this proposal deserves the same. Only the fact that our people haven't had a train to board for nigh on 27 years and are unfamiliar with the capability of the technology prevents it.

What would another 19 m.p.h. in top speed really mean. Ten minutes a day and ten thousand riders a week in the year 2010! That's, of course, a guess on my part, but probably as close to the mark as the multi-million dollar study that you're going to pay for will come. The point is, if we're going to spend a quarter of a billion dollars exclusive of the inevitable operating subsidy, why not make our railroad excellent from the start? Must we keep throwing money at transportation problems only to build projects that turn out to be, as Rte. 128, Rte. 3, and the Braintree Red Line turned out to be, overburdened and obsolete the day they open?

Mussolini is said to have made the trains run on time whilst at the same time he ran democracy into the ground. In working democracies such as ours it always works the other way around: excellence if it is to be found wafts its way up to the heights where our leaders are. That is surely the case on the transportation issue, for I am perfectly convinced that passivity on the part of our brainpower (which, beauty aside, is the Old Colony's only real natural resource) will assure that the state will build us what its own project brief's railroading jargon accurately describes: a "class III" railroad.

A more detailed analysis of the project brief in a future column.

A variety of family themes worth recommending

"Let other pens dwell on guilt and misery." Jane Austen

By Peggy Beals
FROM THE BOOKSHELF

Families is the theme of thiscolumn, which turns out to be a huge umbrella sheltering almost every book in the heap worth recommending. Handy, that.

A Mother And Two Daughters by Gail Godwin. Not her latest, that's The Finishing School. Both contain families. I enjoyed the first slightly more, with this note on reviews. I'd heard both books reviewed, and the author interviewed on National Public Radio with no impulse to read either. It took B., the same reader who keeps an alphabetized notebook on all she reads, with code ratings, to get me to try them.

Lesson: the enthusiasm of one discerning reader is worth more than the hype of Madison Avenue.

The first is not, as I feared, some probing of feminine relationships, mother-daughter category. It is just a rich readable story of Nell, the mother, and her daughters, the Rebel and the Good Girl, over a period of several years. Some cohabitation if you'd rather not reach of such. North Carolina setting.

The second is about a 14-year-old girl, uprooted from her Virginia home to live in upstate New York with an aunt who covers her carpets with plastic to protect them. She meets an interesting Older Woman and develops a fast crush. Still, a good read, good characters, a marvelous eye for the quirks of daily life.

The only way I can work Death Is Academic in here is to say a member of my family took me on a tour of the Duke University campus, possibly the most beautiful in America, and the book, by Amanda McKay is set there. A B mystery, but diverting.

Voices From The Moon by Haverill writer Andre Dubus is a quickie about a modern family all snarled up in divorces but still needing each other. Recommended by P., an artist whose tastes run to the off-beat in work and reading. I listen when she speaks.

Light A Penny Candle by Maeve Binchy was recommended by S. of Scituate who sticks almost entirely to mysteries, so I knew it must feature steady action and attention-holding writing. On the nose!

A fat novel of a pale little London girl sent by her colorless parents to a friend in Ireland to escape the World War II bombs. Plunged in the midst of the boisterous, warm, caring Irish crowd, she becomes a person. The story follows her and them for some years. Good, satisfyingread.Punch says "The story gallops along and Miss Binchy does write beautifully." The Times of London: "Here, thank heavens, is a thoroughly enjoyable readable book." Add the Mariner's praise for a balanced threesome, and what more do you need?

Binchy has a new one I await eagerly. Families, Yes.

You who followed the television series Anne Of Green Gables, please remember that wasn't the only book. See also Anne of Avonlea, Of The Island, Of Windy Poplars, Of Ingleside, Anne's House of Dreams and Chronicles Of Avonlea. Also by L. M. Montgomery, stories about Emily, another lovable girl. These are available in paperback reissue.

Norah Lofts was fascinated by thefactthathouses endure, families come and go. Her generational novels give us the buoyant feeling of standing outside the relentless pull of time, which like gravity, is a law we sometimes wish hadn't passed. Pargeters is such a house, named for the art of pargeting, making molded plaster designs. The English house features these. This is her last, alas, but she leaves a lot of enduring good books.

To Prove A Villain, Guy Townsend airs the problems of Richard III and those nephews, who all deserve a statute of limitations. You may remember that in Josephine Tey's Daughter Of Time, Richard emerges with a white hat. "Not so!" says Townsend in this pedantic, poorly written rebuttal.

Worth note is its publisher, Perseverance Press of Menlo Park, Calif., which strives to offer a new line of old-fashioned mysteries. Emphasis is on the classic whodunit with no excessive gore, exploitive sex or gratuitous violence, so if cessive gore, ploitive sex and normal violence are your thing, watch for more.

Finally, Brothers by Beatrice Rubens is a very well written, stout novel about European Jewish families through some generations. If history books were so well done, we'd all be more knowledgeable.

Do you have "family" books you'll recommend to us all? A postcard to the Mariner P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, 02050 will enable your enthusiasms to reach us all.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Try coming to Scituate to watch Halley's Comet

"I don't know why everyone says the Boston Globe is such a liberal newspaper," the Dragon fumed. "There are lots more Democrats in Scituate than Duxbury."

"Are you making any sense at all," I asked politely, as I picked up the paper he had thrown on the floor.

"If they're such hot shot liberals," he continued, "why are they telling everyone to watch Halley's Comet from Duxbury Beach? What's wrong with Scituate?"

I shook my head and blinked. "Why do you care?"

"You have no vision at all," he told me. "We could make Scituate the Halley's Comet Viewing Capital of the Western World. People would come from all over. Business would boom. We could set up viewing stands with binoculars and spotting scopes on all our beaches. We could charge people $25 to see the comet and use part of the profits to hire teenagers to clean up the beaches and so forth after the tourists.

"It will put us on the map. Angelo's snack bar would probably get a four star rating. The selectmen would get national media coverage, and people would start talking about them as presidential possibilities. Mrs. Laidlaw would be able to sell raffle tickets to millions. People from all over the world would be doing Nina Constantinides' exercises."

"You know something?" I asked. "You're really weird."

"Oh, sure," he said sarcastically. "Go ahead. Find fault. Behind every great man there's a very surprised wife. Just tell me why it wouldn't work. Why shouldn't Scituate be the Halley's Comet Viewing Capital of the Western World?"

"Well, I began carefully, 'for openers, do you think everyone in the western world would fit on our beaches? And will we have enough bathrooms for them?"

He waved a hand grandly. "Details. We can work them out."

And I continued, "what's to stop people from coming to Scituate with their own telescopes and binoculars? Suppose someone looks at the comet without paying his $25?"

"Unauthorized comet viewing," the Dragon admitted, "could be a very serious problem."

He thought for a minute, then brightened. "We could make illegal comet viewing a misdemeanor and collect $50 from everybody who looks at the comet without a permit."

"Weirder and weirder," I told him. "Frankly, I think this is all just another stage in your campaign to get Princess Di and Prince Charles to come to Scituate. You think you can entice them here with the promise of a good look at Halley's Comet."

"And why not? It won't be back for 75 years and Their Royal Highnesses' eyes probably won't be too good by then. If they wish to come, they're most kindly welcome. And His Holiness, too. He'd probably enjoy a cup of coffee at Angelo's while he's here."

"And where will they all sleep?"

The Dragon shrugged. "Perhaps we should encourage all the developers in the area to go ahead and build all the single family dwellings they're forever telling their planning boards they're entitled to build. If you believe them, they have the authority to build enough units to house the entire western world."

"Of course," he added, "we'll offer our personal hospitality to some of the dignitaries."

"Well, I sighed, "if the Prince and Princess are coming, to say nothing of the Pope, I suppose I'd better clean the oven. And the shower. And maybe buy some new towels."

I noticed that he had resumed reading the newspaper, and I shook his shoulder.

"Are you paying any attention to me?" I asked. "Do you know if the Pope likes meatloaf?"

He looked disgusted. "Forget the whole thing. I've decided we don't want to be the Halley's Comet Capital of the World after all."

"Really?" Have you decided the bathroom problem is too big to handle?"

He shook his head. "Nope. The Globe says we should watch for the comet between 4:30 and 5 in the morning.

"If there are people in the western world who are sick enough to get up at the hour, Duxbury's welcome to them."

Ko Ko Island license suspended for violations

The owners of the KoKo Island restaurant have not decided whether to appeal a decision by selectmen to suspend their alcoholic beverage license for one day.

The reprimand could have been much stronger. An original motion by Selectman Diane Sullivan asked that the license be suspended four days during the Fourth of July weekend.

Selectmen made their decision Monday night following a public hearing in which the restaurant employees were charged with serving alcohol to a minor.

Glenn Davis, 19, of 125 Church Street, testified to selectmen that he was served two drinks while sitting with friends at the KoKo Island lounge the night of Jan. 11.

After being ordered out of the restaurant, Davis was chased by a police cruiser as he drove away from the parking lot. In their report, police said Davis was traveling between 70 and 80 m.p.h. when he was apprehended near Rosano's Lane. He was arrested for driving under the influence and a minor in possession (of alcohol).

Immediately following the hour-long hearing Monday night, Selectman Rocco Laugelle called for a decision. Despite objections from Selectmen Frank England and Cliff Mitman, who said they wanted to review transcripts of the hearing, Laugelle asked that selectmen forward a letter of reprimand to the restaurant owners which would be part of the establishment's files. "We realize what went on and we want you to watch the liquor business much closer," he told the restaurant vice president and manager.

There was no second to Laugelle's motion. But Selectman Diane Sullivan requested that the license be suspended for four days July 3, 4, 5, and 6 of this year.

"Davis has said he had two drinks there. This is not the first time this has come to my ears," she stated. "I don't think that (a letter) is strong enough.

"A death might have occurred," Sullivan continued. "I am very concerned about the lower King Street intersection and then he drove through another serious intersection when he was intoxicated. This is very serious."

Although Selectman Mary Jane McArthur agreed a one-day suspension was not severe enough, she suggested the board could not make its decision based on rumors that the restaurant regularly serves minors.

"Driving under the influence is one issue. This is another," she noted.

Sgt. Robert Jackson, the Cohasset police officer who apprehended Davis after an automobile chase, recommended selectmen suspend the liquor license for not more than one day, on the same day of the week as the incident.

Selectmen then voted to suspend the liquor license

Roadrace athlete crazy about running

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The course that winds along Cohasset's coast is fast becoming a local favorite. The April 1 Rotary Club roadrace has no problem attracting participants.

One of those who will be waiting in line for the crack of the starting gun is a Hingham racer. This will be his fourth Race By The Sea, the same year he began his daily running regimen.

But this year is different. Cohasset will be a warm-up for Patrick McGeoghegan as he looks toward another challenge. "I'm gonna do Boston," he says with an equal amount of determination and pride.

For the first time, McGeogheg will enter the Boston Marathon as a qualified runner in the 40 years and older category.

The road to Boston is taken one step at a time, as McGeoghegan recalls how this obsession with running evolved. Just four years ago, the 36-year Bel Air Road resident carried more than 270 pounds on a six-foot frame. He was ordered by a physician to lost weight. "I told my wife in October that I'd lose 80 pounds in a year," McGeoghegan says.

He began walking every day around his Crow Point neighborhood. That was strenuous exercise for this admitted ex-jock. "I watched all the calories I took in. And if I went over my count, I'd walk an extra two miles," he says.

One day, his then 14-year old son Brian, suggested he run with him. "I thought I'd die," he recalls, noting that a mile of quick jogging had him exasperated.

"The next thing I knew, Brian had signed me up for the Wompatuck 3.1 mile race. Brian ran in that too and he killed me. But the big thing was, I finished. I was near the end, but not quite the last one."

By that time, McGeoghegan had lost 60 of the promised 80 pounds. "He went from obese to thin," his wife Susan adds.

His eating habits were improving, his weight was

Cohasset dramatists win accolades in state festival

The performers in the Cohasset entry at the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival walked away without the top honor, but with heads held high.

After three days of "exhaustive" performances and competition, Director Ron Emmons, his performers and behind-the-scenes crew returned home tired, but satisfied. Their production of Michael Scanlan's "Candid" earned the distinction of being one of the top five plays at the state finals competition.

Special tribute was given to Andrew Glasfeld in his leading role as T.J., the photographer-philosopher in "Candid." Glasfeld was selected "all state" by the Boston judges who named a total of 15 top performers from last week's three-day competition.

"I'm very happy with what they did in Boston," Director Emmons said. "The kids got the recognition of their peers, and I gained the recognition of my peers and that's what it's all about. Being in the state finals, they were performing in front of people who are really into theatre."

Emmons noted that Cohasset is one of the two smallest schools selected for the state finals. Fifteen of the 72 festival participants made it to Boston for the final competition.

The state's top honor was given to perennial favorite St. John's Prep of Danvers. Another high school, Emmons noted with a slight hint of jealousy, produced an extravaganza with a budget of $4,000. The costumes were elaborate, as was the entire production, Emmons added.

"Our kids saw it all, from a four-person play with little or no props, to this spectacle. The winning show only had four performers," he said.

The director explained that traditionally, Massachusetts is a very competitive festival. Other New England states only invite a small number to participate, and others only attract 12 or 13 schools from the start. In Massachusetts, 72 entered the competition, and a total of 15 made it to last week's finals.

"So you can't go into the finals in Boston and expect to win. Not when you're competing against 14 other schools," he stated. "I would have liked to make the top three or two, but it was a very positive experience for me and the kids. They really did super."

Emmons has led Cohasset to the finals for three straight years.

He has directed the CHS drama program since 1975, weathering a difficult period until 1977 when the presentation of "Godspell" made enough money so the drama club could get a serious start.

This paid off in 1978 when the Cohasset entry went to the state drama festival finals, and in the following year when CHS was named one of the top two high school productions in Massachusetts.

Cohasset returned to Boston this season with a play that Emmons had a lot of interest and experience in. During last year's Rhode Island Drama Festival, Emmons saw "Candid" performed. At the time, he made a mental note to see if the play could be used by Cohasset in the future.

Say so long to former Chief Dooley

Former Fire Chief Martin Dooley is moving to Newport, Ky. where he was recently appointed chief of that fire department.

The moving vans have come and gone from his Summer Street residence as Dooley and his wife, Joyce, prepare to leave for their new home.

Dooley, 49, was appointed Cohasset Fire Chief in 1982 and was offered a three-year contract. Selectmen voted last year not to renew his contract when it expired Dec. 31. 1985. Their decision was based on the "management style" of the department head. They appointed Daniel Brock to replace Dooley.

"Cohasset has been an experience in more ways than one," he said this week, looking back on his three years as department chief. Those years were filled with public disputes and grievances filed by many of the union firefighters. "I look on Cohasset as an experience. My wife and I will miss our friends here, but we'll stay in touch with them. I look with a lot of enthusiasm to moving to Newport."

Dooley said the department is double the size of the Cohasset force. Newport is a blue collar town filled with industry. It is separated from Cinncinati, Ohio by the Ohio River and also borders Covington, Ky. The population of Newport is 25,000.

The former Cohasset chief said his starting salary will be about the same as when he left Cohasset "but the cost of living is about one-half of what it is here," he said.

The Newport department will be paying 100 percent relocation costs, he noted. He hopes to be moved into his new home by April 10, and will begin his new job April 14.

His wife, who has been hospitalized with a heart ailment for several weeks, has returned home. She is feeling much better, he noted, and is looking forward to the relocation.

"I've already been sworn in," Dooley said. "I'm looking at this new job very positively. Cohasset is all behind us now. My wife and I are looking to Newport with high hopes."

Athletic field use

All groups are requested to inform Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle when and where they will be using athletic fields, parks and the common.

According to Laugelle, "it is becoming a problem with overuse of fields and the conditions that they are left."

Milliken Field will be closed Sept. 1 while renovations are completed there.

Supt. Laugelle said because it is his duty to maintain the common and all parks and athletic fields, it is important he eliminate those groups that abuse the town-owned fields.

According to the superintendent, no spring sports organizations may use the fields (excluding school-owned fields) until he feels they are in best condition.

If anyone has any questions, notify Supt. Laugelle at 383-6709.

Notice to taxpayers

The second half of the Fiscal 1986 tax bills were mailed March 11. Payment must be received in the Collector's office on or before Thursday, May 1.

A 14 percent interest payment computed from April 1 will be added to any payments received after the May 1 deadline.

According to Town Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth Ripley, a number of property tax bills have been returned to her office because of an improper mailing address. Any property owner who had not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after May 1.

Taxpayers may bring their bill payments to the Treasurer/Collector's office Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 5:30 to 8 p.m., and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Cohasset Heights hearing

The Board of Health will conduct a public hearing Thursday, March 27 to determine if the commercial landfill, Cohasset Heights Ltd., is endangering the public's health.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the health department offices at 43 Elm Street. The hearing will be held "to determine if Cohasset Heights Ltd. constitutes a nuisance or danger to public health. Upon such determination, the Board of Health may act to rescind, suspend or modify the site assignment of the facility," Health Agent Joseph Godzik stated.

John Barry, president of Cohasset Heights Ltd., has filed suit against the town, the water commissioners and board of health members, saying they have overstepped statutory authority in their attempts to shutdown the Crocker Lane site.

The health board decided last month to review the landfill's request for expanded site assignment. The health agent noted that for more than a year, leachate containing various chemicals and compounds has been seeping from the landfill. The board members decided to schedule this public hearing to determine if they should rescind the landfill's site assignment, or approve an expanded site.

The board's engineers, Camp, Dresser and McKee, will issue a report at the March 27 meeting on all existing and potential surface and groundwater contamination from the landfill.

No junk yard license

The Health Agent recommended that selectmen not issue a junk yard license to William Barnes of 502 North Main Street. Health Agent Joseph Godzik stated that the water well at 498 North Main Street is contaminated with xylene and the source is not known.

Dr. Godzik explained that a junk yard which contains motor vehicles has the potential to contaminate the ground and ground water wich gasoline, motor oil, transmission fluids and acids from batteries.

"Since the source of the contamination (of the water well at 498 North Main St.) is not known, extension of the town water supply should be encouraged," Dr. Godzik noted in his letter. "The Board of Health certainly favors the extension of the town water as soon as possible."

He added the health board recommends that selectmen either not license the junk yard at 502 North Main St., or not renew the license when it expires.

Land bank discussion

The Board of Water Commissioners, in a letter to selectmen last week, expressed their regrets that an article they sponsored regarding the establishment of a land bank was not included in April 5 Town Meeting warrant.

They asked that town boards now work collectively to place the issue before Town Meeting in June.

Selectmen did not approve the article for the April 5 warrant, because they felt it was not the jurisdiction of the water commission to sponsor a land bank proposal. They suggested that such a proposal would be more appropriately sponsored by the Conservation Commission or Planning Board.

The land bank concept would allow the town to receive a certain percentage of all commercial real estate transactions completed in Cohasset. That money would be set aside in a special account with which the town could purchase parcels of land by eminent domain.

"The issue of who initiates and guides this matter through to its adoption is merely incidental to the benefits to the town upon its passage," the commissioners stated in their letter.

Town Hall addition

Selectmen accepted the recommendation of the Town Hall Study Committee and voted to award a contract to architects Donham and Sweeney of Boston for an addition and renovation work to Town Hall.

Study Committee Chairman Benjamin Blake said the committee members unanimously recommended the Boston firm from 18 proposals submitted for the architectural work.

"Donham and Sweeney had the most positive references," Blake said. "They have done work here for a previous committee and they are very familiar with this project."

Donham and Sweeney, he noted, were the low bidders for the project which will include a two-floor rear addition to the Town Hall, and renovation work to the offices currently within the building.

The architectural services will cost the town $14,300, according to the bid submitted by the firm.

Selectmen approved the recommended choice. The study committee will begin negotiation of a contract which will be finalized by selectmen at next Monday's meeting.

LAST MINUTE REPAIRS

It's settlement day, and the people buying your house are a little cranky. At the walk-through, your dependable old dishwasher stopped midway through its cycle, and the powder room toilet flunked its flush. These situations may cause some anxiety for buyers and sellers, but such problems are quite common and quite easy to resolve.

Most purchase agreements require the major mechanical systems and any appliances that convey to be in working order at the time of settlement. Often defects are discovered during the structural inspection, if there is one, and the sellers have plenty of time to have repairs made. Even so, there may be last-minute breakdowns or other defects not picked up until the walk-through.

If this happens, the buyers and sellers can ask the settlement attorney to put funds aside in an escrow account, with the sellers making arrangements for repairs to or replacement of the items in question. Since the money is there, the buyers are assured the work will be done, and the settlement can be completed without delay.

Landfill attorney says special permit not needed

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The loose language of a 1976 special permit may leave opponents of the Cohasset Heights Landfill over a barrel.

A letter from Building Inspector Edward Poskus, which threatened to shut down the commercial landfill unless the owners applied for a new special permit, forced a heated hearing last Thursday.

The dump is located on Crocker Lane near Lily Pond, the town's water supply.

Anton Moehrke, a lawyer representing the landfill owners Paul and John Barry, told the Zoning Board of Appeals that his clients will not seek another special permit to keep the dump open, because they have not exceeded their original permit.

Arguing with the ZBA, Moerkhe attempted to appeal Poskus' decision, which said that the Barrys had exceeded their permit by accepting domestic and commercial refuse.

Board Chairwoman Myrna Putziger read an account of the 1976 hearing, in which the ZBA issued the special permit to James Tyeryar, the landfill's previous owner.

"The applicant proposes to fill the land with rocks, stumps, brickwork and demolition materials which come from the debris of raised buildings. The board therefore grants the applicant a special permit as applied for." Putziger queried, "Isn't the heart of the question the nature of the permit applied for?"

Moehrke disagreed. He said that the type of refuse accepted at the dump has changed, but he argued that distinctions between the dumping materials make no difference in how the land use relates to the town's zoning bylaws.

He likened the landfill's change in dumping materials to an auto dealership, where the salesman switches from selling Chevy's to selling Pontiacs.

"I believe that the permit was issued for a dumping ground facility," Moehrke said, "and I do not believe that the descriptive language is limiting language."

Putziger questioned whether such language modified the permit so as to allow only those materials specified.

But Moehrke countered by saying that "such hypothetical questioning is simply rank speculation."

He added, "If the board (in 1976) had intended to impose limitations and refinements on the term 'dumping ground facility,' they were perfectly capable of inserting such limitations in the permit. They did not."

In his report, Poskus commented that in 1980, the Board of Health granted a change in the permit, which allowed for the dumping of domestic and commercial refuse. "I questioned the authority of the Board of Health to do that," he said, "and I concluded that the operators had exceeded their 1976 permit."

Moehrke argued the permit had been reviewed by the Boston law firm Gaston, Snow, Ely & Bartlett in 1982 at the request of a financial lending institution.

Their findings, Moehrke said, allowed the Barrys to secure their mortgage and buy the facility from Tyeryar.

Irwin Golden, a Hingham resident who said he owns the tract adjacent to the Cohasset Heights Landfill, told the board that he was present at the 1976 hearing.

"I did not object at that time," he said, "because of the grounds on which Jimmy Tyeryar asked for the permit."

Golden explained that Tyeryar wanted to grade his property by filling some deep depressions with demolition debris, because such refuse was cheaper than gravel and was not accepted at the Cohasset town dump.

"I very strongly object to the current use of that property," he said.

Moehrke informed the board there is litigation pending between Golden and Cohasset Heights Ltd. and pleaded with them to be "fair-minded" in reviewing Golden's statements.

Finally, Moehrke asked the board to limit their considerations to matters of land use.

"You're not trained and you're not authorized to intrude into areas of regulation," he said.

The hearing was held open so the board could receive information concerning general 1976 landfill regulations and the regulations that governed the town landfill.

The board also expects to receive copies of the application and approval made by the Board of Health prior to the request for a special permit in 1976.

Vo-tech to hire girls' bathroom monitor

A monitor will police the girls' bathroom and locker room areas at South Shore Vocational Technical High School to curb student smoking.

The South Shore Regional School Committee voted last week to hire a monitor for the remainder of the year at a cost not to exceed $4,100.

"It's a critical area in the school that is not being policed," said committee Vice Chairman Lloyd E. Patriquin of Whitman. "They're getting away with murder."

Secretaries and female teachers currently check the girls' restrooms for student abuses, but these checks are not enough, Superintendent Clifford W. Easton said.

"The problem has gotten worse during the year," said Easton. "Our people don't have the time to properly supervise the restrooms and tend to their responsibilities."

Male restrooms are not as big a problem because there are more male faculty members available to monitor the areas, Administrator Warren Anderson said.

Selectmen's briefs...

Government Island housing

A proposal by Selectman Diane Sullivan to raise the rents for the two town-owned apartments on Government Island was defeated Monday night.

Instead, selectmen requested that Executive Secretary Donald Andrew develop a housing policy for the town properties and recommend a monthly rental figure.

Selectman Sullivan said she was suggesting a rent hike as one method to increase town revenues. The current rent for the six and seven-room apartments is $200 to $250 per month. She suggested the rents could be doubled and still fall far short of market value.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle strongly objected to the proposal, saying "this is one thing we do for the people of this town. If a private individual owned the property he could get $1,500. But the idea is to help someone in need. If we can't do this, we might as well close the doors."

Sullivan questioned whether the current tenants are eligible for state subsidy. "If they are not eligible, then I am not in favor of the town subsidizing these families," she said. Sullivan also explained three local realtors have appraised the property and submitted proposed rental fees much higher than the current rates.

Selectmen Cliff Mitman and Mary Jane McArthur disagreed that the rents should be hiked without establishing policy guidelines.

"My question is," Mitman stated, "what is fair market value? How do we decide who is going to get in? Let's make up our minds who is there and what our policy will be on town housing. Let's clarify it."

A second motion by Sullivan to raise the rents by $100 effective May 1 was also defeated.

"Let's have Don (Andrews) set a policy of how much, who and when," Mitman suggested.

"If we want to have a state-subsidized program, fine, but we should not put this off for another year," Sullivan stated noting the town is under a state order to develop low and moderate income housing in the town.

Independence building continues

The probable owner of the Independence Building has been granted a month's extension of the purchase and sale agreement, pending the completion of a title reference and establishment of a deed for the South Main Street property.

Town Counsel Richard Hendersonsuggested the extension be granted, noting that the failure to produce a deed to the property is not because of inaction on the part of purchaser Noel Collins. Henderson explained that because of the 'ancient' nature of the property, there is no title reference at the Register of Deeds, and thus the deed to the property is not recorded.

Collins, a West Springfield attorney, presented the highest bid of $86,579.86 for the vacant town owned building several months ago. He plans to convert the two-story structure into an office and apartment.

The town must now survey the land in order to develop a deed to the property. Collins reminded selectmen he had bid on a 900-foot lot and would expect no decrease in the amount of property he plans to purchase. The 900-foot figure was extracted from the assessor's maps, Henderson stated.

While the land is being surveyed, selectmen decided to allow Collins access to the building so he could begin renovation plans. Town counsel will develop a liability release form for Collins to sign before he is allowed entrance into the building. Selectmen were concerned that Collins might injure himself because of the decrepid condition of the building.

Next week's agenda

Selectmen Diane Sullivan requested that Harbormaster Harry Ritter advise selectmen next week on the status of the Salvador mooring reassignment. "To my best knowledge," she said, "the mooring has been reassigned."

Selectmen earlier this year ordered the mooring owned by Bernard Salvador reassigned to the next eligible person on the mooring list. After a hearing on the matter, selectmen decided the mooring was used by a privately-owned corporation, and not by Salvador.

Selectman Sullivan also requested next week the board sign the annual leases for the Rotary Club Hall at the Bates Building and the American Legion building.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

LIFTING AND BENDING: THE RULES

When bending to pick up an object, it is advisable to bend the knees as well as the back. If the object is heavy, the legs should do most of the work. If a heavy weight is to be carried for any distance, it should be carried close to the body with the elbows bent, not straight. Even with bent elbows, it is hazardous to lift a heavy weight higher than shoulder level. When carrying a heavy or awkward object with another person, be sure that it is lifted and placed down together. Work as a team. If the other person drops his end, drop yours. It is better to break the furniture than one's back when carrying anything heavy. Also, one's body should not be twisted if it is necessary to turn while heavily burdened; one should turn with his feet.

Chiropractic, in addition to dealing with existing conditions, can also serve as a preventive measure. In addition, by utilizing the benefits of periodic chiropractic exams, one can gain more knowledge of body operations and thus take an active part in preventing problems from developing. Whether to address an existing condition or as a source of future prevention, we invite you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today and set up an appointment for a chiropractic exam that can make a difference in your life. Tel. 383-1211, 1214

Selectmen suspend Ko Ko Island liquor license

for one Friday night. The date of the suspension will be determined by town counsel.

Following the hearing, Allan Lew, vice president of KoKo Island, said he did not know "at this point" if the owners would appeal the decision to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

Davis testified before selectmen that he was allowed to enter the restaurant's bar Jan. 11 and ordered a beer and another drink. During the second drink, Davis said he was told to leave and asked to show identification. A friend who was also in the bar was previously asked to leave and wanted to go with Davis to a friend's house.

When asked by Lew if he was asked to show identification when he went into the lounge, Davis said no.

Lew, who was not at the restaurant at the time of the incident, responded, "I was told this gentleman walked in with someone and they were asked for an i.d. They said they were just looking for some friends. The manager then turned around and saw them with beers and no identification and they were asked to leave. We called the police."

Davis stated he was served by a waitress at the bar without being asked for identification showing his age. He said he had been at the restaurant lounge "a couple of times" previous to the Jan. 11 incident.

Police Officer John Small responded to a call from the restaurant owners and saw Davis and another male exiting the establishment. When he went inside to talk to manager Billy Lee, he was told to apprehend the two underaged males.

As the car Davis was driving sped away, Sgt. Jackson arrived in a second cruiser. He was told by Officer Small to apprehend the youths in the vehicle.

Sgt. Jackson caught Davis, who was alone in the car, as the vehicle approached Rosano Lane. There was a case of beer cans in the vehicle, he told selectmen, with four filled cans and " a couple of empties" on the floor of the vehicle.

Officer John Conte assisted with Davis' arrest.

The cocktail waitress and the restaurant manager also testified during Monday night's hearing. Lee stated that Davis was allowed to enter the lounge only to talk to his friends. Lee realized the youth was underaged, and was not allowed to consume alcohol.

When Lee turned around and saw Davis inside the lounge, he saw him holding a beer bottle. Lee took the beer from Davis and asked him to show indentification. The license showed Davis was born in 1966. He was ordered from the restaurant and the police were notified.

The waitress testified she had asked Davis if he wanted a drink and he refused. If he had answered affirmatively, the waitress said she "would have asked him for an i.d. I did not serve him."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson asked the manager, "Do you ordinarily allow a person to sit in your lounge, even if he is not drinking, without carding him?" The manager replied, "usually not."

"Do you normally allow an intoxicated person in your lounge?" Selectman McArthur asked. "It is obvious from the police reports that Davis was intoxicated and you let him in."

The manager responded that when Davis entered the restaurant he did not appear to be drunk.

Selectman Mitman noted that based on conflicting testimony, selectmen could not determine whether a restaurant employee actually served Davis. "The thing they (the restaurant employees) did wrong was when they found the people who (they suspected) gave a beer to a minor (friends sitting in the lounge) they didn't do anything about it. I move we suspend the license for one day."

Selectmen Mitman, England and Laugelle voted to suspended the license for one day. McArthur and Sullivan opposed the recommendation.

Principal search committees formed

The school committee Monday night named the members of the four high school principal search committees. The first meeting of the search committees will be held Wednesday, April 2 at 8 p.m. at the high school.

At that meeting, resumes and materials pertaining to the list of semi-final candidates will be given to the committees members. Interviews with the semi-finalists will probably take place Saturday, April 12, 19 and 26.

The search committees members include parents: Carol Martin, Nancy Sandell, Eileen Corbett, Jean Reidy, Karin Bartow, Susan McNamara, James Shumaker, Dane Hahn, Patricia Tolini, Isabel Salvador, and Sally Atkinson; teachers: Ron Emmons, English department, Tom O'Neil, foreign language department, Doris Lahage, business education, and George Fortin, foreign language department and [illegible] of the Cohasset Teachers Association.

Also, students: James Conley, student school committee representative, Robert Corkery, president of the Student Council and vice president of the senior class, and two students to be selected; department heads: Mrs. Marilyn Watson, physical education, Sam Erbe, science, Paul Narkiewicz, foreign language, and William Kite, English; administrators: Kenneth Ekberg, John Creamer, John Leary Jr., and Eileen Mills, Metco coordinator.

According to Supt. Eugene Crowell, there will probably be about ten candidates for the search committees to independently interview. From the results of their interviews, the school committee will be presented with the top three candidates.

Supt. Crowell said the search committees interviews should conclude near the end of April. The school committee has targeted a date of late May or early June to name the new high school principal, he added.

CHS Basketball team top 35 in USA

The honors continue to roll in for the Cohasset High School boys basketball team as USA Today, a major national daily newspaper rated Cohasset as one of the top 35 high school basketball teams in the country.

The magazine's sports section includes a top 25 listing as well as ten other teams worth mentioning. It was the latter list which included Cohasset High School.

Most of the other high school teams included schools from major metropolitan areas such as Los Angelas, Chicago, New York City, Philadelphia. Cambridge Rindge and Latin, who won the Division I title in Massachusetts was rated 17th in the country.

CHS Coach Eddie Minelli called the Cohasset rating the ultimate compliment to the team. "It's incredible. I just can't believe it. I am truly ecstatic about it. To pick a little Division III team is unbelievable. I truly believe now this year's team is the number one Division III team in the country."

"I would say this was the perfect culmination of two hard years of work by the team," Minelli added.

Lead poisoning screening clinic

The Public Health Nurse of Cohasset and the Department of Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program will hold a lead poison screening for children between the ages of nine months and six years-old, THURSDAY, April 3, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, next to the Cohasset Town Hall.

This screening consists of a painless finger prick and a small amount of blood withdrawn from the finger for analysis.

Lead poisoning is caused by eating, chewing or sucking on lead painted objects such as window sills, railing, toys, jewelry or printed material. Other sources include contaminated soil or dust and fumes created by home renovation and sand blasting. Auto fumes are also hazardous. The risk of lead poisoning is increased by hand to mouth activity in young children.

Since most children have no symptoms, a blood screening test is the only sure way to detect lead poisoning.

For further information please call the Social Service League office at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

The social workers and nurse at the Social Service League are available to serve the needs of all Cohasset residents. All of the programs the League sponsors are free but many depend on volunteers.

Presently, people are needed to deliver meals-on-wheels one noonday every other week, especially Fridays.

The Consignment Shop (which supports the League) needs help either one morning or afternoon a week, and the Senior Shuttle bus would welcome new drivers (men or women) for one morning or afternoon a month.

Montessori students (L) Sydney Johnston and (R) Jeremiah Gutry presented books to Paul Pratt librarian, JoAnn Mitchell. (Carol McCann)

☐You may remember that Mrs. Alice McCarthy is running a stamp fund to help a missionary in India, with the top student in each class being given a prize. Wait until you read this. . .Ann Dockray, top in Mr. O'Leary's class, has brought in 4,677 cancelled stamps; Barbara Lagrotteria, top in Mrs. McCarthy's class, has brought in 3,850; Greg Lennon, top in Mr. Collin's class, has brought in 325; Michael Cisneros has brought in 266, Mary Hurley, 236; Ellen Schramm, 221, and Jimmy Rosano, 106. Isn't it nice to see the enthusiasm and willingness to help those people! They certainly will be able to purchase the Cadillac of the Jeep models with all those stamps. Keep up your good work, kids!

☐Another Pozatek makes the books in New Hampshire for his skiing prowess. Andrew, the younger son of Ellie and Zig Pozatek, placed fourth in the New Hampshire state champ competition. Over 100 kids in the nine and under category tried skiing for the gold in Loon Mountain, and Andrew came in fourth out of all of them. Congratulations, Andrew, we wouldn't be surprised to see you and Steve at the Olympics someday!

☐Speaking of awards, Vito Conte is due a big one on March 27. He will receive the Commander's Award of the Air Force, at the Officers' Club at the Air Force Base in Bedford. A grand honor, indeed.

☐Heard that Don and Jackie Beale had a wonderful time in Florida, soaking up the rays and playing a lot of golf while they were there (SIGH) is the week to keep up your tans, folks. It promises to be a super one.

☐Did you get a daffodil last week? March 19 was the Fifth Annual Daffodil Day, promoted by the American Cancer Society to highlight the spirit of hope in the crusade against cancer. Cohasset Savings Bank, Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, Beechwood Medical Center, Rockland Trust Company, Quincy Co-operative Bank, Al Odermatt, Ozzie Ingram, Dr. Dan Bonetzky, Cohasset Knoll, the Red Lion Inn and State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray all participated in this special day in Cohasset and are certainly to be commended.

☐A day to mark on your calendar is April 3 when the South Shore Red Cross will hold its Eighth Annual Ball, at the Lantana in Randolph. Social hour begins at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 8 p.m. (and dancing, too). The Good Neighbor of the Year Award will be presented to Congressman Brian Donnelly. Tickets are $35 per person and can be obtained by calling 471-5440 or contacting Al Odermatt, 383-1283.

☐Peter Lawrence, 12 year-old son of Paul and Joan Lawrence of Golden, Colorado, and grandson of Leonard and Adelle Lawrence and Bruce and Mary Edmonds (all of Cohasset) has qualified to participate in the Jr. Olympics, to be held in Winter Park, Colorado, this week (March 24-30). Peter has been racing since he was six, and currently races for the Winter Park Ski team and is a member of the USSA. We wish him luck as he races in three events, the downhill, giant slalom and slalom. Here's hoping that the grandparents are able to get there, that is if they are willing to see more snow.

☐What about Tracy Fitzpatrick! Tracy, a 1985 CHS grad and freshman at Wesleyan University in Middletown, CN, earned her first varsity letter in basketball. Her coach called Tracy a "key reserve that played in all of Wesleyan's 20 games." She scored 97 points and got 60 rebounds, had 21 steals and 17 assists; she also led the team at the free throw line. Good work, Tracy, and continued success.

☐Palm Sunday was a special one for John and Mary Benbow, who were honored for their 13 years of service to the Second Congregational Church. Many of their friends were on hand to honor them and to say good-bye, as they will be leaving for Milton next week. They have made an outstanding contribution to our community, and will be greatly missed. We wish them both every success in their new pastorate, and are sure that they will keep in touch.

☐ Hunneman & Co., Inc., Better Homes & Gardens, announces the appointment of seventeen year Scituate resident, Penny O'Brien, to its Cohasset office.

She is a nursing graduate of Lasell Junior College, holds her Brokers license in real estate and the G.R.I. designation, a graduate program of studies for realtors. During her seven years in the real estate profession, Penny has been a consistent million dollar broker with particular expertise in family relocation, working closely with relocation corporations.

In 1985 she concentrated her efforts on new construction as exclusive listing agent for a new subdivision in Scituate. She was also the leading listing broker for her former company with total real estate transactions in excess of two million dollars.

Penny and her husband, Jim, are members of the Driftway Tennis Club and Hatherly Country Club. They have two children—Kevin, a student at Boston College and Tracey, a student at Northeastern University.

☐William and Marianne Devine of 36 Riverview Dr. are the parents of a boy born Feb. 19 at the South Shore Hospital.

☐ Phil Bernstein's efforts all paid off last semester! Phil, son of Anita and David Bernstein of Fair Oaks Lane, is a freshman at the University of Rhode Island, and he made the Dean's List. Another CHS grad that we can all brag about!

☐Not that you need reminding, but the basketball team faces their final two teams this week, so be sure to show your support by attending the games. Good luck to the Skippers, and continued success.

☐Hope everybody has a grand Easter, complete with the traditional "Easter bonnet" and the Easter egg hunts that are scheduled throughout. . .

Keep your news coming.

Little Harbor algae study supported

The advisory committee Tuesday night voted to support an article requesting $9,000 to fund a study and cleanup of the algae problem in Little Harbor.

The project has been awarded $28,000 in state funds. Residents of Little Harbor Road have pledged $3,000 to complete the balance.

Residents hope to eliminate the odor, contamination, insects and other problems associated with algae, which result from brackish water in the harbor.

Darrell Roberts of 44 Little Harbor Road, representing his neighbors, told the committee, "I strongly feel the study is important because the problem is getting worse in this area."

Roberts said he had 100 percent support from his neighbors and promised the board $3,000 in financial assistance.

Diane Sullivan emphasized, "We were fortunate to get in on the funding." She added the town has to show the state the balance funding for the project. "We will have to start the grant application process again," Sullivan added.

A bonus of the project, according to Roberts, is that problem septic systems will be pinpointed.

Sullivan and Roberts both explained while the project is benefiting a small group of residents, the harbor "is a visual asset of the town."

The committee voted 4-0 to support the article.

In other business, the committee voted 3-2 in support of an article removing the issuing of guest permits for beach stickers.

The committee decided to wait for more accurate information on the taking by eminent domain of the Lily Pond Estates. The water commission expects to give them the figure just prior to Town Meeting.

Jeff Bettinger will make a presentation on the watershed protection and hazardous waste proposals at the next meeting.

The committee will meet with the school committee before recommending $6,185 for high school auditorium seats. The seats were installed last year and have a bill outstanding.

A request for more computer time will be looked at in conjunction with the water commission report. If the water commission goes to its own system, more space will be available on the town computer.

The committee also discussed the idea of negotiating with the Board of Selectmen to arrive at the same budget figure before Town Meeting.

Chairman Fred Koed said, "Things would run smoothly if we work it out ahead of time before Town Meeting."

Other members believed the decisions had already been made.

"If the townspeople have to wrestle with these ridiculous issues, they will see we are under Prop. 2 1/2 and we can't spend it," Koed said.

Conte honored

Vito Conte, chief of the Material Handling Section of the Research Services Division of the Air Force Geophysics Laboratory, is the 1986 winner of the AFGL Commander's Award.

Established in 1971, this award honors the outstanding contributors to the laboratory in fields of administration, logistics, or management—the unsung heroes of the organization.

Mr. Conte, a 35-year veteran at AFGL, won recognition for his exceptional skills in providing logistical field support for the laboratory's far-ranging field programs in such places as Brazil, Germany, Hawaii, Greenland and the American Southwest.

Mr. Conte was also Air Force systems command wage Grade Employee of the year in 1977 and USAF Civilian Manager for 1978. "Vito always came through with his best," said Lt. Colonel John Holden. "Because he always manages to give 100 percent to each problem that is brought to him, he always gets it done right away."

Mr. Conte will receive the Commander's Award at the Hanscom Air Force Base Officer's Club March 27, 1986.

A time of change

Cohasset, like most communities, is a town filled with change.

While many bemoan the loss of our 'native' sons and daughters, others realize that life is transitional as we attain one goal and strive for the next.

Few of us are fortunate enough to remain in one place. Education, employment, and families are reasons why we continually seek a place called home.

Like the seasons that in their succession speed by, neighbors, friends and family join us briefly and then depart. We're saddened by our loss, but comforted by the friendships we shared.

Rev. John Benbow and his wife will soon leave the community we have shared with them for 13 years. Rev. Benbow not only was a leader within the church. He was an active part of our community.

While Mrs. Benbow faithfully tended to our children in the schools, Rev. Benbow served as our spiritual pastor. He was a civic leader and a religious counselor.

There is impending change in our schools as Supt. Eugene Crowell prepares his retirement from the system and Richard Streeter ends his career as high school principal.

Once again, the leadership of these men was not contained to the classroom. They were involved in their community and in the individual lives of all our graduating students.

A school system that has been recognized for athletic as well as academic achievement must have sound, steady guidance that these men provided.

Cohasset's former fire chief, Martin Dooley, will soon be leaving this town. His was a difficult association, fraught with turmoil and anguish. But along with the anticipation of a new job, he must bring his experiences with him. The lessons he learned, the wisdom he gained, will be part of his life in a new community.

Change can be heartwrenching, but it is imminent. Nothing remains the same.

We are grateful for the time we shared together, for the enrichment these people gave to our lives. But we must recognize that all things change. We continue our travels with the wisdom imparted from knowing others.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: One more time! Eddie and the Cruisers take state basketball championship at the Centrum. The Cruisers 'traded baskets for punches' in early rounds. 'They won because they out-thought everyone else, they became Larry Bird type players,' sinking Worcester's Frontiers in finals. Selectman Laugelle says this team should be very specially honored. Editorial asks for great celebration for great kids

A need for fulltime asst. assessor

(This letter was sent to the Advisory Committee chairman from the chairman of the Town Government Structure Committee.—Ed.)

Dear Mr. Koed:

I and the Town Government Structure Committee respectfully urge you and the Advisory Committee to support Article 16, which would establish the position of full-time Assistant Assessor within the office of the Board of Assessors.

This position is vitally needed. Our research indicates that the salary of the full-time Assistant Assessor would be in the range of $25,000 - $33,000, and would have the following major components of his/her job description:

- supervision of the office staff, including the continual updating of information in the computer, annual upgrading of values to 100 percent, maintaining assessors maps, etc.;
- executive assistant to the Board of Assessors, to carry out the will of the Board in managing the office and acting in liaison with town Board and state agencies;
- on-going inspection of property renovations based on more than 600 building permits a year, and the continual provision of new data for entering at the office;
- court appearances and inspection of properties related to abatement cases and appeals; and
- annual physical reinspection of property in town, about 1/3 of all properties each year to be fully prepared for state-mandated 100% revaluation every three years.

The qualifications of a full-time Assistant Assessor, based on the practices in other towns we surveyed, would be the following:

- proper state certification as a Massachusetts Accredited Assessor or a Certified Massachusetts Assessor;
- experience in a position of Assistant Assessor or Appraiser and in appraising practices in Massachusetts;
- knowledge of Massachusetts laws and regulations concerning municipal property assessment practices; and
- other requirements established by the Board of Assessors or the town.

The position would probably best work within the structure of the existing personnel classification by-law, but under contract to the Board of Assessors so they could maintain control and flexibility over the position.

Generally, this type of position is needed for the following important reasons:

- municipal property assessment has become a highly technical, professional field which requires professional expertise;
- state requirements and regulations have become more complex and time-consuming;
- Proposition 2½ and state-mandated 100% revaluation have put increased pressure on Assessors to be consistent in municipal property assessment;
- the general increase in metropolitan Boston property values of about 25-40 percent a year and the highly competitive housing market on the South Shore have put increased demands on local municipal assessing; and
- the proper operation of the Assessing Office vitally affects town finances - the valuation of each piece of property, the total valuation of the town, the tax rate, the taxes assessed on each property owner, the total amount of funds under Proposition 2½ which can be raised, and subsequently how much funds are available for needed town services.

Specifically, in Cohassset, the position of full-time Assistant Assessor is needed for these reasons:

- the Board of Assessors needs staff resources to be able to get the tax bills out on time;
- day-to-day management and supervision of the office is needed;
- the new computer system needs staff resources to enter data on an on-going basis and print it out in a manner acceptable to the state; and
- staff resources are needed to handle abatement cases and appearances before the Appellate Tax Board and the courts.

The existing problems in the office of the Board of Assessors are as follows:

- the Assessors Office has historically had great difficulty in getting the tax bills out on time - costs to the town for the past four fiscal years in interest payments for Tax Anticipation Notes have ranged from $40,000 to $60,000 per year, a total of over $150,000 since fiscal 1982;
- the computer system has numerous problems which need to be addressed by someone qualified in municipal assessing and in related programming systems;
- annually, there is usually a backlog in checking and upgrading changes in assessments necessary to set the total valuation and set the tax rate; and
- the state has recently mandated that Cohasset physically reinspect each property before 1989, a process that could cost the town over $120,000 or more with a private firm.

The Town Government Structure Committee research shows that establishing this position would be cost effective and in the best interests of the town.

Current costs to the town for the Board of Assessors office for appraisal work is as follows:

- approximately $7,500 to $9,000 for a part-time appraiser who has been on contract to the Assessors since 1980;
- a contract of $57,000 for the state mandated 100 percent revaluation every three years, average $19,000 per year; and
- payments for interest costs for tax anticipation notes necessary because of delay in getting tax

What do you think about N. Main St. housing?

A recent application to the Cohasset Appeals Board for a variance for the construction of 36 units of rental housing for the elderly, with 20 percent of the units subsidized for low and moderate income persons, was denied. The proposal now goes before the Cohasset Housing Authority and back to the Appeals Board for a comprehensive permit.

The Mariner is providing this questionnaire to measure the opinion of its readers. The results will be compiled and printed in a future edition.

3. Should private developers be able to create rental housing in Cohasset? Yes____ No____ Not Sure____
4. Should the Town find land and create additional housing for low and moderate income persons? Yes____ No____ Not sure____
5. The recently-denied variance was for housing on 10 acres of land located about 1/4 mile from Forest Avenue on North Main Street. Is this a suitable location? Yes____ No____ Not Sure____ bills out on time was $166,698.39 from FY-82 to FY-85 inclusive, thus averaging $41,674.60 per fiscal year.

Government structure board reiterates assessor need

Aggregate costs to the Town of Cohasset for appraisal work by the Board of Assessors thus approaches an annual cost of $68,000, including necessary costs for consultant work and avoidable, unnecessary costs for interest payments on tax anticipation notes.

Hiring a full-time Assistant Assessor to do such appraisal work could eliminate the need to hire an outside firm to do state-mandated revaluation work, and give the Assessors staff resources to effectively manage the office and set the tax rate on time each year.

Approval of Article 16 would benefit the entire town and improve the functions of the Assessors office and the office of the Treasurer-Collector and Town Accountant, which have to depend on the annual figures on valuations to do their work.

Approval of this article would also improve the towns posture with the state Department of Revenue and could have a long-term positive effect on the towns credit rating, which ultimately is based on the ability of the town to raise revenue each year.

One final comment. The town did not need to borrow this year, because the tax bills went out before such borrowing became necessary. This was accomplished because of efforts by the Chairman of the Board of Assessors, but also because of many hours of work by the town Treasurer-Collector and Town Accountant in assisting the Assessors in completing that work. We have not been assured that without a full-time Assistant Appraiser that the Assessors will be able to avoid borrowing every year.

Again, we urge you and your committee to vote to support Article 16. I look forward to meeting with you to discuss this important subject on March 20.

Sincerely,
John K. McNabb, Jr.
Chairman, Town Government
Structure Committee

Fire protection official says sprinklers effective

(This letter was sent to Fire Chief Daniel Brock from a director of the National Fire Protection Association. Ed.)

Dear Chief Brock:

It has been brought to our attention that the town of Cohasset is contemplating legislation requiring sprinkler systems in new residential occupancies. The leadership of Cohasset is to be congratulated on this very progressive step forward. In so doing, Cohasset is aligning itself with a growing number of municipalities across the United States who have recognized the seriousness of the fire problem in the places where we live. Of the thousands of fire deaths that take place every year, over 75 percent occur in the home.

We have made great strides in developing public awareness and a sensitivity to the need for smoke detectors. This effort has been so successful that fire fatalities have dropped 32 percent in the last seven years, but we still have a long way to go.

Now, new developments in sprinkler technology have provided the wherewithal to achieve another significant drop in fire fatalities and human suffering. Residential sprinkler systems have been demonstrated to be practical and cost effective. Tests by the National Bureau of Standards, Underwriters Laboratories, Factory Mutual Research and Engineering, the National Fire Protection Association and others have shown that a quick response residential sprinkler will not only suppress a fire, but protect the occupants in the very room of fire origin in a fire situation that might otherwise destroy the entire structure. So effective is this new concept that the entire scenario is over in only a few minutes. Technical progress has made it possible to install such a sprinkler system in a new residence for a very small percentage of the total construction cost, only one or two percent.

As a result of this breakthrough in the past few years, municipalities across the country are modifying their building codes to require fast-acting sprinkler systems in all new residential occupancies. The impact on life safety is going to be dramatic and the National Fire Protection Association fully supports this move. We therefore wish you success in your efforts to pass appropriate legislation. NFPA will be pleased to provide any backup support material on the progress that has been achieved in the area of low cost, fast-acting residential sprinkler systems.

Again, congratulations on your efforts. You are most assuredly moving in the right direction.

Sincerely,
Ken Backman
Director, External Affairs

Vo-tech is a fine resource, excellent alternative

To The Editor:

At this time of year, many eighth graders are making selections of secondary schools. In our town, the choices lie mainly among Cohasset, various private schools and South Shore Vocational-Technical High School. Cohasset is one of the eight member towns of the South Shore District which offers eighteen programs for girls and boys who want and are qualified for vocational-technical education. Each year, approximately fifteen students graduate from Cohasset High and go directly to work. Many of these might have benefited from one of the South Shore Vo-Tech programs.

At South Shore, the first regional school of its kind in Massachusetts, the eighteen programs provide excellent training for specific job skills. Each year all of the graduates seeking jobs find them in their respective skills. Also 15% of the graduates go on to higher education including some four-year colleges.

The South Shore Vocational-Technical High School is a fine resource and an excellent alternative for young Cohasset people; bus transportation is provided. A four-year program at South Shore enhances relevant career opportunity and experience and at the same time a full academic program in social studies, English, science and mathematics. Interested parents and students are encouraged to contact the Guidance Office at the Hanover Campus (1-878-8822) or to contact me in Cohasset for preliminary information.

Sewer officials are buying an Edsel

To The Editor:

The Sewer Commission has waved off a well-funded new Chevrolet, then been forced to abandon the innovative pedal powered vehicle as impractical, and now favors buying a share in a used Edsel (the Hull connection).

Now they claim there's no room in the Edsel for the 3A business district and contiguous residential areas. According to the Sewer Commission, there's hardly room to add anybody.

The rationale isn't rational. Because the town was deluded into appropriating only 1 million dollars (despite all warnings that it wasn't enough) and because the delusions can no longer be denied, it is finally recognized that the appropriation won't do the job. So, instead of demonstrating integrity and courage by admitting error and requesting the necessary appropriation, the Commission now proposes to do less than half the job promised at the previous Towm meeting.

So we pay too much for a share in a used Edsel, and then refuse to fully utilize the share! That's cost effectiveness?

Recreation Department programs. . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the ninth annual Easter Egg Hunt for children 3 through 11 Saturday, March 29, at noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

This year there is a distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will help with the hunt. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt and other attractions.

Children will be divided into three separate groups: Group 1. ages 3 and 4 (with parent); Group 2. ages 5-7; and Group 3. ages 8-11.

Gather around the designated area sign before noon. Bring a small paper bag or container for the candy.

Individually-wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group five or six of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape and will have a number on the tape. Hold on to it for a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, American Legion Post # 118, and the Cohasset Police Association, and the members of the Cohasset Call Fireman's Association through personal donations.

Rain date will be Saturday, April 5, at noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

YOUTH JOB OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

The Recreation Department through its Job Opportunity Program has placed approximately 90 Cohasset youths in part-time jobs in past years.

In a continuing effort to place youth on jobs of all types, the department is asking any business or individuals who needs part-time workers to call the Recreation Office at 383-6791.

Once a job is filed with the department, names of individuals who have applied for jobs will be given to the employer. All compensation will be arranged between the employer and employee.

In addition, Cohasset youths seeking some form of part-time employment may call the Recreation Office for a job application.

Upon completion of the application the candidate's name will be placed on file for possible job referral. In an effort to update the applicant files, everyone interested in working should complete a new application form.

A 'crazy' runner heads to Cohasset reduced. But there was a new addiction in his life - running.

"That first race did it. I caught the bug," he says, and McGeoghegan thirsted for more. "Here I was, an adult who long ago had hung up the old jock, and I was back to it again. Believe me, I didn't know a thing about running. But I just knew I loved racing."

'P.J.' had been running in a $13 pair of Sears sneakers. Pre-running exercise was never more than a fleeting thought. He simply put on a pair of shorts or sweat pants, and ran.

"But as I entered these races, I'd overhear the other racers talking about how they prepared for the race, what kind of sneakers they wear. I never went up to anyone and asked how they did this or that. I just listened in on their conversations," he laughs.

As he entered more races, he became friends with many of the local runners. They would share their bits of wisdom with the novice who gained more confidence with each 10K he ran.

One night while at church, he was talking with a friend about the races he had entered. They talked about his times, and his friend suggested he start running 10 miles - right after Mass.

P.J. went home and, as always, measured off the distance in his car. He returned home, pulled on his running attire, and told his wife he was going for 10.

"But I did a couple of things differently," he admits. "I brought along money for a phone call so I could call Susan for a ride home, I brought my Blue Cross card in case I had a heart attack on the way and I told Susan not to go anywhere in case something happened."

"He's not being facetious," Susan notes. "He really never thought he'd make it home."

"But I did," P.J. says. "After that, I knew I could make it in a marathon."

In the meantime, his son Brian was an annual observer of the Boston Marathon. "He'd come home every year and say, 'Dad, do it.' "

P.J. never seriously considered the suggestion. Marathon running takes a lot of commitment, time, and separation from family as the runner prepares for the competition. As P.J. notes, running is a "selfish" sport, one that takes the athlete away from other considerations while he is indulging himself.

"It can definitely interfere with your family," he admits.Susan is in agreement. "The serious runner should be sensitive to his or her family. Because it's such a selfish thing, you have to be aware of how it is affecting your family. Whether you're a man or woman, running can cause dissension in the family."

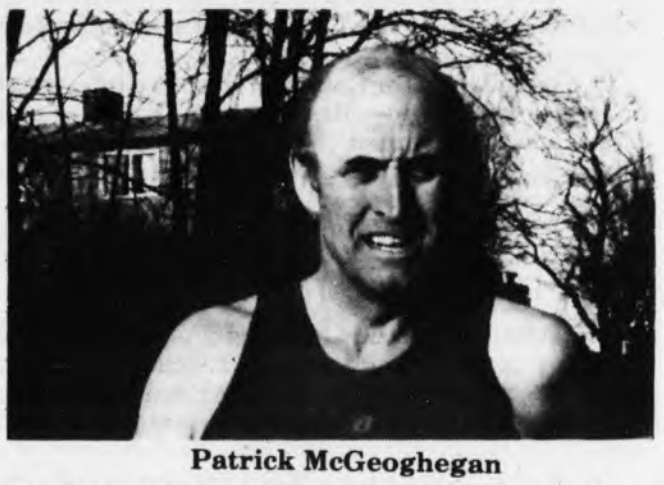
To maintain his close relationship with son Brian, and daughter Jenny, who is 13, P.J. often includes them on his shorter runs. Brian will frequently run alongside his father. Jenny will either ride her bike, or jog along.

"The other night," P.J. explains, "I wasn't going to run, but Jenny asked me to go out with her. I really didn't feel like running then. But we went out for about an hour or so, and we had the best talk."

As he prepares mentally and physically for this new challenge, P.J. emphasizes one thing. "I am crazy about running. Crazy. But there are many, many runners who run because they have fun. For me, it's gotten to the point I feel guilty if I don't run. I'm serious and I'm competitive. I'm crazy. But I have a lot of friends who run just for the fun of it."

One of his closest friends is Tom Kelleher of Hingham. Since catching his running 'bug' Kelleher competes annually in the Cohasset race, and last year entered the Boston Marathon.

"He was not a qualified runner," P.J. explains. "He did it to say he ran Boston. He finished it, and you should have seen how excited he was about it. He was the happiest guy in the world. He runs for the love of it. He's not compulsive like me. I run because . . . I'm crazy."



Patrick McGeoghegan

At a recent 13-mile race in Hyannis, P.J. was the epitome of the serious contender. " But Tom was running, and waving and talking to the spectators. He had a ball. He does this just for the love of it. When Tom runs Cohasset, " P.J. explains, "he goes to the back and says 'I want to make sure no one cheats.' He loves Cohasset as much as I do."

P.J. qualified for the Boston Marathon after finishing the Vietnam Veterans Marathon in Washington, D.C. in 2 hours and 55 minutes. His first marathon was Bostonfest in October, 1983. He finished in three hours and 13 minutes. A November, 1984 marathon in Newport, R.I. resulted in a finishing time of 3 hours and one minute.

The Cohasset race in two weeks will be a good, strong warm-up for P.J. as he prepares for Boston. His first race in 1983 resulted in a time of 42:08:09. The following year it improved to 38:21. Although he had no record of last year's effort, P.J. is sure it was his best time.

"Cohasset is an extremely hard course. But it's the most beautiful," he says. And I notice more and more Cohasset residents are getting involved. They stand on the sides and wave and cheer you on. There's nothing better to a runner than to have people cheering for them. Cohasset's becoming a real people race. Everyone likes the Cohasset race because it's right out of winter, and for me, I need the workout for Boston."

Currently, P.J. runs 20 miles four times a week as he completes a round-trip course from his back door to Squantum and back. Also included in his training are a "couple of 18's and four 15's." Weekends usually include a 20 and a 10-mile course, as P.J. attempts to complete 60 miles of running each week.

Winter training is more grueling, as P.J. slows his pace to keep up with thin, bitter cold air. His racing outfit made of gortex allows P.J. to workout in the cold while keeping his body at a comfortable temperature.

"This material is so remarkable," he says, "that you actually sweat in it on the coldest day."

Susan recalls how he recently completed a long distance run on a cold winter's night. He came in dripping icicles from the perspiration that had froze in the cold.

"My brother was sitting in the living room with me and when P.J. came in from his run, my brother said, 'Get him away from me. He's possessed!' "

P.J. would almost agree. For him, long distance running has been beneficial to his health and his energy level. But it's progressed to a compulsion.

"As soon as that gun goes off, the competitiveness in me starts. That's the way I am. But for most runners, it doesn't matter whether they're fast or slow. They just enjoy themselves. Running is a great way to see things around you that you ordinarily wouldn't stop to see. Just running around Crow's Point, I have seen the most beautiful sunsets in the world. You see the marshes and the water, and smell aromas that ordinarily we all take for granted. That's the reason most people run," he says.

Young artist courses

In its continuing commitment to bring art to the communities of the South Shore, the South Shore Art Center is expanding its young artist department by offering children's courses at two satellite locations, one in Hingham and one in Norwell.

The Center, which is located at 103 Ripley Road is attempting to make its programs accessible to the residents of the South Shore by setting up these satellite locations. Two children's courses will be offered at each of the new locations--Painting and Drawing I for ages six to eight and Experimental Workshop for ages nine to twelve in Norwell at the Norwell Library and in Hingham at the Community Center, Painting and Drawing I and Child's Clay and Sculpture.

Advanced registration is required for all courses at the Center. Courses at the satellite locations will begin the week of March 24 and run for six weeks.

In bringing these courses out to the communities the Center is attempting to make it easier for young artists to take advantage of the Center's resources. The expansion of its young artist department has been made possible through a grant from the Joseph Drown Foundation.

For further information regarding fees, registration and memberships, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

The perception of "art is all around us" is the central focus of a new April mini-series-Design for Living-which explores the concept of art expressed through many different forms. This year's three evening lectures at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, explore art in travel as in Japanese architecture, art in the garden by creating unique landscapes and art in the home through interior design. Advanced registration is required for the lectures.

A discussion and slide presentation of Japanese urban, temple and ancient architecture will be led by Meg Hickey, head of the design department at the Massachusetts College of Art, Monday, April 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Landscape architect Mary Smith comes to the Center Wednesday April 16 at 7:30 p.m. to give a workshop on "Color in the Garden, the Art of Seeing."

The last program in the series, Wednesday, April 23, will include a discussion by interior designer Gail Bertocchi on "Creating Your Interior-1986."

Whether decorating for the first time or refurbishing for the 100th, you will find current ideas and information that will help turn your environment into a distinctive design.

The Design for Living mini-series is funded by the Joseph Drown Foundation and by the Marion Huse Memorial Fund.

For registration call the Center, 383-9548.

This year's young artist exhibit will open with a reception on Sunday, April 6 from 4 to 6 p.m. and the exhibit will continue through April 26. The Center opens its gallery as an opportunity to encourage and support the arts education in the schools. Student to State House

Junior Jeff Hartwell, Cohasset High School's elected representative to Student Government Day festivities in Boston, spent the entire day, Wednesday, March 19, attending an orientation session in the State House.

Jeff was recently selected to fill the post of Senator William Golden on Student Government Day, Friday, April 11.

Jeff also received the honor of being appointed to the joint legislative judiciary committee. Friday, April 11, his committee will hear testimony on a student proposal bill to make all state judges subject to a review of their performance every eight years.

One of Jeff's bills has been accepted by the student government coordinators in the State Department. It proposes that all school buses in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts be fitted with seatbelts. Friday, April 11, this bill and others will be debated at a joint session of student delegates at the State House.

Karen Anglin, Cohasset's alternate delegate was unable to accompany Jeff to the orientation session. Karen has attended two previous sessions with Jeff.

Mr. Edward F. Sheehan, Social Studies Dept. Head, is the school coordinator for the statewide program.

Art students' field trip

Students in grades 7-8 art classes at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High took a wonderful field trip to the Afro-American Master Artist in Residence Program at Northeastern University.

They were treated to fantastic paintings, sculpture, textiles and drawings by many afro-American artists. In addition to viewing the art in the gallery, the students were taken on a tour of the artist's studios to see work "in progress."

All agreed it was a tremendous experience.

Students win top honors

Jonathan Hislop and Jeremiah Stevenson, Grade 3 at the Joseph Osgood School, and Crista Ansberg, Grade 4 at the Deer Hill School, were recently winners of an electrical safety montage contest at a judging held at the Brockton Art Museum.

The contest, "Prevent Electrical Accidents in a Student's World," was sponsored by Eastern Edison Co./Brockton in cooperation with electric utilities throughout Massachusets, in celebration of National Energy Education Day (March 21).

Honorable mentions in the contest included Jessica Aronson, Grade 3 at the Joseph Osgood School; Kathleen Conroy, Erin Lennon and Jason Hunter, Grade 6 at the Deer Hill School.

Japanese pen-pals

Mrs. Muir's "Writer's Club" of third grade wrote to Japanese students who are students of her son Scot in Japan. He teaches English to Japanese students as he is learning to be fluent in their language. The week of Mar. 17 each of Mrs. Muir's students received a letter from a Japanese pen-pal. We're hoping this is the beginning of lots of letter writing!

Senior Center news. . .

The Center, 3 North Main St., will be closed Monday, April 21, in observance of Patriot's Day.

FROM THE DIRECTOR

The Cohasset Council on Aging was established by a vote of the Annual Town Meeting in March 1969. The Council on Aging is the official designated agency to coordinate, evaluate, promote and encourage new and existing activities and services for older residents of the town of Cohasset.

Most elderly citizens are to be complimented in the way they usually manage their own affairs so well. There are times, however, when help may be required to solve some of the problems of growing older or be made aware of the many services to which one is entitled.

The Cohasset Council on Aging is the link between seniors' needs and services contained in this area. For further information, call the Senior Center office Monday-Friday, between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. at 383-9112.

Don't forget! With Spring in the wings, it's time to start thinking about feeling good all over. It's time to come to the Senior Center and see the many new and different programs being planned. Spring is such an exciting time to explore new interests, try a new project, or find a new hobby.

Everyone likes to learn new things, regardless of age. The Senior Center has many classes being taught by members of this community.

For further information, or if you know of someone who would like to share their talents, please call Kathy at the Senior Center 383-9112.

SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Wednesday, April 2, to Hanover Mall; Wednesday, April 16, to Hanover Mall; Monday, April 7, to Braintree Mall; Thursday, April 10, to Hingham and Weymouth Mall.

REMEMBER - Make reservations one week prior to the trip by calling the Senior Center, 383-9112. Also, if you can't make the trips, please call the center to cancel as soon as possible. There is always a waiting list.

VOLUNTEERS LEND A HAND - Can you spare one weekday morning, 9 a.m. to noon, or one afternoon, 12 to 3 p.m. per month to drive the Senior Shuttle Bus within the town of Cohasset? There is no special knowledge or training involved, just the willingness to help your neighbor. The Senior Shuttle is used daily to take people to local doctors, dentists, beauty parlors, the barbers or the local shopping centers. We need you!

If you think you have the available time to help some of your fellow older Cohasset residents, please call: Mr. Ray Remick at 383-1035, or the Senior Center 383-9112.

Opponents beware! Coach Joseph Bouchard is hinting that his Cohasset High School baseball team will be full of surprises this year.

"The kids have a good spirit," he observed. "They have a different attitude than they've had in the past. They've come in with an attitude that this is their year.

"To me, that's very, very important," he said, "because motivation is something that you can't coach. They have to come in with it."

The Skippers have 11 veterans returning to the varsity squad as well as several promising junior varsity prospects who could come up and help make Cohasset a contender.

"Last year, they were a young team," Bouchard explained, "so they've matured quite a bit.

"I'm looking forward to this year," he said with a smile, "because most of the kids are coming back and they're bigger and stronger. I think we're going to surprise a few people in the league this year."

The Skippers are coming off a 6-14 season, but Bouchard pointed out that his team was very competitive. "We were in every ball game," he said. "Hopefully, we're going to be a little bit more than competitive this season."

He said that he expects good seasons from team captains Jamie Roy and last year's South Shore League all-star Bobby Shultz.

"They're tremendous kids and great leaders," Bouchard said. "I'm expecting quite a bit from them."

Bouchard explained that the team has worked together long enough now to work well as a unit. He said he is especially pleased with the improvement he has seen in his pitchers.

"I think that our pitching is strong this year," he said. "We've come a long way with some of them and we've stuck with them."

"I think that's going to be a key. If we're going to go anywhere, I think it's going to be with our pitching."

The Skippers began practicing on St. Patrick's Day and hope that the luck of the Irish will stay with them. Their first game is a scrimmage today against Scituate.

The squad will open up the regular season April 3, looking to stop Sacred Heart at home.

Candidates Corner

Conte announces

Vito Conte announced his candidacy for one of the two vacant seats on the Board of Selectmen.

Conte, a 35 year employee of the U.S. Air Force at Hanscom Field Geophysics Laboratory in Bedford, has been responsible for the shipping and handling of scientific equipment worldwide. He traveled at home and abroad to insure logistical support.

As Chief of the Material Handling Division, Conte has worked with departmental budgets and purchase requests, contracts and contractors. He has completed Personnel Management Courses.

Conte feels many of the concerns that Cohasset residents feel: a fair settlement of the police contract, sewerage problems, the possibility of water contamination, housing needs for the moderate income citizens, hazardous waste problems, fair and equal treatment for town employees, safe dependable transportation for our Senior Citizens.

He would also like closer communication with other town boards and committees.

Conte resides at 18 Hillside Drive with his wife Kay, and daughter Kathi, a student at Cohasset High. The Contes have three grown children and eight grandchildren.

Gallagher 'Open House'

The Committee to Elect James L. Gallagher, a candidate for Selectman, announces an "Open House" to be held in his honor. It is scheduled for Monday, March 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the dining room of the Red Lion Inn.

Gallagher asks any person interested in expressing his/her concerns for the Town to come and meet with him. He especially invites those who's opinions might differ from his. "My feeling is," Gallagher states, "that, when I am elected as Selectman, I will be serving all the citizens of Cohasset — not just the people who happen to agree with me."

He continues, "As an elected official, I will always be ready and able to listen to all sides of an issue, pro and con; and, hopefully, reach an equitable solution of any presented problems. Easy accessibility and frank communication with my fellow citizens is most important to me. This attitude will be carried over to my tenure as Selectman."

For those persons unable to attend the "Open House," Gallagher reminds them that they will still have the opportunity to meet with him and hear him address the issues at the annual "Candidates' Night," sponsored by the League of Women Voters, Tuesday, April 1 at the Town Hall.

Town affairs night

The Cohasset League of Women Voters is urging everyone to attend the annual Town Affairs Night at the Town Hall. This is an opportunity to hear the candidates declare their position through an unbiased forum. With so many people running for so many offices, this evening is a must for those interested in getting the facts straight.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 1. Refreshments will be served.

McNabb "Open House"

An "Open House" for Selectman candidate John McNabb, Jr., will be held Thursday, April 10, from 8 to 10 p.m. in the function room of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant.

"I invite all residents of the town to come and to join in this event," said McNabb. "There will be a short program and an opportunity for questions and answers."

Admission is free. However, the Committee to Elect John McNabb would like to remind people that contributions can be sent to the Committee at P.O. Box 212, Cohasset.

"I am running for Selectman because I believe I can make a significant contribution to improving the effectiveness of our town government," said McNabb.

McNabb has served for the past three years as a member of the Town Government Structure Committee, and for the last two years as Chairman of that board.

"On this Committee," said McNabb, "I have researched many areas of town government, including the Town Clerk's office, the Assessors Office, the Treasurer-Collectors office, Town Meeting and the positions of Executive Secretary and Town Accountant."

For the last two years, since being elected by the town in 1984, he has also served as a Trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

"As a Library Trustee," said McNabb, "I have gained experience in the operation of a town department, the budget process, personnel practices, and in serving the public."

"I grew up in Cohasset, attended Cohasset Public Schools, and graduated from Cohasset High School in 1974," said McNabb.

"I would do more to improve the management of town departments by calling for program plans, goals and objectives, and budget goals for town departments," said McNabb. "The Selectmen can operate the town government more effectively."

Sharon Becker

Becker runs for health board

Board of Health candidate Sharon Becker believes that being an environmentalist means more than concern for endangered species and forest preservation.

Environmental concerns include ground and surface water, sewage, pesticides, hazardous wastes, solid waste, seashores, wetlands, open spaces, and historic preservation. Environmental policy has to change from a "band-aid" approach to a real solution of the many problems, she said.

Becker is currently enrolled in a Masters program at Tufts University in Environmental Policy, and has been accepted as an intern for the environemtal law firm of McGregor, Shea and Doliner.

Since 1969, she has been active in various groups concerned with town affairs, and is currently Chairman for the Cohasset Disposal Area Study Committee. She has attended workshops in landfill issues, recycling, growth management and land use techniques, and environmental education.

She believes Cohasset needs citizen participation, that town boards communicate with each other, and that regional cooperation is important. The South Shore Coalition is a good example of area communication, Becker noted.

"It can be said that environmental protection begins at the local level, and I have the concern to work for a safe and protected environment," Becker stated.

Fundraiser for Kasperowicz

Supporters of Tanna Kasperowicz, candidate for a three-year term on the Cohasset School Committee, held a fundraising dinner for their candidate at the home of Jo-Ann and Dennis Rossi, South Main Street.

Kasperowicz addressed over 45 supporters regarding the educational concerns which prompted her to run for school committee.

Kasperowicz spoke of the Cohasset Public Schools as being a "small, excellent educational system which is emulated by many of our neighboring communities." She noted that our students are academic leaders, award-winning athletes, thespians, musicians, vocalists, artists and photographers. "These acknowledgements from the regional and state community don't happen by accident. Standing directly behind our students is a dedicated and tremendously talented teaching staff."

Many supporters said they were interested in electing a school committee which achieved goals through planning. Kasperowicz agreed that it is critical during these years of declining enrollment, to carefully assess programs, goals, and teacher attrition, "or the educational excellence which is our trademark may be in serious jeopardy."

Karin Bartow of 43 Sohier Street, has been appointed campaign manager of the Committee to Elect Kasperowicz.

Physician honored

Cohasset physician Albert L. Sullivan, M.D., will be one of four honorees receiving awards at the second annual Benefit for the Hospice of the South Shore, on Friday evening, April 11 in the ballroom of the Braintree Sheraton Tara Hotel.

Dr. Sullivan and his associate, James R. Everett, M.D. of Scituate, will receive the Ruth Sleeper Award for excellence in health care. The physicians have served as Medical Advisors to the Hospice program since its inception five years ago. The award was established last year to be given annually in the name of Ms. Sleeper, a Braintree resident who has retired after a long and distinguished career in nursing and nursing education.

Dr. Sullivan specializes in hemotology and oncology. His office is in South Weymouth.

As Medical Advisors to the Hospice program he and Dr. Everett provide consultation to the agency's team of home health care personnel. They also offer consultation on pain management and care planning to the personal physicians of Hospice patients.

A celebrity honoree, Dick Flavin of WBZ-T.V., will receive the Sunshine Award at the dinner-dance. A Milton businessman, Gerald T. Reilly, will receive the agency's Community Service Award. The evening will celebrate the fifth anniversary of the Hospice program and 75 years of service for its affiliated agency, the Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore, Inc. Both agencies have offices at Braintree Five Corners and in Scituate at 56 Driftway South.

Cocktails, dinner and the music of a Dixieland jazz band are planned for the evening, from 7 p.m. to midnight. Tickets are $50 per person and must be reserved by March 26. Contributions are tax-deductable. For more information, please call 849-1710.

Sawchuk, chamber president

Wayne Sawchuk was unanimously elected President of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at the Chamber's monthly meeting March 12.

Wayne Sawchuk

A life-long resident of the town, Sawchuk has operated his construction and real estate development company since 1974.

"Cohasset residents will see more positive changes to the Village and 3A business districts this year." Sawchuk said. "The Chamber will do all it can to assist Cohasset business people to expand the services and products they offer to town citizens."

Sawchuk intends to use the Chamber as a means to bring business people together to share ideas. He wants the Chamber to continue promoting good relationships between business and professional people and town residents.

Sawchuk succeeds outgoing President Fred Wood of Peterson Insurance Agency. Wayne and his wife, Annette live in Cohasset with their two sons.

Other Chamber Officers elected were Dick Straley—Vice President, Jim Kearney—Treasurer, and Cynthia Peters—Secretary.

Savings Bank commendation

Cohasset Savings Bank has earned a commendation and Mass Bay Award from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay for its employee and company participation in the 1985 United Way Campaign.

In a letter to Robert P. Magner, Vice President, who has been active in local and regional United Way campaigns for many years, Bill Carmichael, "loaned executive" in the campaign, commended the bank and its staff for its part in the campaign as doing "a great deal toward helping the one million people who will use the United Way supported agencies this coming year."

The bank not only made contributions to the campaign, but two of its staff headed up the local campaigns in Cohasset and Scituate.

Margaret R. Santacroce, Assistant Vice President, was chairperson of the Cohasset campaign, contacting town businesses for their contributions to the United Way.

Ruth Mendes, Manager of the Bound Brook Office of the bank in North Scituate, headed the 1985 campaign in that town.

Cohasset Conway a hit

For the ninth consecutive year, the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company sold more real estate than any of the 33 Conway Country offices.

Under the direction of manager Muriel Desmond, a 25-year veteran of the firm, the sales associates sold $26,390,000 in real estate during 1985. That total shattered all previous sales records for the Cohasset office and for all individual Conway sales centers. Since she was named manager of the Cohasset office nine years ago, Muriel has ingrained in her sales staff the importance of remaining the top producers within the company.

"While the bulk of our business is done in the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate, Marshfield, Norwell, Hanover and Duxbury, my associates are not limited to these areas," Muriel said. "For example, a $420,000 Braintree home was recently both listed and sold by Marie Palm of our office. So you see, we know no boundaries. It's all 'Conway Country,' " she said.

The Rte. 3A office staff is a team, Muriel emphasized. They all work together to insure that a property listed with the company is sold as quickly as possible.

"That's why we and the entire Conway company are number one. And we intend for that honor to be repeated in 1986." Muriel said.

Local volunteers honored

South Shore Art Center volunteer Anna Babin of Cohasset in recognition of her service to the Center has been named volunteer of the year.

She has given over 300 hours in one year to help at the Center and was head hostess for the Center's 1985 South Shore Arts Festival. The South Shore Art Center recently honored Babin and other volunteers at a special reception.

Elizabeth Reddie Volunteer Awards were given to the following people in recognition of their hours of volunteer work given to the Center which is located at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Those honored included: Virginia Avery of Marshfield, lecture series coordinator; Gail Claes of Abington, gallery intern; Patricia Delano of Scituate, gallery intern; Ubaldo di Benedetto of Cohasset, past president; Robert Guarino of Marshfield, past president; Betty Hunt of Quincy, gallery intern; Louise Kalish of Quincy, former advisory board member and coordinator of outside exhibits, and Sheldon Ripley of Cohasset, past president.

Cohasset Savings Bank personnel were honored for their participation in the United Way campaign. Honored employees include (L to R) Ruth Mendes, Margaret Santacroce, and Robert Magner.

It's been a 'wonderful' year for St. Stephens

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

While the summer carillon concerts at St. Stephen's Church provide Cohasset residents with beautiful music, the parish contributes to the community in other ways.

"The church really sees itself as part of a larger community," said the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector at St. Stephen's. "We try to do what we can to give something to the community."

Parishioners give their time and their resources to area service organizations. "One blessing is that the Social Service League of Cohasset has its offices in our building," said Cutler. "Many people in the parish are volunteers there."

The parish also supports the Quincy Crisis Center. "In addition to monetary donations, we prepare a meal for the center once a month," Cutler sid. "We cook the meal in our kitchen and bring it to the center."

The church is also involved with the Episcopal Mission in Hull. Church members volunteer at the Mission thrift shop, and attend services in Hull regularly. St. Stephen's also provides financial support to the mission.

"It's rewarding not only to help alleviate societal needs," said Cutler, "but also to share the Christian message with another town."

St. Stephen's, established in 1896, has 140 families in the parish. Cutler has been Rector at St. Stephen's for about a year.

"I felt called to do a ministry with people able to share and grow in that ministry," he said. "I think St. Stephen's is in a wonderful position to grow and thrive."

St. Stephen's offers a variety of programs to its members. Since Cutler became Rector, a church school program for children and teens has been established.

"We've got a program for children from kindergarten to grade 12," he said. "We've got a full complement of volunteer teachers."

Cutler pays special attention to the needs of high school students. "Students in senior high school are wrestling with a lot of questions in their lives," he said. "We try to give them teaching as well as the opportunity for discussion and socializing."

In addition to children's classes, St. Stephen's has an adult education program. "It's an opportunity to get people of the parish together and cover different topics," said Cutler.

Rev. E. Clifford Cutler

The program for adults includes Bible study, spirituality, and exploration of social issues. "We recently had some hospital chaplains come in and talk about AIDS," Cutler said. "It's a misunderstood disease and people need to know more abut it."

The parish new member visiting program was also started by Cutler. "We had between 20 and 30 new families come into the parish," he said, "and it's important to incorporate them into the church as strongly as we can. Having people from the parish visit new members helps strengthen the parish."

Music plays an important role in St. Stephen's spiritual life. "Our choir does a tremendous job," Cutler said. The choir, under the direction of choirmaster and organist Richard Hunter, performed Durufle's Requiem on Palm Sunday, accompanied by a chamber orchestra.

The church's carillon is "a special part of the parish," Cutler said. "The carillon has 51 bells," he said. "It is played like an organ."

The church holds carillon concerts featuring carilloner Sally Warner in the summer. Frederick Koopman of the "Forget Me Not" shop crafted a Paschal Candle stand for the church to show his appreciation for the carillon music.

"He said he wanted to give the church something for the beautiful music the carillon gives the community," Cutler said. "The stand will be dedicated at our Easter Eve service.

"It was a very generous gift," he said.

Cutler said his first year in the parish was one of organization and learning. "There have been many people steering me down the right path," he said.

"Church wardens John Mullett and Joyce Sturdy ave been very supporting," he said, "and secretary Carole Tierney is just tops.

"The whole parish has pulled together and is really committed to the church," said Cutler. "They've allowed it all to happen. It's just a good feeling to be a part of this parish. It's been a wonderful year."

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Small may mean beautiful however. . .

Kingston has found itself in more trouble in the 1980s than a town that typifies South Shore beauty deserves. Its travails are instructive in the difficulties that the great majority of Old Colony communities confront.

The decade began with redundant discoveries of cranberry bogs and other previously presumed pristine locations that had secretly been contaminated by the burial of drums of lethal, carcinogenic chemicals. Surely the last such drums have not been unearthed, nor the last sites discovered, nor are Kingston's grisly findings unique among our towns. We shall spend the rest of our lives, both as communities and as individuals, waiting to learn if time bombs such as Kingston's tick for us.

In 1984 Kingston's travail threatened to get worse. Neighboring Plymouth, territorially the largest community in Massachusetts, and burgeoning in population in the 20-year afterglow of property tax relief brought about by the nuclear station there, was awash in its own sewage. But the town found itself inconveniently constrained by the Massachusetts Ocean Harbors Sanctuary Act from increasing its effluents into the historic inlet that comprises Plymouth Harbor and Kingston and Duxbury Bays.

The history of Plymouth's violating the same Ocean Harbors Sanctuary Act is not as long as the history of the inlet — not quite — but Kingstonians and Duxburyites have gotten used to finding their beaches awash in non-biodegradable tampon applicators, which are the irrefutable markers of effluent sewage. Since Kingston and Duxbury have neither sewers nor sludge, Plymouth argued that the applicators in question were Boston's; but Kingston is surely correct in presuming that this is one visitation that can't be blamed on Ray Flynn.

By 1984 Plymouth confronted but three options: to start complying with the Ocean Harbors Act, which would mean curtailing development for a while; to go on violating the Act, or to change it. The first option was unthinkable to Plymouth. The second was the option taken when the third got at least temporarily sidetracked by the protests of Plymouth's neighbors and by a few cool heads in the legislature.

But changing the law was and is Plymouth's intent, and there is a great deal of doubt as to how long Kingston and Duxbury can hold Plymouth off. Plymouth is big, influential, and growing. A town like Kingston, on the other hand, tends to be despised on Beacon Hill. It is small, its residents are presumed to be one party pointy-headed yacht clubbers, the other part red-necked hicks. That is of course bigotry in its low, unvarnished form, but it is a view palpably held on Beacon Hill by many political "swells" who consider themselves above bigotry. It is, moreover, supported by the political numbers: numerically a town like Plymouth counts; a town like Kingston does not.

Kingston's travail does not end with Plymouth's effluents. Come 1986, in a remarkably similar case, another outsize neighbor is attempting to bully state government into violating the best interest of Kingston and its environment. The city of Brockton, which has long failed to remedy a chronic water shortage, has long coveted the water of foresighted communities such as Kingston and Scituate, both of which some years ago took action to assure enough water for themselves and their descendents.

Brockton's economic salvation — its equivalent to Plymouth's nuclear power station — was rent control in Boston, Brookline and Cambridge. By dint of misguided government action, the development of rental apartments in those communities was abandoned to lunatics. Developers with any sense of reality looked elsewhere, and in Brockton they found a community suffering grievously from the imported shoe, a community that was glad to welcome them.

Thus, though for a different reason, Brockton began to recover from the closing of its shoe industry just as Plymouth had begun to recover from the closing of the Plymouth Cordage Company. By the 1980s Brockton's chronic and chronically unaddressed water shortage started to become acute in dry times when the water level drops in its chief source of water: Kingston's Silver Lake. In 1982 Brockton prevailed on the then Secretary of Environmental Affairs John Bewick to propose creating a Southeastern Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, or Boondoggle, I forget the exact name of the thing. The gist of it was to allow Brockton to tap Scituate's reservoir and to have the cost spread among both the affluent coastal towns and the less affluent inland towns. Happily, Bewick's boss Gov. Ed King had other problems that year, and when the Old Colony howled nearly as one, the proposal was dropped.

Now come 1986, Brockton has a different idea, but one that is along the same "what's yours is mine" line as before. Brockton would like to tap Pine Brook in Kingston to the tune of four million gallons per day. Standing in Brockton's way is the Massachusetts Interbasin Transfer Act, which forbids shifting water from one watershed to another without the approval of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Brockton has applied for an exemption under the Act; D.E.Q.E. is now evaluating the application, but means to take its time — as it should. In 1985, frustrated with the wait, Brockton badgered D.E.Q.E. into declaring an "emergency" that gives the city permission to build a 24-inch pipe into Pine Brook's reservoir — enough to allow a tap not of four, but 17, million gallons per day.

Kingston officials are apoplectic, for with good logic they consider the 24-inch pipe a "Trojan Horse" for a huge, permanent tap that would endanger the environmentally important Jones River as well as several nearby cranberry bogs. What ought to concern us all are Brockton's attempts, so like Plymouth's, to use political clout to prevail with state government to the potential detriment of a smaller, better run, more beautiful, but less influential community.

I go into Kingston's travails because they serve as an excellent model for those of every other Southeastern Massachusetts community — even Plymouth and Brockton when the "bully" is Boston. As a region we are dominated by the megalopolis of which we are a vibrant, beautiful, but small component. Politically the region will never command the legislative or gubernatorial attention the way the mayor of Boston does; nor will our small towns command attention the way Plymouth and Brockton do. Therefore, whatever political good we are able to bring about will only be arduously purchased through good argument, good alliances and steadfast persistence. If we are to stop what is evil —such as the taking of our water or the dumping of other people's effluents — we will sometimes have to scream like the devil.

A conversation with 'The Rich Wife' author

By Peggy Beals
FROM THE bookshelf

"I wanted the book to be romantic, escapist, to have some substance, but nothing meaningful!" said Barbara Wyden as she described her first novel, The Rich Wife, at the March author talk in Duxbury.

Bob Hale, proprietor of Westwinds Bookshop which sponsors the series, introduced Wyden. "It's almost certain that everyone here has read a book by Barbara Wyden, but you don't know it." Wyden has been a ghostwriter, authoring among others, Jane Fonda's book, the Kay Summersby book about Eisenhower, and the popular and helpful Widow by Lynn Caine.

"There are people with a story to tell, but who just can't write it," Wyden said.

"Do you need to like the people you write for?" asked a member of the audience.

"It helps," Wyden replied. "You do have to get inside their skin."

She tapes copiously when she works on such a book. Iaccoca was ghostwritten (not by Wyden), but she believes its subject could well have done the job himself, if he'd chosen to do so.

Wyden shared the platform with David Vogler of Duxbury, author of Congress and Democracy. "According to a Lou Harris poll," Vogler said, "the American people believe members of Congress go to Washington just to bring back a piece of the big pie to their constituents."

Vogler, a professor of political science at Wheaton, has worked in Congress. He thinks you get a true picture only by looking at events from several points of view.

Congressmen see themselves as able to rise above the interests of their districts to consider the welfare of the nation as a whole. His book shows a side of Congress the folks back home don't get to see.

The Westwinds' Third Thursdays are fairly new and extremely successful. It began when Hale offered a talk by Tasha Tudor, formerly of Milton. Her richly illustrated books are so popular he was bombarded with ticket requests, one couple making the trip from North Carolina to meet the author in this rare appearance.

Last month, Third Thursdays featured two authors-Beatrice Gormley, an activist in NOW and author of books for children, and Alexandra Marshall, author of The Brass Bed. April's planned speakers are David McCord, New England's unofficial Poet Laureate and Greer Underwood who wrote Gourmet Light for people who love to eat, but not to gain.

Alan Dershowitz is scheduled for May, but his new book about the Claus von Bulow trial has been recalled because of litigation with von Bulow's children, so that's tentative. Co-speakers will be David and Lillian Stokes who produce superb nature guides.

Bob Hale himself is as entertaining as any of his guests, and infinitely knowledgable about books. The Plymouth Community Nurse Association presents Hale lecturing at the Duxbury Art Complex on April 1, 15 and 29. The series is $20, checks payable to PCNA to Box 98 SHS, Duxbury, 02331. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope.

The Plymouth Library offers a program with Margot Arnold on April 13 at 2 p.m. at Memorial Hall, Plymouth. Love Among the Allies is her latest, also Cape Cod Caper and Affairs of State. If you missed Erma J. Fisk in this series, you can treat yourself to her delightful books. The Peacocks of Babo-Quivari and Parrot's Wood.

Fisk, a widow, expected no more of life than a gentle, lonely slide downhill when she was catapulted into a lively new career. She's a stimulating rebuke to the conventional view of aging. See also Yates' Call it Zest.

These author talks are fun and valuable cultural facets, offering horizon-broadening glimpses of other worlds: Camelia Sadat about Egypt, Vogler on Congress, Wyden on the workings of the publishing world, Goodwin on Washington and LBJ.

Coalition appoints solid-waste subcommittee

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

After hearing experts warn of impending shortages in landfill space, representatives of the South Shore Coalition last week formed a subcommittee charged with studying solid-waste disposal alternatives to find out which best suit the group's 10 member towns.

Most alternatives described Thursday involve regional participation because they are not economical for most communities, the experts said. Major alternatives include resource-recovery plants, which burn trash to produce electricity or convert it for use as fiber boards and a regional landfill.

An environmental planner from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council and a project manager from the state Bureau of Solid Waste said the towns must begin to study alternatives to landfilling refuse now, since dump space in all coalition towns is expected to reach capacity by the year 2000.

Among member towns, the landfill in Scituate is expected to last the longest, followed by those in Marshfield and Hingham. Cohasset's landfill is slated to be closed in three years.

Other member towns, such as Duxbury, rely on out-of-town commercial landfills but face escalating costs for rubbish disposal. Duxbury's disposal costs shot up more than 100 percent last year — to over $500,000 — and other towns will face the same dilemma as space runs out in the commercial landfills, according to MAPC planner Judith C. Wiegand.

While it is inexpensive, landfilling garbage is in most cases environmentally unsound. Betsy Matyas of the solid waste bureau said the state currently has only one "state-of-the-art" landfill, a commercial site in western Massachusetts.

Therefore, communities will have to pay more for disposal in the future and should be prepared to invest funds for environmentally sound solutions, Wiegand and Matyas said.

Landfilling is currently perceived as "a free or cheap method of disposal, yet most residents and officials don't realize the hidden costs involved in it."

"South Shore towns should be thinking of planning, siting and constructing some type of regional facility within five or six years," Wiegand told coalition members.

She also warned communities to get involved with a regional facility by the planning stage, "or these towns might fall through the cracks" and be left without places to dispose of rubbish.

"In solid-waste disposal, the byword is regional solutions," she said.

Composting leaves, rubbish and other organic debris along with recycling glass, paper and metals are valuable ways to reduce volumes of refuse but are not solutions by themselves, Wiegand said.

"You're still left with over half the volume of rubbish after you take these items out of the stream."

While it is an important component in resource recovery, income from recycling can vary widely because of the volatility of markets for recyclable materials.

"It depends on lots of factors like the strength of the dollar and economic conditions," she said.

Matyas said the state may offer recycling subsidies to soften the market impact if many communities opt for resource recovery alternatives.

The most-proven method of resource recovery is that which produces electricity from "mass burning" refuse to produce steam that drives electric turbines. Other technologies have yet to be proven in this country, but that doesn't mean they are impractical for South Shore towns.

"That's the whole purpose of the study committee — to find out which alternative is best for your communities," said Wiegand.

Recycling and resource recovery do not completely eliminate the need for landfills, Wiegand said.

"The law of conservation of matter still applies, whether it goes into the air as smoke or into the ground as ash."

A landfill is still needed for refuse that cannot be accepted at a resource-recovery facility, such as discarded appliances and other large metal objects. However, removing organic, recyclable and burnable materials from the stream greatly increases landfill life, she said. Together, these items account for 47 to 75 percent of a typical community's residential refuse, according to an MAPC report on solid-waste alternatives released in January.

Coalition members unanimously accepted the experts' recommendations and immediately formed the study panel. However, they noted that siting a regional facility could be a major problem.

"The problem is that the final product has to be sold to one of the towns," said Hull Selectman John Silva. "That could be a very interesting political decision."

But Hingham Planning Board member Alan Devine proposed a solution to the siting dilemma.

"A good enticement would be to offer free use of the facility to the host community," he said. "That can be very, very attractive, especially at the costs we're talking about."

Matyas said communities wishing to enter the resource-recovery business might also be willing to host a facility.

Cohasset Selectman Diane Sullivan suggested the subcommittee include members of town landfill-study committees. Duxbury representative Glenn Rowland amplified that proposal by suggesting the committee gather an inventory of local studies.

"It's better than starting out with absolutely nothing and it will give all the towns a good idea where the towns stand," he said.

The solid-waste subcommittee is slated to hold an organizational meeting in Hanover April 10.

CHS finished in top five at drama finals. . .

In an unusual twist, Emmons found himself working beside playwright Scanlan at a summer theatre school in Connecticut. Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford was host this past summer to an innovative program called Discover '85 which allowed four playwrights and four directors to join a group of student actors for an intensive two weeks of play development.

Emmons was one of the directors, and "Candid's" Michael Scanlan was one of the playwrights. Emmons approached Scanlan about doing the play here and suggested some of the things he felt the play needed to improve its appeal.

Scanlan went back to work on the script, rewriting the play's monologues and adding a character (which Emmons' daughter Jenna played in the CHS production). The play has also been edited a bit to bring it to a running time of 37 minutes. At the drama festivals, if a play runs over 40 minutes it is disqualified.

"What you can't judge about the time is the audience reaction," said Emmons. "I took one play to Boston that ran to 39 minutes and 30 seconds because of the audience's laughter."

Choosing the play is the most difficult part of preparing for the festival, according to Emmons who reads about 50 scripts a year and selects two for production. "The good thing about this job is that no one tells me how many shows to do every year. So depending on the interest or the available materials, I might decide on up to three," he said.

"I try to vary the choices by doing comedy and then something else. I think the key is variety and the key is not doing high school plays. Some scripts belittle the high school student. They don't give the kids any credit for ability or thought," he noted.

After a script has been chosen, Emmons sets about a process which he says he 'hates'; that is the process of casting. Since there are no drama classes at CHS, the actors are drawn from students who are interested in the extracurricular drama program and who can dedicate the time necessary for rehearsals. Emmons described the quality of the actors he gets by saying, "Cohasset kids have a lot of insight and understanding. There are drama programs elsewhere with more money invested, with more elaborate sets, but it boils down to the kids."

The judges agreed. One judge critiqued the play by saying, "every cast member pulled his/her own weight."

"That's what I was after," said Emmons. Other judges praised the performers for not being afraid to show real intensity and pain and for making the audience laugh and cry.

The drama festival is sponsored by the Boston Globe as a forum for schools to present their plays and to use the opportunity to see what other schools are doing. Student actors who participate in the festival receive free tickets to the final competitions.

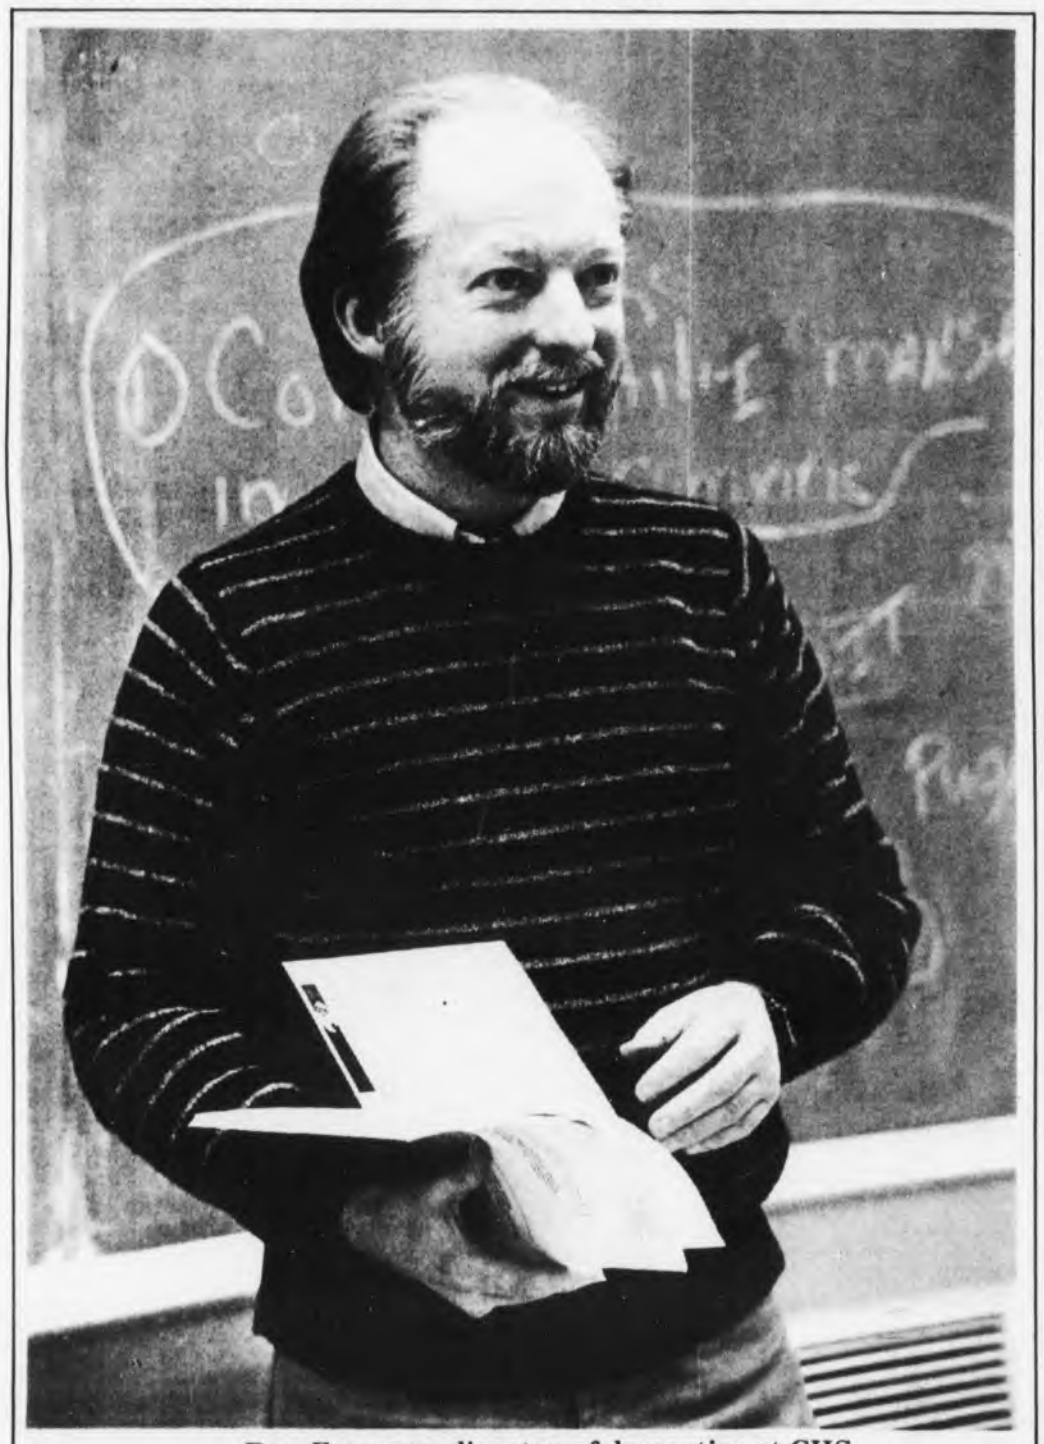
"Schools have been dropping by the wayside because of funding," said Emmons. The Cohasset drama program is paid for by the proceeds raised at the door which have to last until the following year's season in order to pay the initial production costs of the year's first play.

Last year, the school was unable to host the festival because the auditorium lighting board was not functional. Fortunately, the town stepped in and paid for a new system. It was installed just prior to this season's first play.

One of the largest expenses that high school drama programs have are the royalities that must be paid to the publishing company and the playwright. These fees can average $75 for the first performance and $50 for the subsequent ones. Since high school theatrical groups are the largest active producers of plays in America, these royalities fund a large segment of the playwrighting community.

"Candid" made its way into the state finals at the John Hancock Hall in Boston. While this pleases Emmons, he is already thinking ahead to next year when he will lose most of this year's fine cast.

"God knows what I'll do then," he said. Whatever he decides, there is a good chance we'll flock to see at next year's state festival finals.



Ron Emmons, director of dramatics at CHS.

Lack of support drowns water-district proposal

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The Old Colony Planning Council has dropped its plan to form a 34-community water-supply district on the South Shore due to a lack of support.

OCPC agreed to drop the proposal after Executive Director Daniel Crane told board members the idea got "little or no support" from local officials or legislators studying a bill to authorize formation of the district.

Since OCPC asked state Rep. Thomas Kennedy of Brockton to sponsor the bill, the legislature is expected to drop the bill from consideration in this session, Crane said.

Support was so slight for the bill that "nothing was moving on the legislative front" with the proposal, he added.

The district proposal was "dead before it got started" on Beacon Hill, but it did serve to "get the ball rolling on water issues facing the South Shore," State Sen. Edward P. Kirby (R-Whitman), who represents Pembroke, said in an interview Monday.

Crane, Kirby and area town officials all agreed the district proposal was too large to benefit the involved towns.

The district was proposed to ease transfers of water between member communities, which would have required construction of needed mains and pumps. Members would have been required to submit estimates of water needs in the next 20 years and, under the district agreement, would have been bound to arbitration in the event of disputes between members.

The district would have included coastal towns from Cohasset to Plymouth and others from Brockton through Taunton toward the Rhode Island border.

Instead, OCPC plans to advocate revitalization of the Central Plymouth County Water District Commission, which has been inactive for several years, Crane said.

Crane, Kirby and Rep. Robert Emmett Hayes of Whitman are also planning a late-March meeting to give local officials more information on state law dealing with water issues.

Officials from the region will be able to learn about the Water Resources Management Act, the Drinking Water Act and the Interbasin Transfer Act, all of which were passed or strengthened since 1982, Crane said.

Sen. Kirby said legislative objections to the proposal included the size of the district, lack of a clear definition of the member communities and improperly-written legislation, Kirby said.

Kirby suggested the proposal was premature because there was no clear idea of supply and need across the district, which would have encompassed four river basins.

"Once the supply is identified, the political solution (to the water-supply problem) can be built around it," Kirby said. "This proposal would have addressed the problem the other way around."

The proposal was met with questions by many local officials and strong opposition by others. Kingston officials, who feared the proposal would prove to be another mechanism for Brockton to divert more of its running water, urged officials in each of the 34 communities to oppose the idea.

Brockton depends on Silver Lake in Kingston and Pembroke for its water needs and now wants to divert more water from Jones River to the reservior.

The proposal "would work much better if it were centered around a single river basin with no more than five or six member towns," said Philip C. Beal who, as Hanover's deputy public works superintendent, administers the town's water system.

Next to salaries, energy costs are the largest part of a water department's budget, Beal said.

He added the cost of moving water around such a large district — well over 1,000 square miles — could be "staggering."

"It would simply be too costly to move it around," Beal said.

OCPC has no current plans to revive the water-district legislation and will stick to providing information to local decisionmakers, Crane said.

Some of the state funds that would have been spent by the proposed district can now be spent by the central county commission to study diversion of a small portion of North River water, Kirby said.

The idea was originally proposed in legislation filed in the early 1970s by former state Rep. Robert Gillette, Beal said.

"So much flows down that river in springtime and, right now, it's just flowing into the ocean," Kirby said.

OCPC has no current plans to revive the district proposal, but will continue to act as an information source for local decisionmakers, Crane said.

"The water issue isn't going away. It will be with us on the South Shore for many years to come," he added.

Shalom basketball teams shoot for championship

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom basketball teams are finishing up their most active season. Two of the three Shalom teams will be participating in their division playoffs in the Quincy YMCA Church League.

The games will be held over the next few weekends.

Both competing teams have a good chance of winning their division's championship. Last year's entry in the Daniel Division won both the league title and the division's Sportsmanship Award.

The local synagogue has sponsored at least one team in the Quincy League for a number of years. This is the first year that they have entered teams at three age levels.

The league is made up of over 70 teams sponsored by religious organizations in the Quincy area. The weekly games are well supervised and officiated providing a positive learning experience for the boys and girls who participate.

SAMSON DIVISION

This nine years old and under team was coached by Ronnie Shone of Scituate. He led the team to a near perfect season losing only one game. They have a very good chance of winning their division's championship. The team included the following players: Peter Carpenter, Jeremy Freedman, Andrew Friedman, Marc Sheftel, Adam and Andrew Hurst, Danny Rudolph, and Jamie Stone, all of Hingham, Matt Levangie and Taylor McGowan of Scituate and Ben Levin of Norwell.

DANIEL DIVISION

First year coach Ed Katersky of Scituate was assisted by Andy Parillo of Hingham in leading this 11 years old and under team to a strong season. The roster listed Jonathan Carr, Mike and John Cunningham, Elon Ferency, Josh Lawton, David Parillo, and Greg Rudolph of Hingham. Aaron Katersky and Matt Levangie of Scituate rounded out the team.

GOLIATH DIVISION

This 14 years old and under team had a very frustrating season. Just barely missing the playoffs, they lost 4 of their 11 games by a total of 5 points. They were coached by Mike Tesler of Hingham and Dave Bernardi of Scituate. Team members were Steve and Jon Carpenter, Marc Cotsonas, and Jamie Tesler, all from Hingham. Mark Connerty, Jason Greenfield, Ted Lambert, and Keith McDonald from Norwell and Evan Bernardi of Scituate.

The Sha'aray Shalom sponsored program enrolled over 30 boys from Sha'aray Shalom as well as several area churches.

The basketball season will formally end on June 1 with the Congregation's Annual Sports Breakfast.

Besides the presentation of individual and team awards, there will be a speaker from the sports world as part of the program.

Speakers appearing at the breakfast in the past few years have included the Patriots' Steve Grogan, the Patriot's former player Jim Nance, TV's Bill O'Connell and Scituate's Dave Silk.

Any groups who would like information on next year's YMCA Church League program are invited to call Bill Stansbury at the YMCA, 479-8500 or Ricky Greenfield at 659-7368.

Area railroad study group formed

A 23-member citizens advisory committee has been named to participate in an environmental review of the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project. The committee was named by Environmental Affairs Secretary James Hoyte.

The committee will assist Hoyte in the review and evaluation of the rail restoration project on the environment.

"This is an important step forward in looking at the possible return of commuter rail service on the South Shore," said Sen. William Golden of Weymouth.

"This citizen advisory group will be able to review all the current material available on the project, and to study seriously environmental issues which could affect the return of the commuter rail."

An environmental impact report is being prepared on the Old Colony Project, a proposed commuter rail service on the Plymouth, Middleboro and Greenbush rail lines.

Golden was instrumental last year in getting a non-binding referendum question on the town ballots of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Open Meeting Law seminar March 26

District Attorney William C. O'Malley is concerned there be a clear understanding of the open Meeting Law by both public officials and concerned citizens.

For this reason, his office will be conducting a seminar to discuss the significance and the impact of the Massachusetts Open Meeting Law, Wednesday March 26 from 7 to 10 p.m. in the auditorium of Massasoit Community College, Rte. 27 in Brockton.

The Massachusetts Open Meeting Law was enacted to promote a basic premise of a democratic form of government; public access to the decision making process of governmental bodies.

The law requires open discussion of governmental action at public meetings.

The Open Meeting Law's purpose is to enforce the public right to intelligently judge the merits of actions taken by their representatives.

"As District Attorney for the Plymouth District, it is my duty under the statute to enforce the provibecause I believe that open government is more likely to enjoy the confidence of its citizens to the benefit of those who serve and those whose votes choose their leaders," O'Malley said.

"I also believe that effective enforcement of the Open Meeting Law should not rely solely on the resolution of disputes in court.

"Public officials who are informed about the requirements of the law will seldom have occasion to be found in violation of its provisions.

"It is, therefore, the purpose of the seminar and the materials to be distributed to provide a resource for public officials, the media, and any interested citizens," O'Malley said.

Pre-registration for the seminar is encouraged or you may register at the door. There is a $5 seminar fee payable by check to cover the cost of printed materials. For more information or registration cards, please call the District Attorneys Office at 584-8120.

A profile of an early Cohasset seafarer

By David Wadsworth
Historical Society Curator

Among Cohasset's early seafarers who served with distinction in the American Revolution was Capt. Nathaniel Nichols, Jr., and one of his major exploits early in the war can be followed with some accuracy.

Nathaniel Nichols, Jr., born in Cohasset in about the year 1749, was the son of Capt. Nathaniel and Catherine (Cushing) Nichols of Jerusalem Road, and great-grandson of one of Cohasset's earliest settlers, Israel Nichols. The young Nathaniel, Junior, grew up in a cottage built by his father at the edge of the sea, just a few yards east of today's Forest Avenue.

Later, that early cottage, now long ago taken down, would be known as the "First Black Rock House", one of Cohasset's oldest sea-side inns. On December 15, 1774, Nathaniel Nichols, at age 25, married Zibiah, daughter of Joshua and Grace Bates of Cohasset. In those early years of our town, many young men turned to the sea for their livelihood and Nathaniel Nichols was no exception. He became a Master Mariner in Cohasset's "Age of Sail", following in his father's footsteps.

Shortly after the Revolutionary War began at Concord and Lexington in 1775, the new nation's Continental Congress authorized the establishing of a Navy to carry the war onto the high seas. An American war-fleet was to challenge the mightiest sea power in the world, Britain's Royal Navy.

By what exact route Cohasset's Nathaniel Nichols journeyed to become part of the fledgling American Navy we cannot be sure, but by February of 1776 he was aboard an American warship standing out into Chesapeake Bay, about to depart upon a voyage that would demonstrate the power of the fledgling Navy. Commanding a squadron of eight Continental vessels of various sizes was a veteran Rhode Island merchant captain and privateer, Commodore Esek Hopkins.

The largest of his ships were two 24-gun frigates recently converted from merchant ships, named "Alfred" and "Columbus". Other ships on Hopkins' small squadron included the brigs "Cabot" and "Andrew Doria", the sloops-of-war "Providence" and "Hornet", and the schooners "Wasp" and "Fly". Their primary mission was to clear away a small fleet of British warships operating in Chesapeake Bay. But new and important news was received, and the Commodore turned his vessels instead towards the island of Great Abaco, the Bahamas.

It had become known that the British were stockpiling large amounts of gunpowder and numerous cannons at the Bahamas port of Nassau (then known as New Providence). Hopkins resolved to capture this desparately needed material for the use of the poorly equipped Continental Army of General George Washington. That Nathaniel Nichols was a member of this expedition to Nassau we can be certain, but which vessel he sailed upon is not certain. It may have been the flagship "Alfred". If so, he may have known the young Scotsman who was "Alfred's" First Lieutenant and would become famous, John Paul Jones.

Following Hopkins' arrival in the Bahamas, his squadron captured two local island sailing sloops and filled them with troops with which to invade the port of Nassau. Nathaniel Nichols was placed in command of these vessels, for Davenport's "Genealogies of Cohasset" reports "marines and landsmen were put on board of two sloops under command of Captain Nichols and sent to Nassau to capture powder stored there". The actual landing from Nichols' sloops was made at a nearby beach on March 3, 1776 and Nassau's forts were taken after an overland march.

The British frigate also succeeded in escaping Hopkins' guns after a running battle, and General Washington's armies soon received the benefit of the captured arms and supplies from the forts of Nassau. At few years later in the war, Nathaniel Nichols, by then the keeper of a store in Cohasset, noted in his Day Book the undertaking of a privateering voyage during the winter months. The privateer, the identity of which he did not record, left from the North Shore in November and returned to Boston the following March. During that voyage, which extended into eastern areas of the Atlantic, Nichols required the taking of two vessels as prizes Nichols may well have had a share of the pri[illegible] money payed to members of the privateer's crew.

As the Revolutionary War went on, American warships such as the frigate "Alfred" had almost disappeared from the seas, victims of the Royal Navy's superior numbers and the tight blockade of American ports. War on the high seas fell to swift and agile privateers which continued to take a heavy toll of British merchant shipping. Without doubt, Nichols' unnamed privateer was one of that fleet of American commerce raiders which carried the war to the very shores of Britain itself.

Thus, one of Cohasset's early seafarers played a role in the American Revolution, first as a member of the new nation's first Navy, then as a priv[illegible]teer on the high seas. Captain Nathaniel Nichol[illegible] and his wife Zibiah had seven children, born bet[illegible]en 1775 and 1791.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Hopping into the Easter culinary spirit

The suspense and excitement of the magical Easter bunny's visit makes sleep as elusive for children as on Christmas Eve. Getting up with the dawn to seek an Easter basket filled with marshmallow chickens, chocolate bunnies, jelly beans and candy eggs wrapped in foil makes a thrilling start for a very special day.

As a prelude to the joyful celebration marking the end of Lent, a traditional custom is the decorating of hard-boiled Easter eggs, fun to color and then to hunt. But then comes the question of what to do with them. Not to worry. If properly stored in the refrigerator as soon as possible, there is almost no end to the uses for them, one being Betty Dusossoit's

EASTER MONDAY CASSEROLE

4 T butter
4 T flour
1 tsp. dry mustard
Dash white pepper
1/4 lb. sharp cheddar cheese
2 c. milk
6 hard boiled eggs
1 large green pepper, diced
2 c. diced cooked ham

Parboil green pepper until slightly soft. Set aside to drain. Melt butter in pan and make a cream sauce of flour, mustard, pepper and milk. Add cheese and stir until melted and smooth. Add ham, green pepper, sliced eggs and put in medium-sized casserole. Cover entire top with buttered bread crumbs Bake at 350° for 20 min., or until brown and hot. Decorate with fresh parsley. Better still the next day, writes Betty. Serves six.

Holiday feasting is grand, but then come the leftovers. Canned hams are little or no problem — even rather nice to have around for sandwiches or cold cuts. Quite often, however, there's a ham bone staring one in the face every time the refrigerator door is opened. If you have guilt pangs about wasting food, and using the ham bone to make pea soup isn't your favorite thing, Patti Knowles has dreamed up this recipe that has limitless possibilities for your own original touches.

Patti confesses she is "trying to stay out of the kitchen, but not having much luck" trying to lose a few pounds. Here is her way with a nourishing soup she calls

LENTIL SOUP

3/4 c. lentils
2 large carrots, diced
2 cubed medium potatoes
1 c. ea. celery and onions, chopped
1 can ea. mushrooms and liquid, tomatoes and liquid
Italian seasoning
Ham bone, together with one quart liquid in which it has been cooked
Optional: turnip, noodles, Italian sausage

Some of our little Easter customs date way back in history. Easter eggs, for instance, are a symbol of young life about to be born. Purple ones signify royalty and are appropriate to honor Christ, the King. Red is often used as the color of the blood of the Redemption.

It's not too difficult to understand why the prolific Easter Bunny is symbolic of abundant life. Early Christians rejoiced in seeing eggs on their table after the long weeks of denial during Lent. Wonder how they would have liked this recipe at either brunch or Sunday night supper.

MUFFIN TIN SUPPER

Grease two muffin tins that have good-sized cups. Fill one with corn muffin mix, prepared according to directions on the package. Fill the second tin with canned corned beef hash, indenting each mound, so you can drop an egg into it. Bake in oven temperature as indicated on muffin package. Vary amounts according to number of guests.

Here is a molded salad recipe as tasty as it looks — I know, for I even had seconds when Connie Lambert and her committee of Lorrie Platt and Ethel Rich served it at a Community League luncheon. It would make a pretty addition to your Easter table, and Connie calls it

SIMPLE SALAD

1 pkg. 3 oz. orange jello, dry
1-11 oz. can mandarin oranges, drained
1 carton 12 oz. cottage cheese
1-16 oz. can pineapple, drained
1-9 oz. carton Cool Whip

Mix dry jello with cheese, then Cool Whip. Add oranges, pineapple and refrigerate several hours or overnight — best. Serves 8 to 10.

HAPPY EASTER!

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

The complete book of VCR etiquette

"What we need," the Dragon roared, "is for someone like Miss Manners to devise a book on VCR etiquette."

I looked at him. "What's there to write? You put the tape in and you watch it. What could be simpler?"

"Hah!" he explained. "That shows how much you know. If you'd spend less time reading and more time observing what's going on in your own house you'd understand.

"For example, it should be positively de trop for someone to fool with the buttons when someone else is trying to record a piece of history."

"You are referring, I assume, to the Hagler fight?"

He nodded. "One of the best things about watching the fight was knowing I would have a permanent record of Marvelous Marvin basting the Beast. Imagine my chagrin the following day when I found out that only the first two rounds were recorded. What if Marvelous asks for advice about some of his footwork? I'll be very embarassed."

"I can understand that," I admitted. "I felt the same way the time you tried to record the 'State of the State' address. I invited some friends in to see it the next evening, and right in the middle of the most dramatic part a whole lot of trucks and cars started driving across the screen and people started singing 'Taurus for us.' "

"I think I know what happened," Breida offered. "Pat's cat Roxanne likes to sleep on top of the television. Every now and then she reaches down and hits a button."

I sighed. "Everyone's a critic."

"I think Dad has a good idea," Pat said.

"For example, it should be considered socially unacceptable not to replace the film in the proper container."

He shuddered. "Last week I was out with a friend who shall remain nameless. I noticed to VCR films in the back seat of his car. One container said '1776,' which I know is Ma's favorite movie of all time. The other was 'Nine Deaths of the Ninjas,' which I figured Dad would enjoy.

"I borrowed both of them and started planning a family film festival. Imagine my consternation when I discovered that the two movies were actually "Trailer Park Cuties" and "Gidget Goes to Hell."

The Dragon looked startled."I don't remember that festival.

"Fortunately," Pat told him, "I discovered the error in time."

"Yeah," the Dragon mused. "Fortunately."

"Well," Skip contributed, "I agree that there should be some sort of VCR protocol.

"For instance, if people are in the middle of watching a movie and one of them gets a phone call, do you put the machine on 'Pause,' and wait for the absent person to return? Is there a certain length of time you should wait before resuming the movie? Does it matter if the person who's on the phone is the one who rented the film? Or is it all at the option of the host or hostess?"

"Boy," Breida breathed, "those are pretty heavy questions. You could knock aid to the Contras right off the front page."

"Darn right," the Dragon agreed, "and they only scratch the surface. Consider some other questions that spring to mind. Suppose a family has rented a film and right at an exciting part an unexpected guest drops in. Is it correct to invite the newcomer to join the audience, or is the good host required to turn off the set? Suppose other guests have been invited to see the movie? What is the host's responsibility to them, and how does he explain to the drop-in that he wasn't invited?"

"Right," Pat agreed. "And what do you do if a guest who has been invited to watch a show talks during the whole thing? Does the host stop watching the movie and listen courteously to the guest? What if it's disturbing the other guests' ability to enjoy the show?"

Skip nodded. "Maybe we could write the etiquette book," he suggested. "Let's have Pat get that 'Gidget' movie back and we'll work on it."

Commentary

A DISGRACE ODYSSEY: 3001

Kena Solra, UASN

"Today's session is expected to be the last in this series of hearings before the Federation's special investigative commission. Testifying will be the captains of the reconnaissance teams sent to earth by the UFIGA of interstellar spacestations. This special task force was formed to investigate the apparent destruction of communities that flourished during the 20th century. 'Til now scientists have been unable to determine what happened to these early inhabitants and why they never made it here as did our forefathers.

"Communications ceased in 2020. Although scientific data indicated there were no nuclear detonations, investigators were reluctant to rule out their likely occurrence. Two years ago the UFIGA gave the 'all clear' to send down the investigative teams.

"We now join the hearing already in progress. The last group to report is the team that covered the eastern coast of America and whose search terminated in New England. Corporal Ferrante is reporting his team's findings for the cities of Gloucester, Massachusetts."

"We've determined that the trouble started in 1992 in the city of East Gloucester, established when the original city was divided into segregated municipalities. Lethal fumes from the local dehyde plant caused mass hysteria and a human stampede resulted. Most of the deaths occurred at the Rt. 128 and Mass Avenue intersection, impassable by the presence of a fast food restaurant. Thousands more were trapped on the pennisula behind the bottle neck.

"Concerned citizens in the nearby city of West Gloucester formed a rescue party. The best approach would have been from 128 had it not been closed off at Concord Street because of congestion resulting from a shopping mall built on an abandoned drive-in theater site. Instead they launched a fleet from Little River and sailed around Rockport and East-of-Thach. Because the harbor was hard-topped, they secured their vessels at the breakwater and proceeded on foot, hoping to reach the victims via Niles Beach. After two days, they withdrew, deterred by the impenetrable security systems within the condo complexes surrounding the water's edge.

"Undaunted, they marched northwest around Ten Pound Island into the inner harbor; first the north channel, then the south channel and finally, Smith Cove. Again, they were unsuccessful. They didn't have the equipment needed to scale the ring of high-rise, harbor front resorts. It was here the first group of men were lost. In making their nocturnal retreat, many plunged through mammoth potholes and vanished into the polluted waters below.

"Persevering, the survivors regrouped and headed their vessels toward the city of Magnolia, even though it meant bypassing the formidable rats associated with an earlier dump site. Despite their successful diversionary strategies, they perished crossing the canal. Attempts to scale the uprighted bridge were in vain. The last of these brave men succumbed to fumes originating from a nearby filtration plant."

Corporal Ferrante continued. "Nearly as we can figure, the people in West Gloucester reorganized and sent out another rescue team. Their intent this time was to approach East Gloucester via the back shore. No sooner had they turned Thacher's and headed inland, when they bottomed out one of the uncharted plateaus of the great gurrier reef, formed by drifting debris from early offshore disposings. Dispair must have swept over the hopefuls in East Gloucester as they listened to the live transmissions, knowing their own fates were sealed along with those of their would-be rescuers.

"Soon one disaster followed another as the devastation spread throughout and people were unsuccessful in escaping from their inevitable plights. Those left in West Gloucester banded together and set sail from the Hole-in-the-Wall, crossed Ipswich Bay and headed Downeast, hoping to find a surviving populus."

After a recess, the hearing resumed with a question and answer period. Again, it was Corporal Ferrante reporting.

Q: "Did you find out if any survived? Is so, why did communications cease?"

CF: "Yes, some made it to a Maine coastal town. Over the centuries the townfolk took strict measures to ensure their isolation; hence the discontinuance of all communications. Similar scenes repeated themselves up and down the eastern coastline as well as inland over mountains and valleys. Without these precautions we believe that, with diminished food stocks from the fishermen and farmers, they would have undoubtedly perished. However, they are beautiful townships; quaint, charming and original Old Yankee."

"Yes," interjected Captain Tenney, the team leader responsible for evaluating the hinterlands, "your findings are similar to ours in Vermont. We are recommending the Federation declare these towns reservations."

Q: From the Grand Marshall, "Gentlemen, do you have a preliminary opinion as to the cause of the devastation.?"

CF: "We met on this subject last week. Like most citizens of the world at that time, people were never sufficiently concerned about the affairs of their community. Firstly, owning a home or business lost its primitive meaning of shelter or income and became an investment incentive instead. Secondly, municipal officials rarely offered a viable development plan nor did they receive much support when they did. With no plans and adequate zoning for growth and preservation, property owners and city officials alike fell prey to outside developers.

"They ignored early signs. In our search area, for example, it took only a few short years for industrial encroachment to creep from the towns of Burlington and Woburn to Danvers and Peabody, past Beverly and finally, to Wenham and the Gloucester cities.

CT: "The same holds true to towns and villages along Rt. 91, the border between New Hampshire and Vermont, which succumbed to fast-lane rest-stops in a mere 15 years. Virgin mountainsides, raped and pillaged by ski resort developers, soon became ghost towns when out-of-towners, with the natives long gone, could not sustain themselves. They lost their investments when the next generation, bored with the ski scene, chased after the next craze, unchartered South Sea islands.

"With any luck, we will be able to learn valuable lessons from the mistakes of our early ancestors. Believe me, if we should hear the voice of Paula Severe shouting, 'The developers are coming! The developers are coming!' I suggest we take heed. Take heed!"

"This is the end of our broadcast Ladies and Gentlemen. Kena Solra, UASN, signing off."

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

What Jesus said about being born again

Recently we have heard very conservative Christians saying everybody must be "born again." But what does the Bible say?

Not much. St. Paul, the great organizer of the church, did not include it among the gifts of the spirit he mentions in his first letter to the Corinthians.

Jesus mentions it only once, in the third chapter of the Gospel of John.

He is speaking at night, with only one person, Nicodemus. Nicodemus was a Pharisee and a member of the Sanhedrin, the council which ruled both temporal and spiritual affairs for the Jewish community.

He observed Jesus performing miracles and was curious.

The first words Jesus spoke to him was, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

That's it for "born again" in the Bible. All the shouting and evangelistic finger-pointing relates to this, one sentence said in private to a member of the Jewish aristocracy.

Notice what this sentence doesn't say. It doesn't say that you'll go to Hell unless you're born again. It doesn't say it's the only way to be "saved." It doesn't say a word about accepting Christ as your personal savior.

It says one cannot see the Kingdom of God. What Jesus meant by "Kingdom of God" has been argued for thousands of years. He speaks of it often in his parables, but never gives a concrete, once-and-for all definition. To do so would undermine the whole thrust of his spiritual teaching.

If Jesus himself had thought the specific term "born again" central to His teaching, why did He use it only once, and then to but a single person? Why isn't it in the Sermon on the Mount, or other occasions when he addressed the multitudes?

If, however, one continues to read what Jesus says to Nicodemus, a meaning does emerge. Jesus talks about being born again to an awareness of the spiritual aspects of life. This is a common theme of His, especially when addressing Pharisees, whom he felt had lost the spirit of their religion to a narrow and mediocre legalism.

Jesus might find the legalism of today's new religious right every bit as narrow as that of the Pharisees.

Nicodemus left his audience with Jesus apparently moved. Later, when the Sanhedrin acted to condemn Jesus, Nicodemus spoke out, "Doth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he doth?"

Nicodemus protested, but did not rebel. He sat by as the evil was done.

The real point of Nicodemus' story is not the "born again" business, but rather that of a man halting at the edge of his convictions.

He was touched by the moral and spiritual authority of Jesus. He recognized that the community, of which he was a leader, was doing wrong against Jesus. He spoke out but failed to act.

Was Nicodemus impressed by Jesus, but less than completely convinced? Even so, how could he stand aside and let the Sanhedrin commit this blatant injustice?

Perhaps he feared for his own position, his wealth or the approbation of his influential peers. After all, how comfortable could he be with Jesus' followers, those uneducated peasants from Galilee?

In fact, when Nicodemus protested to the Sanhedrin, they said, "Art thou also of Galilee?"

They accused him of being part of the rebellion. The forces that wanted Jesus dead accused even his mild defenders of disloyalty. It is a tactic as old as politics and, unfortunately, still useful for quieting dissent and suppressing reason in an atmosphere of hysteria.

Nicodemus' remorse is shown in the nineteenth chapter of John, as he takes part in preparing Jesus' body for burial. Suppose he had acted more boldly? Would anything have changed? Will he learn from the experience, or return to complacency, concerned but uncommitted?

For a man like Nicodemus, seeing the Kingdom of God meant overturning the values he had spent a lifetime serving. He failed, but discovered there is more to life than the power struggles of men and the acquiring of material advantage.

We know this is our depths. Seizing the knowledge, and making it a working part of life, that is the rebirth of the spirit.

It has nothing to do with membership in any group.

When the political system one participates in conspires to murder, it is inadequate merely to raise a point of order.

To be born again is to lend ourselves to actions more courageous than the burial of prophets.

Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate.)

Transit council formed

A Plymouth County Transportation Council will be formed to address regional transportation concerns.

The concept was proposed at a recent Transportation Workshop co-sponsored by Plymouth County Development Council (PCDC) and Massasoit Community College.

According to PCDC executive director Brooks Kelly, the new advisory group will "Monitor current transportation projects and work to establish regional transportation priorities."

Membership in the Plymouth County Transportation Council is expected to include area legislators, the Plymouth County Commissioners and the chief elected official of each Plymouth County community.

Regional development and planning agencies, and local chambers of commerce will so be represented on the new Transportation Council.

The new group will hold its first meeting Tuesday, April 15, at the Riverside Restaurant in Middleboro. The breakfast meeting, hosted by the Middleboro Area Chamber of Commerce, will feature an update on current studies regarding the restoration of commuter rail service.

The public is invited. For reservations, call the Middleboro Area Chamber of Commerce at 947-1499.

The Greenpeace whale watch: Thar she blows

By Dorothy Squier
Special to the Mariner

The Captain's voice boomed over the loud speaker. "There's a blow at four o'clock!"

On the way out of Plymouth Harbor he had explained to his boatload of passengers. "I'm at the wheel facing an imaginary clock. Twelve o'clock is dead ahead. Six o'clock is aft. So when I spot a whale I'll tell you where to look."

Most of us sensibly and warmly dressed this late October afternoon, we left the dock at 1:30 and moved smoothly out of the calm protection of the Harbor.

The voice this time was commanding. "All passengers! Be sure to have a firm hold on a rail when moving about. It's getting a bit rough outside. Please be careful."

The warning tone made me wonder what we were getting into. Not that I was scared. My grandfather had been a captain of the Nova Scotia Boston run and I loved the sea and boats. Yet I had never seen a real live whale.

While watching the PBS Channel 2 auction, my friends Ken and Pat had been moved by the Greenpeace Save-the-Whale plea to order six tickets. They invited me to join their party and we boarded the Captain John and Son. We took up a row of seats on the upper deck and I remarked that several groups had opened their lunch boxes before the power engines started. However, Pat thought it was too soon, never dreaming that her basket wouldn't be opened until nearly seven o'clock that night!

Outside the Harbor we headed for Stellwagen Bank off the tip of Cape Cod, plowing through increasingly high and heavy seas. Hanging on for dear life, I stood behind a heavy metal triangle next to the gent's Head, my body protected from the wind, my beret and woolen gloves soon beaded with salt spray. A little rough? Wow!

Bending my knees with the motion of the boat as we rode down a wave, then straightening up as we rode the crest, I was reminded of memorable birthday rides on the Merry-Go-Round at Revere Beach when I was ten. Keeping this picture in mind of riding a handsome steed and grasping a bright brass pole, I blissfully rode the waves, waiting eagerly for the Captain's call for a sighting.

The afternoon sun warmed the backs of the passengers seated on small metal standards along the rail. Yet the wind we drove into grew colder and more forceful. My down quilted coat felt snug and I was comfortble but where were the whales? The noisy chatter of the passengers had become a soft moan and I realized that those I could see nearby were looking green around the gills, while several children were leaning out over the rail, their bodies firmly held by parents. I looked over to port and saw Ken, his face as white as the handkerchief he held to his mouth. Oh, dear! Pat came below at this moment and joined me, her hands tucked under her armpits to warm them.

"Want to try the galley snack bar? We can get some coffee!"

We pulled our way along the rail to midship only to find the Galley bursting at the seams with half frozen tourists. We returned disconsolate to our stations.

By now it was 4 p.m. and the Captain brought the boat about and started back. Finally the call came.

"There's a blow at four!"

Good! That was my side. I didn't dare let go of my stanchion and when my fellow passengers rushed over and stood in front of me at the rail I couldn't see 4 p.m. at all. However, as we came by I caught a glimpse of a brown bulk submerging. That's it folks! One measly whale!

As we sighted land, the setting sun put on a glorious show behind the black outlines of the harbor buildings, their lights beginning to twinkle in the distance.

I was still standing aft, not having found an empty seat, when I became aware of fluttering wings of green and gold . . . migrating warblers not much larger than ping-pong balls. They lighted wearily on tops of heads or shoulders, snuggling into necks for warmth against the bitter wind. Cameras came out of cases and flashed as these tiny travelers took our minds off our discomfort when we posed with them.

The Captain John and Son had slowed and nudged its way dockside. We disembarked. Sitting in the comparatively warm comfort of the car we tore open the picnic basket. After seven hours without food, the hot, hot coffee was nectar and the hearty meatloaf sandwiches might have been smoked pheasant for all we knew.

Warning. Read the literature before you take a trip. You'd know what to expect. And while I strongly support the Greenpeace world wide fight for whale survival, I do think it was kind of mean of the whales to stay submerged and not come up for air as I rode by.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. VIII, no. 27 | 383-6731/545-7060 | thursday, april 3, 1986 | 35 cents

Full field of candidates fills town auditorium

An overflow crowd jammed the town hall auditorium Tuesday night to listen to 25 candidates who are participating in one of the more interesting elections in recent memory.

Most offices are contested, with only a five-year recreation commission seat, a five and a four-year housing authority term, a three-year position on the water commission, and a three-year assessor's position drawing a single candidate.

As one person remarked as he searched the auditorium for a seat, "half the people in this room are candidates."

The candidates forum was sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters. Each candidate was given three minutes to speak, with a short time allotted for questions and answers at the conclusion of the speeches.

There were not many surprises Tuesday night. As always, the candidates were well-behaved with no verbal or physical punches executed.

Assessor

There is a single, three-year term available on this board.

Although unopposed, Thomas Duggan talked to the audience about his hectic first year on the board. He was appointed by selectmen to fill an unexpired term and is now running for re-election.

The principal job of the assessor is to appraise all real estate in town, he said. In FY 1986, the valuation of real property earned more than $6 million in revenue to the town. The board is currently proceeding with a state-mandated property update.Figures should be prepared within four months, he added. The assessors also handle more than 7,000 motor vehicle excise taxes and is responsible for hearing all tax appeal cases and appellate tax court hearings.

Trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library

There are three, three-year terms available on the board of trustees. Candidates include Barbara Power, Michele Buckley, Cynthia Johnson Whealler and Lucia Woods.

Power noted she was campaigning for her sixth term on the board of trustees. Looking back, she recalled in the 1970's the retirement of the library's longtime librarian and the formation of the volunteer organization known as the Friends of the Library. This group, she said, has saved the town

Curfew supporters to renew fight

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

After learning of the defeat of a proposal limiting the hours of commercial business operations, proponents have vowed to renew their fight for the bylaw amendment.

The state attorney general's office last week rejected an amendment to the town's zoning bylaws which would restrict the hours of operation for all commercial businesses in town. The state argued the amendment, approved by a majority vote at the December special town meeting, was too broad and contained no guidelines for selectmen to follow when presiding over the enactment of the bylaw.

Daniel Leahy, a leading opponent of the measure, said he was delighted at the state's decision which he said reaffirmed the businessmens' opposition to the proposal.

"The bylaw did not address the concerns of the people who initiated it," he said this week. "They were concerned with one business in one area, but this amendment would have affected everyone from the West Corner to the far extremes of the town."

The attorney general's conclusion, he noted, "almost to a tee supported our arguments against the proposal. We said then, 'don't come down on the entire commercial community with this machete-type law."

Article 24 of the December special town meeting proposed the regulation of "reasonable operating hours and hours of delivery for retail establishments."

Leahy added, "I am delighted, but not in a vengeful way. I saw this proposal coming out from a blind side. Everybody would be affected without realizing its impact on everybody. The state simply supported what we were trying to express at town meeting."

'A machete-type law'

At that time, Leahy coined the term 'curfew', predicting that would be the outcome of the proposal's enforcement. Although the proponents were specifically concerned with the establishment of a super Stop and Shop along Rte. 3A, Leahy warned voters that such a broad piece of legislation would negatively affect all commercial businesses in Cohasset.

In the decision rendered last week, the attorney general stated the proposed bylaw "is essentially a complete delegation of the legislative authority of the town to the executive branch of the town government (i.e. the Board of Selectmen). It goes beyond the delegation of rule making power that has been properly authorized.

"The language of the proposed bylaw would authorize executive action that could impinge upon retail sales that might constitute the exercise of protected speech," Assistant Attorney General Henry O'Connell stated in his decision.

John Bishop of Fair Oaks Lane, a proponent of the bylaw amendment, said he was "naturally disappointed" by the state's decision. Noting he had yet to read the decision, Bishop said, "there is a strong feeling in this town to control some of the environment around us. We've seen how the super Stop and Shops have affected Quincy and Pembroke."

Bishop said, "I expect we will try again. There is sufficient evidence that people want this bylaw and they want this to remain a residential neighborhood."

Opinions sour on housing project

Members of the Cohasset Housing Authority are now expressing concern over a proposed North Main Street development they initially favored.

After meeting with abutters last week, authority members are no longer supportive of plans by local developer Wayne Sawchuk to construct 36 units of elderly housing along North Main Street. Opinions of the three members in attendance were reversed when abutters argued the development will cause increased drainage problems in the North Main Street - Cedar Acres Lane neighborhood.

Sawchuk originally presented plans for the development to the housing authority several months ago. Since that time, the authority twice issued an unofficial 'vote of confidence' for the project.

But this week, Authority Chairman John Muncey countered, "they (the abutters) had a lot of information at the meeting.They made us look long and hard at the issue. We don't want to create problems for the existing homes in the area.

"We don't want people to crucify us if we create another problem. We all live in this town. And I want to stay," Muncey added.

There were no votes taken at last week's meeting. Muncey said no vote was allowed since only three of the five-member board were present. One member recently resigned leaving a vacancy on the authority.

The abutters were not listed on the committee's agenda last week. They contacted the housing director the afternoon of the meeting and asked permission to attend. Developer Sawchuk was not contacted and did not know the subject was being discussed at the meeting.

"I would have been delighted to discuss with the

Cohasset's week . . .

Mailman employed

Roger Leonard, the mailman whose position in the Cohasset Post Office was threatened with termination, will remain in the employment of the U.S. Postal Service.

In a letter to selectmen, the Boston Postmaster informed the board that Leonard, a 14-year veteran of the Cohasset office, would remain in the continued employment of the Postal Service. It did not indicate where or in what capacity Leonard would be retained.

In January, there was an accident involving the postal vehicle Leonard was driving. As a result of a new Postal Service regulation, the employee's job must be terminated.

Selectmen wrote a letter to the regional postmaster in support of Leonard's longtime service to the community.

In his reply to selectmen, Postmaster Philip Sullivan said that Leonard's work history and contribution of service to the community were taken into consideration. "A settlement agreement has been entered into which provides for the continued employment of Mr. Leonard in the United States Postal Service," he wrote.

Water runoff on Black Rock

The Health Agent informed Judge Joseph Ford, trustee of the property at 15 Black Rock Road, to have an interceptor drain installed on the property to prevent sewage runoff onto Jerusalem Road.

There is also a problem with water runoff from the ledge on that street onto Jerusalem Road. Both situations, Agent Joseph Godzik stated, have developed hazardous road conditions on Jerusalem Road.

While the town is working on a solution to prevent water runoff from the ledge of 15 Black Rock Road onto the street, the health agent requested that an engineer provide an interceptor drain and catch basins to divert the sewage effluent from running onto the road.

"The interceptor drain must be installed as soon as possible to see if this will correct the septic system problem," he wrote in a letter to Judge Ford.

License hearing postponed

Because of an asbestos problem in the offices of the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC), the hearing requested by J. Bildner and Sons has been postponed.

According to a commission assistant, it will take three months for the asbestos to be removed from the office building in Boston. That was to be the location of the appeals hearing. The hearing was rescheduled to a later, unspecified date.

J. Bildner's is appealing a decision by selectmen not to allow the sale of beer and wine in their Cushing Plaza store.

Who are these people? Where are they? Send your Peek at the Past answer to the Mariner news box at the Colonial Pharmacy or the Cohasset News Store. For the answer to last week's photo, see page 5.

Sprinkler system cable show

The Cohasset Fire Department produced an informational show on residential fire sprinkler systems which will be shown on cable channel 3 the evenings of April 2, 3 and 4.

Fire Safety Officer Mark Trask and American Cablesystems Community Director Jeffrey Rhind produced and edited the show, "Residential Sprinklers: Your Choice." Trask described it as a 30-minute dramatic presentation of how residential sprinkler systems save homes and lives.

The first portion of the show will depict how the local department responds to a typical call for assistance. The second portion demonstrates through animation how smoke moves through a home during a fire. The final segment depicts a residential sprinkler system in operation.

The show will be televised on the local cable channel following the conclusion of the April 2 selectmen's meeting, and again on April 3 at 6:30 and 8 p.m. and April 4 at 8 p.m.

In conjunction with the fire department-sponsored warrant article regarding the installation of residential sprinklers in all new homes, there will be live demonstrations of the system prior to the start of the April 5 town meeting.

At noon at the high school parking lot, the department will have a van set up where people can view an actual system in operation.

Roadrace set for Sunday

The Tenth Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea is set to begin Sunday at 1 p.m.

The greatest number of runners ever are registered for the event. Local competition will continue with return of nine-time women's winner Sara Linsey and a number of world class runners expected for the gun.

Will Cloney, former director of the Boston Marathon, will signal the start with runners from six to 74 in age ready for this spring tradition.

Residents are urged to restrain all dogs on the day of the race and to avoid traveling the race route between 1 and 2 p.m. for safety reasons.

A walk for fitness is scheduled for 9 a.m. and is attracting many local figures from Cohasset and surrounding towns. The event is sponsored by the Rotary Club under the direction of Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons.

Selectmen delay fire hydrant article; review warrant

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

Selectmen will wait until Saturday to make a decision on a warrant article requesting a fire hydrant for Newtonville Lane.

Newtonville Lane resident William Kleinz appeared before Selectmen Monday night to request support for Article 15 in the annual town meeting. They have proposed $53,000 to connect the water line from Elm Court to Atlantic Avenue, and to install a hydrant on Newtonville Lane.

According to Selectman Diane Sullivan, a more accurate figure would be closer to $75,000.

"I am prejudiced," Kleinz told the board. "I have a wife in a wheelchair. The young people have young children. For two years they have been trying to bring this to your attention."

Chairman Frank England opposed the article saying they would have to improve all the private ways in town. To remedy the problem, England supported replacing three-inch hoses on the fire trucks with five-inch hoses.

"They carry twice as much water," he explained.

Another option under investigation is driving a truck through a right of way on Elm Street to get closer coverage.

An article similar to this one was passed last year but was declared illegal by the attorney general's office.

"I think the only reason it was recommended was because your people said they would pay for it," England charged.

Misunderstanding about the financing of last year's article arose after residents revealed they expected to receive tax abatements as reimbursement for the project.

Diane Sullivan explained the town cannot assess a betterment tax to cover the cost of the hydrant.

Rocco Laugelle suggested that Kleinz return to the neighbors and find out if they are willing to make payments towards the project.

Selectmen decided to defer their decision until they found what could be done on Elm Street.

In other business, Selectmen voted to recommend Article 18, which requests $9,800 for a senior shuttle bus for the Council on Aging, adjusted from $11,500. Almost $2,000 has been raised towards the project.

A representative from the council explained that $1,800 from the Rotary Club and another $1,800 earmarked by the Council were the same $1,800. The money had incorrectly been considered twice at an Advisory Board meeting.

Selectmen postponed a decision on Article 36 which requested $20,000 for plans to repair the wastewater treatment plant to meet the standards of its permit.

After a 2-2 vote, Mary Jane McArthur asked executive secretary Donald Andrew to find out if "anyone currently on the sewer system who wishes to add to their home will be able to do so."

The board also withheld their decision on Article 47 for $16,000 for additional terminals and memory capacity for the town computer system.

Chairman England said, "what we'll try to do is to see if the water department (computer) study will have any effect on the town."

Selectmen recommended Article 13 to appropriate $15,000 to the sewer commission for the purchase of a portable emergency generator to serve the Pond Street wastewater pumping station.

The board recommended Article 14 for $32,624 for capping and seeding two acres of the Cedar Street landfill.

Selectmen also recommended Article 15 for $4,500 to construct a 600-foot fence at the Cedar Street landfill. This was not recommended by the advisory board.

"It is a disgrace to think that the Town of Cohasset will allow what is blowing over their property," Mary Jane McArthur commented.

The Board approved Article 37 for $26,000 for the Library's cost of participation in the Old Colony Network, which will computerize and centralize library records.

Five hundred dollars was recommended in Article 35 to erect a marker on Government Island identifying the "Edwin A. Young Memorial Parking Lot."

In Article 43, selectmen recommended raising money to procure and hang photographs of World War II, Korean, and Viet Nam war veterans in Town Hall.

In other business—

- selectmen signed the lease for the American Legion to occupy its building for another 10 years. The selectmen asked for clarification on a similar lease for the Rotary Club which occupies a room in the Bates Building.

Under the new lease the club will be able to rent space on nights not prescheduled by the town. The selectmen want to reserve the right to reopen the contract if the arrangement doesn't work out.

- the board raised the rent of two Government Island apartments from $250 a month to $450 effective June 7.
- a request was granted for No Parking signs by Daley Park at North Main Street and Jerusalem Road.
- a building permit fee was waived for the construction of a storage shed by Andy Dickinson as part of his Eagle Scout project.
- permission was granted to the South Shore Arts Center to use the Common from June 24 to 29, for its annual Art Festival.

Spring art classes

The South Shore Art Center is delaying the start of three classes on its spring schedule. David Tandy's Introductory Drawing and his Introductory Painting which meet Thursday nights from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. will now begin on April 10. John Droege's inspired Photo Critique which meets Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. will now begin April 8.

Students may register for these courses at the center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Advanced registration is required.

Droege's photography course is good for all levels of photographers. The first hour of each session will concentrate on the aesthetics used by master photographers and a discussion of their design elements. The second hour is an evaluation of the student's own work using slides or prints.

Tandy's drawing course is for the absolute beginner and anyone wishing a fundamental grounding in drawing skills and progresses to relationships of space, line and depth. His introductory painting works with oils and acrylics with a heavy emphasis on drawing, composing and image-making, working directly from still-life or model.

For complete information on these courses, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Baptist Church to hold evangelic services

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

"In this country there is a great need for missionary work," said the Rev. Daniel Brodeur. "There are many people who have not heard the good news of the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

Rev. Brodeur founded Cohasset Baptist Church six months ago to fill a void he saw in the community.

"We looked at Cohasset and discovered that not only was there no Baptist church in town," said Rev. Brodeur, "but neither was there an evangelical church." Rev. Brodeur's denomination, the Southern Baptists, is making an effort to form new churches in New England. "It has been said of New England that there is a great need for spiritual awakening," he said.

"One of the ideals of our denomination is to divide and multiply through establishing new churches," said Rev. Brodeur. "We wanted to establish a church on the South Shore."

Brodeur first looked at Hull, but found that town already had a few evangelical churches, including a Baptist church of a different denomination. "We then looked at the next town over, which was Cohasset," said Rev. Brodeur.

"We did a demographic study of Hull, Cohasset, Hingham, Weymouth and Marshfield," he said, "studying the people of the area and the churches ministering to them. With our findings we concluded there was a need for us in this community."

Rev. Brodeur said he found some enthusiasm for a new church in Cohasset.

"As we began to meet the stronger and more active Christians in the community," said Rev. Brodeur, "we found out that there had been a prayer group that was meeting regularly.

"They had been praying for 10 years for a church that would teach the Bible and lead people to a personal relationship with Jesus Christ," he said. "They encouraged us to come here."

Rev. Brodeur and his wife Laurie held the first services in their Scituate home last September. After receiving permission from the selectmen, they moved services to Cohasset's town hall.

"We've grown to where we now have about 30 people and their children attending services regularly," said Rev. Brodeur. "We hope to grow more and more with time."

A major problem in starting the church has been overcoming denominational labels and stereotypes, according to Rev. Brodeur.

"There is a hesitancy for some people to come to our church because they do not want to be a Baptist," said Rev. Brodeur.

"I sometimes surprise people when I tell them I am not a Baptist," said Rev. Brodeur. "I tell them that I am a Christian, one who believes in and follows Jesus Christ as savior and lord of my life.

"My intention is not to make people Baptists, but to make them Christians and assist them in understanding what God is saying to the world through His Son Jesus Christ," he said.

Rev. Brodeur said New Englanders do not know much about the Southern Baptists. "We haven't been a strong predominant denomination in the north, and especially in New England," he said.

"We called ourselves Cohasset Baptist Church to avoid being thought of as some kind of cult," he said.

Rev. Brodeur, 34, came to the South Shore from the Baptist Church in Dedham. "The Dedham church has been very supportive of our efforts," he said.

A native of Nashua, NH, Rev. Brodeur served four years in the Air Force. He studied at Gordon College in Wenham before attending Andover Newton Theological School in Newton.

"The Dedham church sent me out to start the church," he said. "I want to bring the Gospel to people."

The church is planning a major outreach program in April called "Good News, America. God Loves You."

The series of evangelistic services, April 20-24, will feature Tracy Bledsoe, a Baptist minister from Texas who will gear his message each night for different groups in the community.

"We're seeking to minister to families, single people, youth, senior citizens and public servants like teachers, policemen and government officials," said Brodeur.

"Public servants, the backbone of the community, are a neglected people," said Rev. Brodeur. "They need encouragement and inspiration."

Rev. Brodeur sees a bright future for Cohasset Baptist Church. "I've had a lot of good contact with people here," he said. "More and more people are getting involved. Cohasset is a good town, and I'm happy to be a part of it."

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

Home Center Realty

HELP YOUR BATHROOM SELL YOUR HOME

Very few people will buy a house because they're blown away by fantastic bathrooms. Baths are amont the features that sellers tend to neglect when they're preparing their homes for prospective buyers. Buyers do, however, react to baths that are not well cared for, because these rooms are a reflection of the overall condition of the property.

While your home is on the market, keep each bathroom spotless. Get out the scouring powder, mildew remover, glass and tile cleaner and your scrub brush. If necessary, recaulk. A new shower curtain, bath mat and nice smelling soap can help give the buyer one more small positive reason for liking your home and perhaps deciding to buy it!

Many purchasers see plumbing as a potential major expense, and they get nervous about dripping faucets, loose tiles, running toilets and peeling paint on the ceilings of the baths themselves or the rooms under them. As part of your premarketing preparations, make sure your plumbing is working properly and that any cosmetic damage caused by former leaks has been repaired.

Employment office to relocate

By Mark Hemmert
Mariner Correspondent

Toting the lowest unemployment rate in the country the Mass. Division of Employment Security will relocate its downtown Plymouth office to more spacious quarters in the new North Plymouth Industrial Park on April 28.

The DES will join the Registry of Motor Vehicles and the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission in the Consolidated Dutchwest Building, bringing a long-awaited relief from the parking dilemmas and overcrowding of its current Court Street location.

"Economically, this may be the fastest growing area in the state," says office manager Ken Vining, "and we simply need more room to accommodate the public we serve."

A January unemployment rate of three percent is the state's lowest in 16 years, Vining notes. But rapid local development has sustained a demand for employment counseling and placement services at the agency.

Special DES programs such as Centers of Excellence, and CHOICES have brought many welfare recipients and disadvantaged back into the work force. Their success is fueled by an economy strong enough to create more than 14,000 jobs in the county in the past five years.

Commercial investment and soaring real estate values have recently reduced South Shore unemployment to 3.2 percent, indicating virtual full employment.

A diversity of area industries including construction, services and finance allows it to adapt to changing economic conditions and minimize the effect of a declining manufacturing sector which actually lost jobs last year.

Meanwhile, restaurants and retail stores are having trouble finding workers to fill their needs. Many local fast food shops have begun offering reward money to employees who bring in job seekers.

The concern of local companies and potential investors above full employment also means a continued increase in wages and salaries, and perhaps more job security for residents. The DES has found that one-fourth of unemployed persons in January had left their jobs voluntarily, a sign that they were confident they could comfortably re-enter the labor force at will.

The DES and other state and local agencies again will sponsor the Plymouth area job marketplace this year at Cordage Park Marketplace from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, April 5.

The job fair will feature more than 50 employers in response to last year's popular success.

The following is a breakdown by Mariner towns of the labor force and the unemployment rate for the month of January.

Housing authority sours on N. Main St. project neighbors and the housing authority my plans for North Main Street. Unfortunately, I have never been asked to sit with the abutters to answer their concerns. If they ask me, I will be delighted to go over their concerns with them," Sawchuk stated.

"If people came to me and said they don't want this type of housing on that site, I'd turn around and sell the land," he continued.

"I hope the housing authority keeps an open mind. At this point, I'm not sure I'll file an application with them or the state housing authority. I had planned to go through the local housing authority, and I thought the town wanted to work closely with this development to come up with a plan that is compatible to the neighborhood.There's still hope," he continued.

Under the state TELLER grant program, a developer does not have to seek the local housing authority's approval, according to Sawchuk. The Cohasset developer is preceding under that program. Although denied a variance two weeks ago by the zoning board of appeals to construct the 36-unit elderly housing project, Sawchuk will now proceed to file a comprehensive application permit with the housing authority. The application will also go before the appeals board for final review.

At least 20 percent of the proposed development, located a quarter mile from Forest Avenue on North Main Street, will be set aside for low and moderate income families.

"I thought the town boards would work in a cooperative effort to come up with a nice plan for the town," he added.

"If the majority of the boards are against this, I am not in a position to proceed with it. I will change the project - make fewer buildings, more open space. I'm not interested in fighting for something the town is not interested in," he continued.

Sawchuk said he will closely observe results of the housing survey the Mariner plans to publish the next two weeks.

Housing Authority member Kay Conte said the three authority members agreed after last week's meeting, the project "is not a very good idea."

She continued, "we can't see endangering what is already there. We saw at last week's meeting exactly what will happen. I knew there were drainage problems there, but for the first time I saw how the drainage would come down from that site. I looked at the maps they had, and you could see where the water would drain right in back of these existing homes. They have problems there and they have a right to be nervous."

Conte said she was optimistic as a result of the meeting that all town boards would work together to develop a housing policy for elderly, low and moderate income needs.

"I am sky high about that," she added. "The conservation commission, planning board, the drainage committee, housing authority and selectmen are going to work together to get a program started somewhere. We will all work together to present it to the board of selectmen."

Conte noted that originally Sawchuk's plans "looked good" to the authority members. "But the neighbors were panicking. And they did their homework. I'm glad it happened so that other things can be worked on and scheduled.

"If he (Sawchuk) came up with something that would satisfy all the people . . . but I don't think that's feasible," she stated.

Planning board member Dan Cotton attended the meeting with member Patrick Plante to discuss the town's need for elderly and special needs housing. "We were just kicking around some ideas and finding what our next move should be," he said. "The state is leaning on us and we feel the responsibility. It was an exploratory meeting - a case of wanting to find out what we should do. There is a need for both types of housing, and it's our concern that it be done in regard to the town's best interests," he added.

Cedar Acres Lane resident Laura Doherty also attended the meeting held by the housing authority last week "to express our concerns" and to submit a petition the abutters circulated against the proposal.

Topographic maps were presented to authority members which depicted drainage contours and how they would affect existing homes in that area. Five or six abutters attended the meeting, she said.

"We left the meeting," Doherty said, "with the feeling that our immediate concerns were answered and that there would not be a project of that magnitude up there. They said they would follow this up by establishing a sort of plan for this type of housing in Cohasset. That's an important step for the town."

Cohasset responded to a call for mutual aid to Scituate during a Rte. 3A woods fire Easter morning. Firefighters are attaching hose to feed lines into the fire.

□ Rev. and Mrs. John M. Benbow were honored two weeks ago by 350 of their South Shore friends for their 13 years of community and church service in Cohasset. A reception and tea was held in their honor on Palm Sunday at the Second Congregational Church. Rev. Benbow preached his last Cohasset sermon Easter Sunday, before moving to the First Congregational Church in Milton.

□Pete Brock, Joan Benoit, Jess Cain, Doug Flutie, Don Hasslebeck, John Kennedy Jr., Ted Kennedy Jr., and Terry O'Reilly are among the more than 30 celebrities who will be attending "An Evening of Stars", a gala fund-raiser planned for the benefit of Notre Dame Academy in Hingham.

The event, which promises to be the largest fund-raiser on the South Shore, will take place Sunday, April 13, from 6-10 p.m. at the Academy, 1073 Main Street. Included in the ticket price of $250 is a continuous buffet of gourmet foods, open bar, casino gambling, entertainment, dancing and the opportunity to win a trip for two to Bermuda, an athletic club family membership, getaway weekends, numerous gift certificates and other special prizes. More than 350 tickets have already been sold for the evening, according to Mrs. Gerald Ridge (Duxbury) who is the chairperson for the Academy's Capital Campaign Committee, a group of past and present parents who have planned the event to raise funds for a new track-soccer-softball athletic facility.

The warm weather attracts many travelers to the streets of Cohasset. Kathy Marks pulls some contented cargo, daughters Lisa and Laura, through the Village.

Mrs. Ridge is pleased with the amount of tickets sold, but has the goal set at 500 sales, which shouldn't be difficult for such a gala evening.

□Tickets are available from the Notre Dame Academy Development Office at 749-5930 or from committee members. The Cohasset representatives on the committee are Fred Dellorfano and Jake Powers. Contact them and guarantee yourself a wonderful evening for a good cause.

□Congratulations to Sargent Kenneth P. Davis, who recently completed an Army primary leadership course in West Germany.

□How about that Carla Lucas! This time she made headlines in the Patriot Ledger Sports page, for her athletic prowess. As was reported earlier, Carla had a super year in basketball, and now is into the softball season with a bang. Her coach says she is the type who can carry a team, because they all know that she will do some great things in right field. Carla had a great opening day for Wheaton, scoring two runs and throwing out a player form her spot in right field. Its for sure that we will hear more about the season as she progresses, continued good luck to you Carla.

Meeting preview

The annual town meeting begins at 1 p.m. at the high school.

Although only 100 voters are required to attend, we urge everyone to express their opinions and vote on the 50 warrant articles which will ultimately affect their lives in many ways.

The school budget this year has climbed 5.7 percent from last year's total. That number, a compromise figure between the school and advisory committee, includes an elementary adjustment counselor and an expanded gifted and talented program. No buildings will be consolidated, and it is difficult to know at this point if any teachers will be eliminated from the system.

The sewer commission will be before town meeting again. Currently, negotiations between the state and the town are proceeding and the commissioners expect a compromise Ward Engineering plan to be prepared for voters by the time a special town meeting is held in June.

In the meantime, the commissioners will request $20,000 to begin plans to rehabilitate the Elm Street wastewater treatment plant. The improvements are necessary to bring the station up to the federal EPA standards.

The fire department is sponsoring several articles, among them a proposal that all new residences be equipped with sprinkler systems. The department is in the forefront of most communities in attempting to implement this requirement.

The regulation would apply to all homes built after the regulation takes effect. Fire Safety Officer Mark Trask and Chief Daniel Brock are strong advocates of this proposal.

The department is also requesting a $138,000 appropriation for a new pumper. The capital outlay committee recommended postponing this article until next year.

The watershed protection committee has been busy the past two years devising a set of zoning changes to protect the town's valuable water supply district. A procedural problem wiped out their efforts of last year, but they quickly rebounded with this effort which is a bit more stringent than its predecessor.

In addition, the committee is proposing a hazardous waste disposal bylaw. The regulation would establish strong restrictions on the use of any pesticides and herbicides in the town, and the installation of underground storage tanks for gas and oil, as well as the dumping of hazardous wastes.

The government structure committee is proposing an assistant assessor for that office. Although the advisory committee has opposed the recommendation along with the assessor's office, the government structure members remain supportive of the proposal. The position would be fulltime and assist the board of assessors in town-wide revaluations.

The water commission is recommending the town begin procedures to take the 36-acre parcel known as Lily Pond Estates by eminent domain. By town meeting time, an estimated purchase price will be calculated by an appraiser. This article will request the town appropriate a sum of money for legal fees and acquisitions costs of the land.

Currently, there is a 15-unit development planned on the property which surrounds the town's water supply at Lily Pond. The commissioners are concerned that development and habitation of the land could result in contamination of the public water supply.

Several residents have proposed that the town procure the photographs of all Cohasset servicemen killed in action. The photographs will be hung on a wall of the town hall auditorium, under the jurisdiction and supervision of the town's veteran's agent.

There are certainly a variation of issues included in this year's warrant. We hope a large turnout will be in the auditorium Saturday and any other subsequent evenings necessary to complete the financial and policy decisions of our town.

Traditions are tested by time

To the Editor:

At one town meeting, an articulate and impassioned semi-yuppy sneered at the "conventional widsom" of central sewage treatment plants. Well, teenagers sneer at conventional wisdom too—but another view for it is "tested by time." The scientific principles of waste water treatment were pretty well understood by the 1920's, and experience had established pretty reliable equations and formulae for sizing and selection of process. Although there are continual developments in materials and equipment detail, there's no reason to expect some dramatic scientific breakthrough, some miraculous new bacteria for example, that makes central plants unnecessary. Gamma irradiation might help with final purification, but that's a detail and certainly would arouse the same storm of ignorant oppostion that does fluoridation of drinking water.

The proponents of limiting growth by avoiding adequate solution to the town's pollution problems are costing the town dearly. The problems have to be faced and solved. The Edsel connection doesn't do it, and soon will have to be supplanted by a central sewage treatment plant. But Cohasset will have wasted its one-time funding on a big pipe to Hull and a share in their used Edsel, and can't expect to get a second change at the funding.

Letters

So we will build our own plant, without funding, but hopefully with low interest loans. The new plant won't be cheaper than the one we could have had, and that would have almost been in operation by now.

Few of those who oppose building our own plant have read the thorough, practical and competent M&E report. They simply recycle the unfounded allegations about cost, connection charges, etc. The cost comparisons in the Ward report, which the Sewer Commission reproduced and distributed at a town meeting, are grossly in error. But as propaganda, to scare the town into inertia, such tactics have worked all too well.

Bankrupt the town? Nonsense. It is the mean spiritedness of those who would do nothing as long as possible that will really cost the town. Of course, it doesn't matter to those who live here briefly, oppose constructive action, and then move on. Or to those whose children have grown, whose septic systems can survive with just two people, until they sell out and move elsewhere.

O'Malley's seminar was open to officials too

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

More than 200 town officials, residents and reporters attended Plymouth County District Attorney William C. O'Malley's seminar on the Open Meeting Law to learn that closing meetings to the public should be the "exception, not the rule" of the state law.

The law is interpreted to mean just what it says —meetings should be open to the public with a few well-defined exceptions.

"In no way should these exceptions be considered loopholes to circumvent the law," said Assistant DA John Corbett, who with Assistant DA Maryellen O'Sullivan investigates complaints of open-meeting law violations.

O'Malley said the 200 who attended form a nucleus for greater understanding of the law. He said information on the seminar, held at Massasoit Junior College in Brockton, was forwarded to the more than 1,500 public officials in 26 Plymouth County towns.

The 200 who did attend — which included members of the South Shore Regional School Committee, Hanover Planning Board and Silver Lake Regional School Committee — are to be commended for seeking the information.

The compelling question that remains concerns the officials who did not choose to spend $5 and three hours listening to lawyers, editors and other concerned officials. If O'Malley's figures are correct, this group constitutes more than 80 percent of the county's local officials.

The Mariner serves six Plymouth County towns, and while one's eyes may not be sharp enough to pick out officials from a crowd, one would have expected to see people from more than just two of the towns and one regional school committee.

Commentary

Not every official has an absolute need to hear the information. One member from each committee — or even just a few people designated to bring information back for the benefit of other officials —would have sufficed.

It's true that most officials serve as volunteers or are paid stipends that amount to little more than $10 a week. Many public posts amount to part-time jobs with full-time responsibilities. Most officials are involved with careers outside their public duties. No reasonable person would deny these dedicated officials time to rest and relax.

The law also affects the various boards and commissions differently. Selectmen may want to know more about it than, say, planning-board members who have fewer reasons to close meetings to the public. Local executives are more likely to discuss lawsuits, labor negotiations with town employees and deployment of police — all completely valid reasons for closing the doors.

Still, one wonders why no one attended from several towns. Not all officials were busy or exhausted last Wednesday night.

Are officials from these towns disinterested in a subject which fundamentally affects the way they conduct public business?

What do you think about N. Main St. housing?

A recent application to the Cohasset Appeals Board for a variance for the construction of 36 units of rental housing for the elderly, with 20 percent of the units subsidized for low and moderate income persons, was denied. The proposal now goes before the Cohasset Housing Authority and back to the Appeals Board for a comprehensive permit.

Let's establish a State Championship Day for the team

To the Editor:

In response to your request for community input for ways of giving recognition to our Cohasset basketball state champions, we members of the Cohasset Boosters suggest a community effort to award each member and coaching staff of this magical team a specially designed state champion gold ring.

We feel a "Cohasset State Champion Day" should be established. This day could include a tickertape parade through town to a specified location (school grounds, common, or perhaps by blocking off S. Main St., between the hardware and the Red Lion Inn, as was done for a townwide celebration a few years ago). There should be music and festivities along with perhaps an old fashioned clam bake. A first class celebration for a first class team.

Our organization works to promote community and school spirit. We feel we cannot let this opportunity to show these fine young men the pride we feel for their accomplishments this year go unnoticed or unappreciated. When we so often hear the bad things some of the youth get involved with we would like to accentuate the positive.

We would be most happy to work with the town fathers and the community to make this "state championship day" a reality. With a school and community effort, it can be done.

Officials commended

To the Editor:

Re: Oil Spill into Bound Brook and Gulf River

On Monday, March 17, at 2 a.m., there was a furnace malfunction and a boiler room fire at the J.J. Henry Company at 430 South Main Street, Cohasset. The end result was an oil spill of #2 heating oil into Bound Brook and the Gulf River.

The Cohasset and Scituate Fire Departments were there immediately, and, by morning, the Coast Guard, the Marine Safety Office, and the Jet Line Company of Stoughton were there installing oil containment booms in the rivers. The D.E.Q.E. was monitoring the situation as well as Dr. Jospeh Godzik, the Cohasset Health Officer, and his Scituate counterpart, Mr. Walter Walsh.

The Briggs Engineering Associates were brought in to pressure test the underground oil tank which proved to be leaking.

We wish to commend Fire Captain Mark Trask, Dr. Godzik, and Mr. Richard Smith, general manager of the J.J. Henry Company, for the intensive efforts being made to minimize the damage to the marsh and river. Our sincere thanks go to everyone involved.

The neighbors of the J.J. Henry Co.

Thanks for the music

To the Editor:

I would like to congratulate and compliment the Music Department of Cohasset High School on its recent Music Open House, held March 18 and 19.

Mr. Bryan Marks and Mr. Steven Shirosky deserve much credit for their wonderful efforts toward celebrating March as "Music in Our Schools Month."

I know from personal experience the tremendous effort and resulting exhaustion that comes from putting together a program on such a "grand scale."

The students of Cohasset High School are indeed fortunate to have two dedicated professionals such as Mr. Marks and Mr. Shirosky who give so much of their own personal time and energy to provide hundreds of creative and interesting musical offerings. Given the size of Cohasset High School and available resources, it is amazing there is so much variety that each and every student can find some sort of "Music" study that he or she will enjoy.

Congratulations and appreciation to the Music Department for the interesting and enlightening two days into the wonderful world of Music.

Whatever happened to?

Ainslie doesn't miss the limelight

Three years ago, Henry Ainslie packed away 12 years as a Cohasset selectman and left Town Hall. He has returned twice since he decided not to seek re-election.

"I spent quite a few years in public office," he said this week. "I thought it was time to have someone else take over."

Ainslie is still employed as director of operations for Norfolk County. When asked if he missed the bustle of local political life, he replied, "Not really. I'm in a similar activity with the county, at a different level. It's pretty much the same activity.'

When Ainslie left as chairman of the three-man board of selectmen, he vowed never to sit on a five-member board. "I wasn't interested in serving on a five-member board," he noted. "I haven't really followed it, but I can't see that things have changed that much with the larger board - for better or worse."

The 67 year-old Cohasset native said he does not continually follow the course of issues affecting the town.

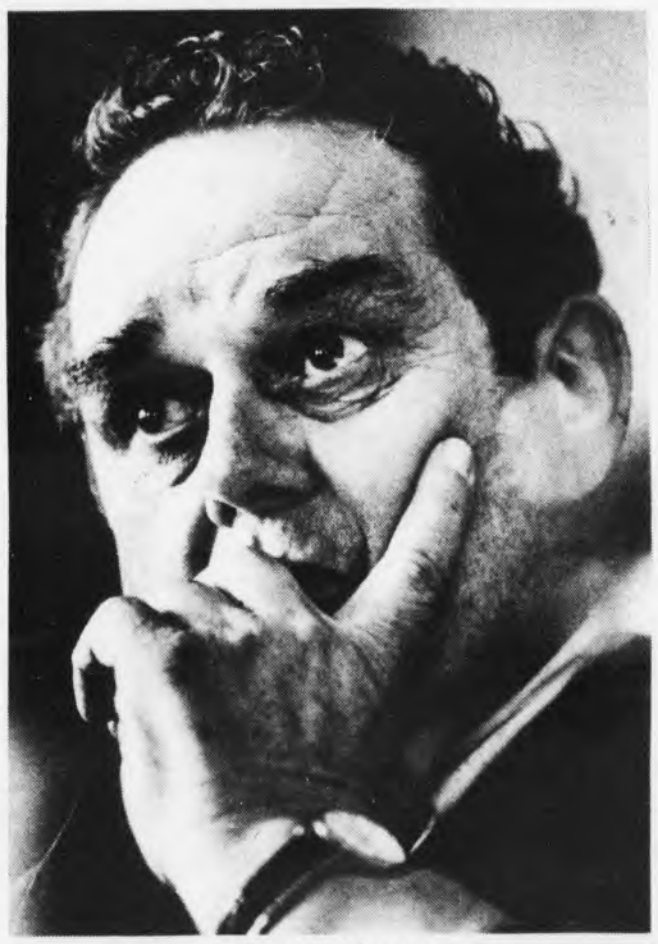
"There is a tendency, once you're in public office, to get out completely," he explained. "It's like giving up smoking. You have to make a clean break rather than tapering off."

While a selectman, Ainslie was part of the board which selected the present police chief and former Fire Chief Martin Dooley. "But there was a selection committee first who gave us the name of the final candidates to choose from," he added. His board also employed the first fulltime executive secretary -first Arthur Clark and later Mark Lanza.

"Apparently the concept of an executive secretary has worked out," he noted, "except there seems to be no continuity in the position."

Since his retirement from public office, Ainslie has walked into Town Hall twice. "One time, a couple of years ago, I walked into the selectmen's office and no one recognized me," he said, laughing. "There's been considerable change in many of the town hall offices since I left. Some people have changed since I was there. Maybe that's an improvement."

Ainslie said he does not miss the limelight of local political office. "I try to look at it from a distance now. I don't make any attempt to become involved," he said.



Henry Ainslie

"I doubt if I would ever seek elected office again," he added. "I am quite busy with my job. I put in a full day there. And I'm not getting any younger. I don't expect I'll ever run for any office."

Prior to his four consecutive terms on the board of selectmen, Ainslie served time on the boards of water and sewer commissioners. "All told, I had 22 years of service to the town," he said. "That should be enough."

Park director calls for study of facilities and uses

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

An evaluation of Wompatuck State Park's facilities and programs must be completed before the park access question is addressed, said a state park director last week.

The Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council and the DEM held a public meeting attended by about 20 people last week to discuss park issues and the DEM's management plan for the park.

"We have to relate what the park can and should have in it, and then a transportation study better address the park's needs," said Gilbert Bliss, director of the State Dept. of Environmental Management's Forests and Parks Division.

"I'd hate to think that things can't go on in the park because of an access problem," he said. "I don't want this park to become a victim of access."

The DEM is preparing a plan for the park under the Guidelines for Operations And Land Stewardship (GOALS) program used to plan in other parks. The GOALS program involves four elements—zoning, teams, issues, and action—according to DEM planner Jack Lash.

"Zoning is to identify the different areas in the park, from a unique resource zone where we would not have a lot of people to a developed zone like a picnic area," said Lash.

"Areas in a park need to be managed in different fashions in terms of resources and people."

There are two teams involved in the Wompatuck planning process, the advisory council and the DEM's team of park management professionals.

Lash said the team must look at providing more recreational opportunities in the park. "A survey of campers last year revealed the average age of the campers to be in their early 30's," Lash said, "with a lot of young families.

"If they have young children who don't ride a bike or enjoy hiking," he said, "then mom and dad have limited time before the kids get bored."

Lash suggested adding playground equipment and more open areas to increase activities. He also said the question of swimming in the park should be explored.

"In the camper survey, 75 percent of the people said the one activity they'd like to see added is swimming," Lash said, "and 71 percent said that if we raised the campsite fee to add activities, swimming was the activity they wanted to see.

Lash also said the trail marking system will be evaluated to prevent confusion, and that a brochure mapping the trails will be developed.

"In my book, Wompatuck hasn't delivered as promised," said Bliss. "We're going to try to come up with something that stands the test of time.

"Anything we allow to be here cannot be detrimental to the park," he said.

"We're especially fortunate to have the advisory council involved," said Lash. "The council gives us the local flavor, and helps us get a feel of how the citizens in the surrounding towns feel."

The third element is identifying issues. "We have to look at existing facilities and uses in the park," said Lash, "and also future uses. Public input is extremely important in this process."

After issues have been studied, the GOALS team determine recommendations and actions to guide the management of the park. "We hope to have a completed plan to the printers by Jan. 1 of next year," said Lash.

Residents who attended the meeting raised the issues of hunting in the park.

"The thing that concerns me is that Mount Blue Spring dominates the activity here," said Bliss. "That's fine, but what else should go on?"

Lash presented a list of issues formulated by the DEM and the advisory council. Some issues to be explored include management of newly acquired land, increasing recreation opportunities, and trail management.

The park recently acquired 604 acres in the northeast corner from the federal government. "There are deteriorating structures in there now," said Lash, "but once the hazards are removed we have to look at a plan for the area."

Save The Harbor grant nets $60,000

Save The Harbor; Save The Bay, Inc., the grassroots citizens organization recently formed by former Superior Court Judge Paul Garrity, State Senator William Golden, and McCormack Institute Fellow and columnist Ian Menzies of Hingham, has been awarded a $60,000 grant from the Boston Foundation.

"This is a tremendous boost to the cleanup effort in Boston Harbor," said Golden. "By supporting the grassroots effort of Save The Harbor; Save The Bay, Inc., the Boston Foundation is directly making a major contribution to the cleanup of pollution in the harbor and in Massachusetts Bay.

The grant award will be used for support of staff and initial operating expenses for the organization, which was officially formed back in January. Some of the activities planned by Save The Harbor; Save The Bay, Inc. are co-sponsoring a harbor monitoring project, research on the Boston Harbor sewer system, informational talks with organizations and a public rally.

People interested in obtaining more information about the group and its activities are asked to write to: Save The Harbor; Save The Bay, Inc., Post Office Box 3104, McCormack Station, Boston, MA 02101, or by calling 742-SAVE.

Newcomers celebrate anniversary with style

The very popular fashion show/luncheon held each spring and presented by the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club as its participation in the commemoration of Scituate's 350th Anniversary will present a showing of vintage clothing.

The theme of the show, "Fashions Then and Now," will also feature the classic collection of the clothing of that shop in Cohasset, Johnny Appleseed's. The elegant antique clothing of Nancy Standard of Riverside, Conn., was presented at a similar function of the League of Women Voters.

The fashion show will once again be held at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant in Cohasset on Wednesday, April 16. Tickets are $17. With the purchase of a ticket, you will be entitled to become part of the raffle for the great door prizes, such as a 19 inch color TV donated by South Shore Bank, Main Street, Cohasset; a $100 Savings Bond donated by Cohasset Savings on Elm Street. The BayBank in Scituate has donated a $100 Savings Bond and also a $50 Bond from the Quincy Cooperative Bank in Cohasset.

Verge Jewelers of Scituate will present a gift certificate if your number is chosen. Colpitts Travel in Cohasset has donated a weekend at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston, including their fabulous brunch.

So many of the merchants in the two towns have been wonderfully supportive of the club whose objective is to become an integral part of the new community, not only in enjoying the beautiful surroundings of Cohasset and Scituate but also because of the success of their chief fundraiser, the club is able to present a scholarship award each year. The award of $1,000 each is given to a deserving student of Scituate High and Cohasset schools along with a $500 donation to the high school library of Cohasset and the Scituate Town Library.

Babysitting will be available at the show and tickets are on sale at the Quincy Cooperative Bank, next to Stop and Shop.

Tables of six to eight people may be reserved. For information please call 545-3811 or 383-1112.

Pape Memorial Scholarship fund

Barbara Pape, a very committed supporter of Cohasset Boy Scout Troop 28, died unexpectedly recently at age 41. At the time of her death, she was Chairperson of the Troop 28, Country Fair, the principal annual fund raising activity of the Cohasset Boy Scouts.

Although Barbara was a Scituate resident, she had enrolled her son John, in Troop 28 where he advanced to the highest rank in Scouting, Eagle. John remains active in supporting the Cohasset Boy Scouts and is President of Cohasset Explorer Post 28.

Troop 28 has lost a tremendous friend and supporter of Cohasset Boy Scouting. The Troop Committee has unanimously voted to establish a scholarship fund in her memory. A memorial scholarship is a particularly fitting tribute to Barbara in view of her commitment to the continuing educational pursuits of her children, John and Wendy.

One or more annual scholarships will be awarded to Cohasset Boy Scouts or Explorers who continue to actively support Troop/Post 28 through graduation from high school. Scouts going on to college or vocational schools will be eligible.

It is anticipated that every fifth year, a fund drive will be conducted to protect the principal against the ravages of inflation. Other Friends of Troop 28 may, from time to time, be added to the Honor Roll of this Scholarship Fund.

During this challenging period of family pressures, substance abuse, and other difficulties, it is appropriate to recognize both Barbara and the Cohasset Boy Scouts who have dedicated themselves to God, our country and our community as reflected in the Scout Slogan "Do a Good Turn Daily".

Our goal is to raise $10,000 by May 31, 1986. Tax deductible contributions may be made to the:

Healing with crystals

On Sunday, April 6, at 7:30 p.m., Psi Symposium of First Parish Church of Norwell will feature Clark Manning, Registered Acupuncturist and Certified Crystal Healer, speaking on the topic of "Healing With Crystals." His lecture will touch on the theory of crystal fields and their therapeutic application; clearing, charging and programming crystals, etc.

Clark has studied extensively with Marcel Vogel, IBM scientist. Marcel, inventor of the magnetic coating used on all computer discs, has developed a method of cutting quartz crystal for use in healing. This crystal organizes healing energy in much the same fashion as a laser organizes light. Clark is one of three people certified by Marcel to teach his work.

The program is open to the public. A suggested donation of $3 is requested at the door. First Parish Church is on River Street, Norwell, just south of Rte. 123 in Norwell Center. For more information, call 659-7122.

Gjesteby discusses money

Martha Gjesteby, candidate for a three-year term on the board of selectmen, addressed citizens on her candidacy at a public coffee held at the Cohasset Community Center.

As a selectman, Gjesteby said she would be concerned about fiscal planning and budgets, particularly with regard to the fiscal restraints of Prop. 2 1/2 and reduced revenue sharing. As the town's Metropolitan Area Planning Council Representative, Gjesteby has participated in regional and national conferences, in New England and Washington, with regard to infrastructural problems (water, housing, sewer, roads, regional wastes, solid waste facilities) and interaction between private, federal and local agencies.

Gjesteby said her municipal budget exposure comes through the two terms she spent as a member of the Capital Budget Committee, and her work on the school committee budgets. As a selectman, she would be supportive of maintaining even-debt expenditures with regard to new bond issues and better discussion by selectmen of projects under consideration.

She said there are still federal funds available for regionalized transportation projects, housing grants.

"However," she said, "there is little doubt that selectmen will have to do some serious budget work and planning as a result of reduced aid." For this reason, she feels her election to the board of selectmen should be of paramount consideration.

Kasperowicz stresses choice

Tanna Kasperowicz, candidate for a three-year term on the Cohasset School Committee, said she feels the school committee has some difficult times ahead of it.

Kasperowicz said in 1983 the Parent School Organization surveyed the parent population of the town with their feelings regarding an override of Prop. 2 1/2. "Of those responding, 63% said they would not vote to override Pro. 2 1/2 to provide necessary funds to maintain the standard of Cohasset education." Kasperowicz said while a new survey might be in order, the parents and taxpayers she has talked with during her campaign tend to reaffirm that 1983 response against an override for education, unless compelling reasons can be documented.

There has been a lot of talk about consolidation during the past many years, Kasperowicz said. A former school administrator said we should seriously look into consolidation when we reached 1,200 students. Now that we have arrived at that number we are ignoring it. This is puzzling.

She is concerned that a school committee which has a student population projection showing a 1990 student population half than it was in 1972...has no long-range plans for education. "I think the school committee should be a little worried about hanging their hats on an override.

"What kind of financial consideration will taxpayers give to a school committee which is operating an educational plant with almost half the students of former years? How will the school committee be able to justify more money for education, when it can't justify its plant?" She asked.

Kasperowicz said the April 12 election will either confirm to the school committee that it is acting in everyone's interest, or convince it that it must seriously consider some alternatives. "I hope the latter will be the case."

McNabb urges citizens to vote

John K. McNabb, Jr., candidate for Selectman, recently expressed the need for a high turnout of voters at the April 12 Town Election.

"I urge all voters to attend the Town Election, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday April 12 at the Town Hall," McNabb told a group of supporters. "Greater participation by all residents in town affairs can only be in the best interests of the town as a whole."

McNabb also spoke of the need to support quality education in the Town of Cohasset. "The Selectmen should support sufficient funding for the School Department and for quality education for Cohasset children," said McNabb.

The Selectman candidate also touched on other issues important to the town. "I support the restoration of commuter rail service to Cohasset and the South Shore," said McNabb, "and I hope that such plans can be completed with all due consideration for environmental impacts and effects on those homes near the existing railroad right-of-way."

Regarding state aid, McNabb stated: "I support the proper level of state aid to cities and towns to help us recover from the loss of federal revenue-sharing funds and from the impact of the Gramm-Rudman bill and the phasing-out of federal aid for water pollution control projects."

The candidate continued, "I support centralized public sewerage for Cohasset. The town should move quickly to draft a sewerage plan before federal funding is completely phased out in 1990."

Water supply protection was supported: "More effective action is needed to ensure that our public water supply is not contaminated by the Cohasset Heights Landfill," said McNabb. "I support the watershed protection district and proposed regulations for the regulation of hazardous materials within Cohasset."

Regarding the proposed new area code, McNabb stated: "I oppose the change of our area code by the telephone company. The Selectmen should be outspoken in opposition to this proposal which would cause unneccessary confusion for local residents and businesses, and might lead to increased rates for phone calls from Cohasset to Boston."

"Other problems which need to be addressed," said McNabb, "are the parking situation in the Village business area, the traffic safety situation at the intersection of Forest Ave. and North Main Street, and the proper, planned development of the Route 3A business district."

"In conclusion," said McNabb, "I would like to state that I have made no promises to anyone, and if elected Selectmen will make decisions based on what is best for the town as a whole."

Electrical safety awards

Prizes were awarded Thursday, March 20 to Osgood and Deer Hill students for their collage posters in the Eastern Edison Electrical Safety Contest. The statewide contest was entitled "Prevent Electrical Accidents in a Students' World."

Cohasset won three of the top prizes from a total of 17 cities and towns. Art teacher Jean O'Malley coordinated the Cohasset entries with Ruth Stetson of Eastern Edison.

First prize of $50, in the K through third grade division, went to Osgood third grader Jonathon Hislop. $25 second prizes went to third grader, Jeramiah Stevenson, in the kindergarten through third grade division, and to Deer Hill fourth grader, Christa Ansberg, in the fourth through sixth grade category.

Honorable mentions were won by Osgood's Jessica Aronson and Deer Hill's Kathleen Conroy, Erin Lennon and Jason Hunter.

All of the posters showed creativity and awareness of safely using electric energy.

Congratulations to the winners and to all of the Cohasset students who enthusiastically contributed their artistic talent in this worthwhile contest!

Deer Hill fourth grader Christa Ansberg displays her award-winning electrical safety poster.

High School news

Cohasset High School seniors John Kornet and John Pereira have been accepted into the All-State Music Festival being held Thursday through Saturday at the Collins Center for the Performing Arts in Andover.

When music students audition for District Festival in the Fall, the top students receive an All-State recommendation. They must then audition another music selection at another location in early February. The best are then selected to participate in the All-State Music Festival.

Kornet, tenor, and Pereira, bass, have both achieved this plateau of musical excellence.

These two had starring roles in the production of "Pirates of Penzance" last December. They sing in the Senior Chorus and the Barbershop Quartet at Cohasset High under the direction of Mr. Bryan Marks.

PSO Third Annual Phone-athon

The Cohasset PSO will conduct its third annual Phone-a-thon Monday, April 14, from 7 to 9:30 p.m., Volunteers will call families of school age children, asking them to make a pledge to help fund the activities planned for the 1986-87 school year.

The PSO is hoping for 100 percent family participation so that the organization can continue to promote programs and activities that enhance your child's education.

This year the PSO has sponsored a variety of curriculum enrichment programs including science programs, Dance Consort, author Lois Lowry, the Junior Great Books Program and a guest career lecture series. The PSO recruits volunteers to work as room mothers and to help in the classrooms, libraries, math and computer labs. The PSO calendar, listing all school events, sport events and holidays is sent to every Cohasset student's home. The organization arranges host families for Metro students, sponsors programs for handicap awareness and serves as a vital communication channel between parents and schools.

When your phone rings April 14, show your support with a generous, tax-deductible pledge!

McNabb supports senior van

John McNabb, Jr., a candidate for Selectman, said he supports the need for a new Senior Van.

"Our senior citizens vitally need the Senior Shuttle bus service which has been operating the past seven years," said McNabb at a gathering of supporters Sunday, March 23.

"I support the article which will be before the Annual Town Meeting on April 5 to fund a new Senior Van," said McNabb. "The town should fund this van, unless other state or federal funding becomes available soon."

"I don't think that $11,500, minus trade-in on the present van, is too much for the town to pay for providing a necessary service for senior citizens," said McNabb. "We should keep in mind that, for many, the Senior Shuttle is not a luxury but is a necessity."

McNabb noted that the Senior Shuttle incurred over $2,000 in repair costs last year, and is over seven years old. "The van recently needed repairs amounting to over $200.," said McNabb.

"I urge all Cohasset residents to support funding for a new Senior Van, and for expanded services for senior citizens in Cohasset," said McNabb.

Kornet seeks final term

Diana Kornet is running for a position on the school committee one more time.

She served seven years to date, beginning with one year which filled an unexpired term and then was re-elected twice.

Her interest in education is stronger now than ever; "As our son graduates this June, and our youngest enters Osgood in the fall, my perspective and concern really involve the entire system. Our fifteen and thirteen-year-olds provide a window on the middle years," she said.

During her tenure on the school committee, Kornet has served as chairman, secretary, and on numerous sub-committees, including negotiations, basic skills, teacher evaluation instrument, goals and objectives for the ten-year accreditation review, drug and alcohol policy and attendance policy.

She co-chaired the Osgood Communication Council before the present PSO was founded, and is very supportive of the purpose and activities of the PSO. She has been a classroom volunteer, including participation in the Handicap Awareness program in the lower schools.

"I am most concerned right now with the fact that over the next three years our high school population will go from over 600 students to under 500. How to maintain our quality programs and improve them where we should is a staggering problem when faced with scheduling conflicts, an ever-tightening budget, and the "graying of America."

Kornet claims that if the increasing number of citizens without children do not recognize the importance of educating our young people well, our country will be in serious trouble. Major changes are needed to attract and retain excellent teachers from among our better college students. Efforts to reward good teachers in the profession must be constant.

Kornet's personal agenda for another term include establishing a separate reading, writing and study skills course in the junior high, investigating the kindergarten curriculum and the advisability of a pre-kindergarten program, and strengthening the teaching of writing throughout the system.

Kornet graduated from Connecticut College in 1966 with a BA in biology. She and her husband, John, moved to Cohasset from Bethlehem, Pa., in 1976.

Field of candidates draws capacity audience

Town Hall was filled to capacity with interested residents who listened attentively to the many candidates running for public office. The election is April 12.

many thousands of tax dollars in time and effort.

The present librarian, Richard Hayes, was hired in 1975, and a renovated library contained 45,000 volumes. This year the library is again expanding its services by joining the 16-town Old Colony Library Network through a computer catalogue system. A supporter of this new program, Power stated, "the technology will allow access to far more volumes without increasing the size of the library."

Trustee incumbent Buckley is a 1968 graduate of CHS and holds a bachelor's degree in special education. She currently teaches library science in Hull. Acknowledging the staff and volunteers of the library, Buckley said she has gained experience in serving the public through the library, and supports the membership in the Old Colony Network.

Whealler noted at the beginning of her speech, "it must be a great job if all the incumbents are running again." She cited her experience as a librarian and staff member in several libraries, and noted a trustee must have the vision and long-range planning to work with staff and with patrons.

Whealler said she would be a supportive trustee, and stated "I've spent my whole life looking for a hometown. Now that I've found one, I would like to contribute as best I can."

Board of Health

There is one, three-year term available on this board. Sharon Becker and Mathhew Sullivan are vying for that position.

Becker noted the many differences of responsibilities between the current health board and when it originated in 1910. The only common points between then and now, she said, was in 1910 when the board was concerned with sewage disposal, and an engineer, Mr. Metcalf, was hired by the board to complete an engineering study.

The three most important issues, according to Becker, are the protection of the town's groundwater, sewage disposal, and the town's landfill. She noted that the watershed district was an important start in protecting the groundwater, and the board's recent strengthening of the state's sewage disposal regulations were necessary. Becker also noted the town, through the South Shore Coalition, was looking to regional solutions for its disposal dilemmas.

She is currently chairman of the Disposal Area Study Committee and is enrolled in a master's program at Tufts University.

Sullivan commented that since he has retired from employment in social service, he has time to devote to the community. Saying he was running on his "own volition," Sullivan described himself as impatient "and I never give up."

The candidates were asked how they felt about the chemicals found last fall as they were about to be dumped in the Cohasset Heights landfill, and what could be done to ensure the material is never brought into the site, Becker stated, "it worries me a lot. I would like to see it closed. The public hearing (to be held by the health board) will be really good. It was obviously an illegal entry."

Sullivan stated, "if I am elected, I'll study what problems there are and see what resources I can bear on that problem and any other problems you bring before me."

School committee

There are two, three-year terms available on the committee.

Candidate Christopher Ford is a graduate of CHS. He said he is running for election because of the "warmth I feel for this community." A former teacher in the Peace Corps and later at the university level, Ford decided just a few years ago to begin his own business back in his hometown.

"I have the capability of innovation," he said. "If you are looking for a person to count basketballs to trim the budget, don't look at me. If you want innovative answers to problems, I think I can serve you."

Dane Hahn has resided for two years in Cohasset. He has regularly attended meetings of the school committee during the past three and a half months. During that time, he has noted the committee failed to review or improve the curriculum. He outlined the need for improved guidance services, a hard look at capital expenses such as building maintenance, a need to push parental involvement, and to review the school personnel in light of declining enrollment.

Tanna Kasperowicz said it was "no secret that our education housing is too large" for the current student population. "The question is, do we need three educational buildings?" she asked, saying the committee must consider what could be gained by consolidating the student population into two buildings.

The school committee will have a difficult time asking for more money by 1990 when the student population will be down to 1000 students, or half the population of 1972. "I strongly urge you to elect the school committee of 1990 and spend your money on education, not spend your money on educational buildings," she said.

Diana Kornet cited her first hand experience with the Cohasset school system as she seeks re-election to the board. "I would like to be on board," she said, as the system moves on with a new superintendent, assistant superintendent, and begins the search for a new high school principal.

Her goals for education include retaining good, quality teachers and attracting new ones. "We must make it financially attractive for them," she stated. "And to be able to keep them from going to private business." She suggested a cooperative plan with private industry to share quality teachers with the schools.

Kornet said it is important to establish strong reading and writing skills in the junior high level, to review the kindergarten curriculum and think about establishing a pre-K program. She urged voters to cast their vote "for stability and experience."

When asked how the committee could maintain an interested teaching staff Kornet replied, "we need to work slowly and pay our teachers better. I'd also like to see more interaction between teachers. They need more peer feedback."

Hahn noted it was a complex issue, but answered that the PSO is developing plans to reward particularly good teachers.

Ford stated the problem must be confronted because of the fiscal limitation of Prop. 2 1/2. He was not prepared to make specific proposals at the moment, but suggested a regional sharing plan of teachers and students on a limited basis.

Kasperowicz noted that the new state statute, Ch. 188, deals with incentives for quality teachers, "and will hopefully pay teachers to have good ideas."

Planning board

There is one, five-year term on the board.

Incumbent Daniel Cotton said the current board is not promoting or planning development of the town. He said all planning must be done within state statute. He said the best planning for the town must be done in cooperation with other town board. Cotton cited the example of the Cohasset Water Resource Board which is a conglomeration of members from selectmen, planning board, health board, conservation, appeals, and health board. He urged the public's participation in the planning board's business.

Robert Davenport said he was running because of his love for his hometown and his "frustration." More than two years ago, selectmen requested the planning board update its rules and regulations and the conclusion is "worse than what we had."

He said his candidacy was not a vendetta against the board, saying he would urge all town boards to work together in a master plan for the town. "There is very little good land left. What is left must be developed very closely and correctly," he stated.

When asked if he would abstain from deliberations regarding property he or his family owns along Rte. 3A, Davenport answered, "I would never be a part of conflict of interest."

Candidate Mark Trask said as the fire department's fire prevention officer, he has regularly provided input into the planning board's decisions. The biggest task of the board, he said, "is to review engineering projects in a fair and open-minded manner and to keep the interests of the town in the forefront. We must especially keep in mind our vulnerable water supply. If we lose our water, we lose our town." He supported the development of affordable housing which he said, "has been sadly overlooked."

Water commission

There is one, three-year term available on the commission.

Candidate Ronald Goodwin stated the number one priority of the commission is to protect the town's vulnerable groundwater supply. The water department must continue its efforts to be fiscally responsible, he noted, adding the deficit has been reduced from $70,000 to $6,000 in three years.

He supported a more advanced computer system for the department's billing process and the establishment of a stabilization fund to finance the improvement of the water department's distribution system. Goodwin called for the implementation of a strong policy dealing with late payments of water bills, taking into account cases of hardship.

Selectmen

There are two, three-year terms available on the board of selectmen.

Candidate Vito Conte said with his impending retirement from the US Air Force, he will be able to devote a lot of time to town issues. He cited his numerous activities in charitable organizations, and said he will give 105 percent to the position. "I will listen to everybody. I do that now," he concluded.

James Gallagher noted that last year, he gathered almost 800 votes in his first bid for a seat on the board of selectmen. He has been a member of the recreation commission, where he became familiar with budget constraints enforced by Prop. 2 1/2 and the workings of the state legislature in attempting to establish a revolving fund for the recreation department.

It was an "eye-opening" experience during his tenure as a member of the Harbor Study Committee, Gallagher stated.

Martha Gjesteby cited her experience as a past member of the school committee and planning board. She is currently involved in many of the regional transportation issues affecting Cohasset and its neighboring communities.

Participation on these committees have gained her the skills of a specialist, Gjesteby said. She has been active in fiscal planning for the town and has been concerned for many years in the town's water quality. In the early 1980's she was opposed to the issuance of a permit for Cohasset Heights and noted "I am sad to see time had proved my point."

Candidate John McNabb said as a three-year member of the Town Government Structure Committee and as its chairman for the past two years, "I feel I can make a vital contribution to this town." As a liaison with the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, he has gained experience on a local and state level. McNabb supports strong watershed protection methods, a public rail system for the South Shore, proper aid to cities and towns, creation of affordable housing for all incomes and the elderly, and the purchase of a senior bus. There is a need for more long-range planning, saying selectmen should "should get out of the daily operation of town government." He supports more authority for the executive secretary and coordination between selectmen and department heads in developing annual budgets.

Incumbent Cliff Mitman was represented by campaign manager Robert Ciciotte. He read a statement which outlined Mitman's three-year experience on the board and his previous term on the town's personnel committee. His primary concerns center on planning, projects, people and payments. He noted that the town's bylaws should be reviewed and updated, and projects such as the town hall addition and police and fire station renovation must be carefully reviewed. He cited his involvement in the state and federal attempts to gain a wastewater treatment plan for the town, and his initiation of a comprehensive personnel plan for non-union town employees.

HOW PEACE CAME TO THE WORLD
Edited by Earl W. Foell and Richard A. Nenneman
Foreword by Kurt Waldheim

It can happen. In the year 2010 the world is at peace and the threat of nuclear devastation has vanished. How has this come about? Through the imaginative ideas of forty men and women—lawyers, doctors, professors, conflict research specialists, and others who think about peace in a different way, who do not accept that war is inevitable. The wealth of original and workable approaches to peace presented in this book has been selected from entries to "Peace 2010," a contest sponsored by The Christian Science Monitor.

St. Stephen's Church

Adult education meeting—There will be a meeting of all interested in adult education Sunday, April 6, after the fellowship time following the 10 a.m. service.

Andrew Hamersley ordained—The Rev. Andrew Hamersley, who went into the ordained ministry from St. Stephen's Church, was ordained to the priesthood Wednesday in Easter Week, April 2, at the Parish of Christ Church, 33 Central Street in Andover.

Workshop—A workshop to train members of the church to visit new members will take place Saturday, April 12, from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Bring a sandwich. Soup and beverage will be provided. Visiting of new members is an important ministry of reaching out to draw others to Christ and his church here at St. Stephen's. The workshop is open to all.

Hull church changes—The Hull Episcopal Congregation, under the leadership of the Rev. Diane Edson, will change its time of worship from 4:30 p.m. to 8 a.m. Sunday mornings. This is made possible by the offer of Bob Garrison, the Pastor of the Lighthouse Assembly of God, that they use his church for worship at 767 Nantasket Avenue. Easter at the Hull congregation will include the baptism of Steven MacLean. Parishioners are invited to visit the Hull Episcopal Congregation in their new home.

Headmaster from Zimbabwe—Arriving at St. Stephen's soon is a representative of the church in Zimbabwe which this congregation has been praying for every week. Michael Kututwa, headmaster of a public school in that African nation, will visit and offer the sermon Sunday, April 13.

Second Congregational Church

A note from the minister—"I want to thank all of you for everything you have done over the past thirteen years to welcome and support my ministry and our family. No church survives and thrives without the work of scores of committed people who are willing to put their energy where their hearts are. I am grateful beyond words for what all of you have done to make our church the friendly, faithful 'family of families' that it has become," Rev. Benbow stated.

"A special part of my gratitude (and Mary's) goes to all of you who made the reception last Sunday such a joyful, tasteful, and tasty time," he continued. "Saying goodbye is never easy, but the reception certainly helped us to be able to greet friends whom we will never forget. Thank you."

Church school—There will be a yard sale soon to benefit the Heifer Project. Be sure to start collecting good, resaleable items.

Free—Lead Poisoning Screening Clinic. The Public Health Nurse of Cohasset and the Department of childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program will hold a lead poison screening for children between the ages of nine months and six years old, Thursday, April 3, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. Cohasset High School tennis teams spring outlook. . .

The boys have been hard at work the past two weeks preparing for the upcoming season under new coach Ed Amorall.

Amorall has been pleased with his team's progress and feels he has many talented players throughout the entire team. This depth according to Amorall, leads to good competition during practice, which will undoubtedly improve each player's ability and make the team competitive.

When asked what his goals were for the season, Amorall replied, "we are now undefeated and plan to stay that way." Amorall continued to say that even if his team does not go 18-0, he will be pleased if Cohasset does the best it can and reaches its full potential.

The leadership on the team will come from number one player Rich Reddick, number two player Chris Ryan and number three player Fred Wilshire. Amorall has also been pleased with the progress of Derick Lacks, Steve Meyers, Dan Farwell, Jason Marsac, and Greg Wallingford who will all be competing for the doubles' positions.

The season kicks off this week with Middleboro, Wednesday. Thursday, the boys will face one of Their toughest competitors all season, Duxbury. This March will most likely indicate where Cohasset will stand in the league.

Friday, the boys take on Rockland. Monday, the Skippers will host a tough Hanover team and the next day will play Sandwich. Amorall explained his team has a very vigorous schedule as the beginning. Hopefully Cohasset will be able to keep up its intensity and spirit in order to win these matches.

Girls'Tennis

After losing six players, one might think this season would be a building year for the girls tennis team. However, this is not the case. Not only does coach Sue Dalrymple feels her team is capable of matching last year's 15-3 record, but she also thinks the girls may improve on this record, qualify for the State Tournament, and even have a shot at the league title. Dalrymple feels the key to this year's success will lie with the doubles matches which decide the outcome of many close contests. Dalrymple also believes Cohasset's major strength is its depth.

Co-captains Kerri Kirkendal and Carolyn O'Brien have shown a lot of spirit and enthusiasm and should help to bring about another winning season. Dalrymple has been impressed with the playing of

Softball team hopes season will be competitive

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The Skippers will not return to the tournament this year, they won't even come close, according to Cohasset High School softball coach Bill Fallon.

"I think we'll be in the bottom third of the league this year," he said. "I think we're going to be competitive, but we're going to have to struggle to be competitive."

Why is the forecast so gloomy?

The Skippers lost seven of last year's starting players. Five were washed away by graduation while two others have found something else to do.

"We're a very young team," Fallon understated. There are no seniors on the squad this year and there are only a couple of juniors. There are also a couple of 7th graders.

"A lot of upperclassmen didn't come out for spring sports this year," he said. "That's hurt us, but we'll do the best we can.

"The age of the three sport athlete is quickly declining," he declared.

In Cohasset's case, Fallon's comment holds more than one truth in it, but the team's veterans have not all vanished.

There are three returners to the Skipper squad. Lisa Shumaker, "who will probably play in the outfield this year," has been a starter since she was in eighth grade, Fallon said.

Third baseman Debbie Hartley will return to the hot corner and catcher Marge Murphy will again be the anchor behind home plate.

Fallor predicted that sophomore Cindy Spooner will add some punch to the line up. "She played first base and hit the ball well," Fallon said.

During batting practice last Monday, Spooner socked a mammoth home run and connected solidly on some other pitches.

"I think we have five or six players who could play for almost anybody," the coach commented, "but after that, there's a real drop-off in the talent. After that, we're in trouble."

Fallon explained that the Skipper offense will be their main strength. "We've hit the ball a lot better than I expected," he said, "so I think we'll be okay hitting."

The squad will be weak defensively, Fallon explained. "We need a lot of work on general fundamentals-base running, fielding, situation plays and things like that."

Slugger Cindy Spooner appears ready for battle in this season's quest for a championship. (John Magadieu photo)

"Next year, I think we might be okay," he said. "It's going to take a while."

Meanwhile, the Skippers will play their first home game of the 1986 season today. Cohasset will battle Jeremiah Burke of Boston.

Jan Chapman, Lee Sullivan and Karin Anglin. She also mentioned that her assistant coach Jane Tiss has played a great role in organizing the team and is vital to the success of the club.

The girls open with Middleboro, Wednesday, and then face the dreaded Duxbury Dragons the following day. Duxbury has been a traditionally strong squad and this year seems to be no exception.

Baseball

The baseball team has started off with a great attitude and is coming back this season with something it has been lacking for years, experience. Not only is his team bigger and stronger, according to coach Joe Bouchard, but it is also smarter and more confident than last year.

Bouchard feels Cohasset's defense is the best its ever been especially in the infield, while offensively the Skippers started off slowly.

The coach believes their hitting will soon come around. Bouchard is aiming for a 500 season with the ultimate goal of winning the league. Although a league championship may not happen this year. It may very well occur next year.

This year the boys will be looking toward the leadership of co-captains Jamie Roy and Bob Shultz. Bouchard has been pleased with the progress of his veteran pitcher Sean Corkery and feels Tom Larsen is also showing promise on the mound.

The Skipper's begin their season Thursday when they play Sacred Heart Saturday, the boys will engage in a double header at home against Gorham from Maine. The first of the two games begins at 10:00 with the second contest starting around 2:00.

Pack 38 scouts dust off their engines in Pinewood Derby

Pack 38 held its Pinewood Derby March 26. All the cars were carved, sculptured, sawed and painted from a block of wood by the Scouts and their parents.

Intricately-designed cars, some with windshields, headlights and drivers, were weighed by Cubmaster Jeff Forsdick and Scout Master Merle Brown. Linda Farrag labeled cars for their specific category. The cars could weigh no more than five ounces. If they were overweight, the cars went to the Pit Stop area. (where drilling went on to remove some weight) For the cars which were underweight, weights were added from coins to keys to a shining necklace.

Finally, with all the cars passing inspection and the last dusting of graphite put on the wheels, the cars were ready to race. The Boy Scouts: Nicholas and Mike LeLecas, David Farrag, Matt Silvia and Chris McElroy helped to set the cars on the track.

This is the first year the Tiger Cubs raced. Their cars looked sensational. The Tigers were all enthused and excited to watch their cars race down the long wooden-sloping raceway to the finish.

The trophy winners were: 1st, Greg Schultz; 2nd, Ken Leahy and 3rd, Connor Mangan. The other participating Tigers who received ribbons were: Greg Stevens, Simeon Ketchum, Mike Kasameyer and Kevin McKenna.

The Cub Scout Trophy winners were: 8-year-old group: 1st, Chip Moore; 2nd, Brian Sasso and 3rd, Toby Horne; 9-year-old group: 1st, Darin Northnagle; 2nd, Trevor Cook and 3rd, Kevin O'Donnell; 10-year-old group: 1st, Spencer Henderson; 2nd, Doug Schultz and 3rd, Dan Silvia.

The overall winner for all three age groups was Spencer Henderson. The other participating Scouts who received ribbons were: Steve Mulcahy, Herb Crehan, Dan Varisco, Dan Volugnis, Josh Roth, Matt Larson, Brendon Kinchla, Michael Lennon, Tom Greco, Ryan Freeman, Mike Mulcahy, Jon Hislop, Bradley Potolicchio, Scott Herzog, Earle Bestick, Jay Northnagle, Jason Whitman and Dan Baird.

A special thanks - for all her hard work and organization and for obtaining the ribbons and trophies goes to Pat Curtin. She is also responsible for all the badges and arrows the Scouts earn. Her efforts are certainly appreciated.

Prior to the race, Den 4 presented a lovely basket bouquet of spring flowers to their Den Leader, Linda Farrag, in appreciation for her work with them. She was certainly surprised and sends a big thank you to all.

At the South Shore Science Center

South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, has announced the dedication and opening of the Peripheral Trail on Saturday, April 12. The trail, which encircles the perimeter of the Science Center property, passes through a number of different habitats — from woodlands to wetlands — giving visitors a unique glimpse at the diversity of ecological systems on the South Shore.

The day also marks the publication of the "Peripheral Trail Guide" written by Bill Perkins and illustrated by Joanne Papandrea. The guide, written as a self-guiding tour resource also serves as a naturalist's reference. The Guide is dedicated to the late Jean "Pinkie" Baker, former member of the Natural Science Center's Board of Trustees.

The Natural Science Center has scheduled a day of fun for the whole family:

9 to 10 a.m. Members Preview: Book signing by Bill Perkins, Armchair tour of the Trail, and refreshments.

10 to 10:30 a.m. Open to Public: Slide show about Science Center, exhibits and gift shop.

10:30 a.m., Dedication Ceremony on the trail, followed immediately by walk on Peripheral Trail.

11 a.m., Stuffed Animal Parade: Children are invited to bring their favorite stuffed animal for a special Parade on the Trail.

Noon, Book Signing by Bill Perkins. If you would like to linger, bring a picnic lunch.

1 to 2 p.m., Peripheral Trail Walk: a second chance.

2 to 3 p.m., Armchair Tour of Trail.

The public is cordially invited to join the festivities. For more information, please call 659-2559.

Once you know the basics of floral arranging, a lifetime of pleasure and beauty awaits you — whether it be from cuttings from your own garden or cut flowers from your florist. On Wednesday, April 9 from 10 a.m. to noon, Jean MacDonald and Dorothy Hayward will lead a demonstration/workshop on flower arranging. Workshop includes proper cutting, conditioning and arranging according to color and proportion to container. Special attention will be given to design.

Bring: pinholder, clippers and a container that holds water. Floral materials will be provided. Prepaid registration required. Members $7.50, non-members $9. Call 659-2559.

GEMS, GEMCUTTING

On Thursday, April 10 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Bruce Luscombe will introduce your family to the beautiful world of semi-precious and precious gemstones — from apatite to zircons. Examine crystals "in the rough" that will someday become stunning jewelry. Learn how a rough stone is transformed into a faceted gem and gain tips on buying gemstones. Pre-paid registration is required. Members $4, non-members $5. Call 659-2559.

DEEP SKY

Journey into the heavens on Friday, April 11, from 8 to 10 p.m. Rolf Egon, President of South Shore Astronomical Society, will present an information packed slide talk and then lead participants to the Astronomical Society's telescope on the Science Center's grounds for viewing of the Orion Nebula as well as other deep sky objects. Pre-paid registration required. Members $3, non-members $4, under 14 years $1.50. Call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday and most holidays. Free admission, trails, library, exhibits and gift shop.

Town Meeting has issues to interest everyone

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Unlike years past when one article would lure crowds to town meeting, this year's warrant is filled with issues and proposals sure to pique the interest of everyone.

There is watershed protection, hazardous waste disposal restrictions, a 5.7 percent increase in the school budget, a land-taking proposal, and an alternative to the alternative wastewater treatment plan approved by voters two years ago.

Town meeting begins Saturday, April 5 at 1 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Although only 100 residents are needed to begin the meeting, there will likely be many more in attendance.

This is not a town meeting limited in scope. With about 50 articles included in the annual warrant and nine included in the special meeting, the issues are diverse and plentiful.

The selectmen and advisory committee have yet to decide whether to recommend several of the articles. One of those articles regards a repeat request by Newtonville Lane residents to install a fire hydrant and construct a water main to that street.

Residents of the that small, hilly side street are currently without adequate fire protection. The article requests a $53,000 appropriation for the main and hydrant.

Recently, fire department officials have discussed the less expensive alternative of purchasing a wide diameter hose for the department. This 'portable water main' firefighting equipment would provide streets such as Newtonville Lane the protection they need at a lower cost. Although a fire hydrant on each street and private way would be the primary choice, Fire Capt. Mark Trask stated the portable water main would provide a satisfactory alternative.

The fire department is sponsoring several articles in this year's warrant. Among the articles is a proposal that all new residential buildings constructed in Cohasset include an approved sprinkler system.

The advisory committee recommended this proposal. According to Fire Safety Officer Trask, the sprinkler systems will be required only in homes constructed after the passage of the bylaw. The cost of the installations will be provided by the contractor.

The fire department is also sponsoring a request to purchase a new pumper for $138,000. The capital outlay committee recommended this article be postponed until the next fiscal year.

The school department and the advisory committee have reached an agreement regarding this year's proposed school budget. The total is $4,492,126 for the 1986-1987 school year.

After efforts to pare down the numbers, the school committee voted to support this final figure. The advisory committee after previous disagreements, compromised with school officials and voted to recommend the 5.7 percent increase.

As a result of that compromise, Advisory Chairman Jacqueline Dormitizer resigned from the committee. She stated that in good conscience, she could not stand before town meeting and recommend the inflated school budget. She disagreed with the proposed increase and did not favor the addition of the elementary school adjustment counselor, saying it was a "potential intervention" into the private lives of families.

The school department also sponsored a separate capital outlay article for the purchase of three school buses. That total appropriation request totals $90,000. The capital outlay and advisory committee recommended the school department purchase two new buses in fiscal 1987. Sixty-four percent of the total amount will be reimbursed by the state through a depreciation table, according to Capital Outlay Chairman Ned Tebbitts.

For the second time, the watershed protection committee and the planning board are sponsoring an article establishing the official watershed district, and a set of bylaws to protect that area from development and pollution.

Article 39 proposes a zoning bylaw change in which the official parameters of the watershed district are outlined. A previous attempt to establish a watershed area last year was declared void by the state attorney general's office because of procedural problems with the public availability of the district map.

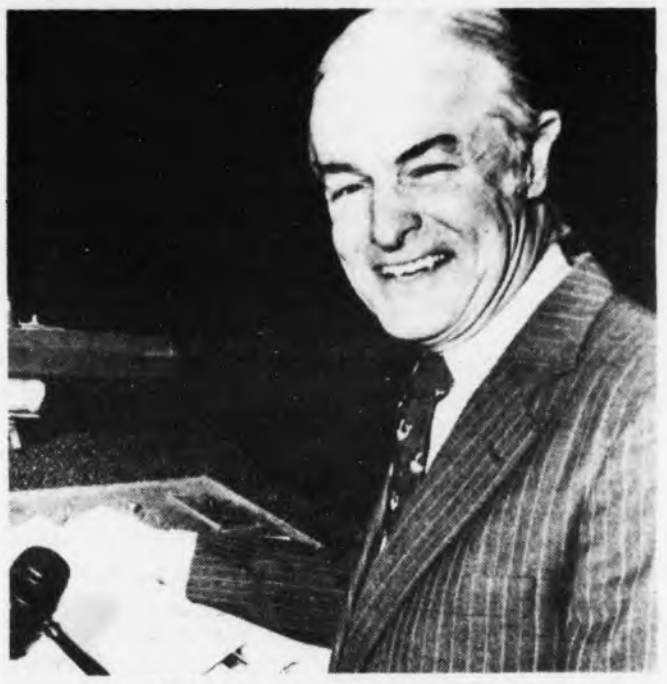
Article 40 in the town meeting warrant proposes a bylaw change to preserve and protect the groundwater from contamination. Strict guidelines have been proposed for the storage of underground oil and gas tanks.

Also included in the article is a section relating to the use of herbicides and pesticides by commercial or municipal agencies. According to the regulation, the health board would have to be notified what chemicals the companies were using, where and when the application would take place.

The advisory committee has not yet voted whether to support this article.

The water commission is sponsoring several articles, including a proposal to take by eminent domain the land known as Lily Pond Estates. Currently, the owners of that 36-acre parcel have appealed the planning board's denial of their proposed development.

The commission suggested the land taking in order to protect the town's water supply system. Lily Pond Estates is situated on land surrounding the town's public water supply.



William Weeks

There is no purchase price attached to the proposed article. Before town meeting, an appraiser hired by the town will recommend a purchase amount.

The sewer commission is sponsoring three articles in the town meeting warrant. The first article requests $15,000 for the purchase of a portable generator for the Pond Street pumping station. Although the generator will be used primary at that location, the commissioners said it will be used by the town wherever the need arises. They predict the purchase price will be less than the requested amount.

A second article requests $20,000 for a set of plans to rehabilitate the Elm Street wastewater treatment plant. The appropriation is necessary for the station to meet the federal E.P.A. regulations.

The final warrant article requests the town amend the Ward Engineering plan approved by town meeting in 1984. The modified plan, which is currently in negotiation between the state Division of Water Pollution Control and the town, will include a decreased amount of sewer connections. The amended version is necessary, the commissioners stated, because of the state's reluctance to grant financing for the original plan.

If negotiations between the state and town are successful, the modified version will be implemented.

Financing has already been approved by the state for the discharge pipe connection between Cohasset and Hull. Attorneys representing the commission are currently negotiating a financing plan to fund on-site septic repairs and central sewering of a portion of the town.

April Fool's Day treats to trick the family

This may come as a surprise, but ancient India is said to have started our custom of playing practical jokes on the first day of April. All Fools Day was a droll ceremony to mark the end of the spring festival of Huli.

Dignified East Indians rock with mirth if they succeed in sending a friend on a foolish errand — their idea of a joke. I'm not trying to fool you into thinking this is April Fool's Day.

A glance at your calendar tells you that was yesterday, but I couldn't resist passing on that timely bit of news. You may wish to fool your family into thinking "thin" with these low-cal tomatoes, a Diet Workshop recipe.

STUFFED TOMATOES WITH CHEESE

2 medium tomatoes
1/2 c. chopped, cooked cauliflower
1/2 tsp. dried onion flakes
1/4 tsp. garlic powder
Dash oregano
2 oz. shredded cheddar cheese

Cut tops off tomatoes. Scoop out pulp. Set aside. Salt inside of tomatoes and invert to drain. Mash cauliflower with tomato pulp and seasonings. Fill tomatoes with mixture. Sprinkle cheese over top and wrap in foil, leaving top open. Place on cookie sheet and bake approx. 15 min. in 400 oven. Tomatoes should remain firm.

* * *

One way to fool your family into thinking you've been slaving over the proverbial hot stove when you've really just arrived home minutes ago, is to set the table immediately. Thus assured of eating in the not too distant future, you can go ahead and throw together this casserole of Margaret Braun's and while it's baking, reach for the box of biscuit mix, When that's in the oven, make a salad and you're home free.

POT LUCK CASSEROLE

1 lb. ground beef
1/3 c. chopped onion
1 c. shredded cheddar cheese
1 can condensed tomato soup
2 c. cooked medium noodles
1 c. cooked corn
1/4 c. water
1 tsp. ea. mustard and salt

Brown beef in saucepan together with onion and then stir to separate meat. Pour off fat and stir in 3/4 c. of cheese and remaining ingredients. Top with remaining cheese. Bake at 350 for 30 min. Serves four. Green beans can be substituted for corn.

Are you an Aries? You are if you were born between March 20 and April 20. Astrologers say you are noted for your energy, push and executive ability. A builder of air castles, a thinker and leader you are, but just don't let it go to your head, for you're obstinate as well.

I don't know Jan Bianchi's birthday, but it seems she must have the energy of an Aries for she is a busy lady. She is an interior accessory designer in Scituate, mother of three, has been a member of the Scituate Gourmet Guild since it began and loves to cook. This is a recipe she originated which won her both a camera and $150 gift certificate as one of six semifinalists in a Weetabix cook-off contest conducted by Dave Maynard of WBZ.

WONDERFUL WEETABIX ONIONS

Two 14-oz. jars of onions
4 Wheetabix (a salt-free biscuit-type cereal)
1/3 c. brown sugar
1/4 c. butter

Drain liquid from one jar of onions and place onions in a greased pan. Mix Weetabix and sugar together and spread over onions and dot with butter. Bake at 350 for 45 min. until bubbly brown.

* * *

Sometimes you can fool people into thinking you're a better cook than you really are by preparing a dessert that's easy such as Milly Carr's

CHOCOLATE CHEESE PIE

1 c. sugar
3 8 oz. pkgs. cream cheese
5 eggs
1 T ea. vanilla & lemon juice
1 4 oz. pkg. German sweet chocolate, melted & cooled
Whipped topping & chocolate curls

Add sugar to cheese in bowl, blending well. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Add vanilla. Measure 2 c. of cheese mixture. Fold in chocolate. Add lemon juice to remaining cheese mixture. Pour into well-buttered 10" pie pan. Top with chocolate mix. Bake at 350 for 40 to 45 min. Cool, chill, garnish.

NDA celebrity fundraiser

Pete Brock, Joan Beniot, Jess Cain, Doug Flutie, Don Hasslebeck, John Kennedy Jr., Ted Kennedy Jr., Terry O'Reilly are among the more than 30 celebrities who will be attending "An Evening of Stars," the gala fund-raiser planned for the benefit of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham.

The event, which promises to be the largest fundraiser ever held on the South Shore, will take place on Sunday, April 13, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Academy, 1073 Main St. Included in the ticket price of $250 is a continuous buffet of gourmet foods, open bar, casino gambling, entertainment, dancing and the opportunity to win a trip for two to Bermuda, an athletic club family membership, get-away weekends, numerous gift certificates and other special prizes.

More than 350 tickets have already been sold for the evening, according to Mrs. Gerald Ridge, Duxbury, who is chairperson for the Academy's Capital Campaign Committee, a group of past and present parents who have planned the event to raise funds for a new track-soccer-softball athletic facility.

"We are delighted thus far with the response from the business community and from Notre Dame friends in the area," Mrs. Ridge said. "Our goal, however, is to sell 500 tickets for this memorable opportunity to meet these sports and media stars and have an enjoyable, elegant evening."

Tickets are available from the Notre Dame Academy Development Office 749-5930 or from committee members: John Allegrini, Marshfield; Martin Burke, Scituate; Joseph Curran, Hanover; Joseph D'Arrigo, Scituate; Edward DeGraan, Hingham; Fred Dellorfano, Cohasset and Robert Devin, Hingham.

Also Maria and Jim Gianquitto, Canton; Harry Healey, Hingham; Denise and Will McDonough, Hingham; Edward McHugh, No. Scituate; James Mohan, Norwell; Charles Mooney, Hingham; Leo O'Hara, Dover; Mary Anne and Peter Merrigan, Milton; Joseph O'Neil, Hingham; Jake Powers, Cohasset; T. Kenwood Mullare, Norwell; David Wallace, Braintree; David Nagle, Hanover and the Honorable Jerome Troy, No. Marshfield.

MUSINGS

by JOHN H. CUTLER

☐ You're really sharp if you can answer all three of these questions correctly. 1.) What is the most common first name of U.S. Presidents? 2.) Where did golf originate? 3.) Only right-handed players may compete in this game. What game? Answers below.

☐ If Washington St. was laid out in 1779, how come the George Robson house, built in 1802, is off angle?

☐ Irrelevant information: The longest bicycle ever constructed was a tandem that could seat 10.

☐ There is so much good in bad people, said Lincoln Steffans, there must be some good in good people.

☐ According to one theory, city life stimulates writers. For example, Shakespeare wrote nothing but doggerel lampoon before he came to London. So said Oscar Wilde.

☐ If he lit all the candles on his birthday cake, it would look like a torchlight procession.

☐ Now that OPEC has lost its clout, we can expect fewer shakedowns from sheikdoms.

☐ Some ministers, instead of wasting their time trying to make God more man-like, should make an effort to make man more God-like.

Playwright Robert Sherwood, who won three Pulitzer Prizes for Drama in six years, flunked English A at Harvard.

☐ Humiston's Law: When you are up to your fanny in alligators, it's hard to remember that your original intention was to drain the swamp.

☐ George Kaufman speaking: "Mantell played the king (in King John) as if he were afraid someone else was going to play the ace."

Answers to quiz: 1.) The most common name of U.S. Presidents is James. 2.) Golf originated in Holland (not Scotland). 3.) Only right-handed players may compete in polo because of a law made by the U.S. Polo Ass'n. to cut down on collisions.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A few words about maturity

A sister so retarded she had to be institutionalized for life. An elder brother blown to bits over the English Channel. A sister dead in a plane crash, her husband dead in a separate one. A dynamic father paralyzed and speechless from a stroke for several years before his death. Another elder brother shot to death. One's back broken in yet another plane crash. Still another elder brother shot to death. An automobile accident in which a woman drowns. A fatherless nephew in another automobile accident in which a girl is paralyzed for life. A sick, asthmatic child. Another child suddenly down with cancer, his leg amputated at the hip. An alcoholic wife. A divorce. Another fatherless nephew arrested for drug possession. Still another dead from drugs.

For the great majority of us who live out our lives in the relative safety of anonymity, any one of the above calamities would be a major event, a life crisis of the first order. To each and every one of us, these things or their like do happen if we live long enough. They happen perhaps once, twice, three times in a normal lifespan. When they happen we endure them yet somehow cope and move forward and look back on them as terrible times.

But for the senior senator of Massachusetts, Edward M. Kennedy, all of these events happened. Moreover each known trauma (there could be others that escaped our detection) occurred in what in pornography is called "full frontal nudity." Unlike most of the rest of us, Ted Kennedy has no privacy in these matters; his tragedies have transpired on television amidst a public career that officially began in the 1950's, but really began at birth.

Nor are tragedies the end of Kennedy's burden. As the last of four brothers, he has been asked to carry the familial and political torch at an age when the rest of us get the opportunity to straighten out our adolescent quirks. For every admirer of John and Robert Kennedy, Ted has been the "crown prince" since that day of June, 1968 when Bobby Kennedy died. For liberals, their fortunes slowly and sometimes quickly waning in the affluent America the New Deal did so much to bring about, Ted Kennedy is the last hope — a "hope" used as a figurehead rather than really appreciated as a human being. For conservatives, on the other hand, Ted Kennedy is the "devil incarnate," in short a godsend to all their direct-mail fundraising efforts — the man himself as little appreciated or understood by them as by the liberals.

I go into this because it seems to me that most of us lose all sense of perspective when we judge Ted Kennedy. We have watched him in the public eye from his middle twenties to his middle fifties, and whether we judge him kindly or not, nearly all of us are guilty of judging him as a figure and a symbol, not as a person. Moreover, many of us made our judgment based on the emotions he roused in us a quarter of a century ago, and haven't extended the man — the human being I mean — the courtesy of updating our perception.

I believe the Ted Kennedy of his mid fifties, newly free for the time being of the inherited duty to pursue the presidency, deserves nothing so much as another look. In attempting to do just that, I believe I've noticed something different and quite pleasing: maturity.

Politically this has been expressed by forsaking being what I like to call a "knee-jerk jerk" on issues — in other words now and then forsaking taking the approved liberal line on an issue and thinking the matter through for himself. For instance, he has, to the annoyance of many, supported Gramm-Rudman — support that may or may not stand the test of time, but will have the effect of making Kennedy greatly more credible when, as he will on most issues, he toes the liberal line.

Another recent act that I found highly pleasing were Kennedy's remarks following the fall of Marcos in the Phillippines. What one would have expected him to say, indeed what his puerile colleague John Kerry did say, were words to the effect that all of this came about no thanks to the terrible right-winger in the White House — a statement probably inaccurate only in the final week of the crisis. What Sen. Kennedy said of the matter was that the toppling of Marcos came about through the efforts of "two great leaders — Cory Aquino and Ronald Reagan."

I don't believe we would have seen such magnanimity on Ted Kennedy's part a decade ago, any more than we see it on John Kerry's part today. The pity it will be if the public cannot adjust its perception of a man who, still relatively young after nearly a quarter of a century in office, is probably just now reaching the height of his powers. Such is the disadvantage of growing up in the public eye: one does not share in the majoritarian luxury of making one's young mistakes in obscurity, and one comes to be judged in later life by the immature persona.

The immature persona as senator left a lot to be desired in this reporter's view. Young Ted Kennedy was a powerful orator — the best of the Kennedy brothers. But having never held a private sector job, paid a mortgage, or been in debt, his understanding of the man in the street was entirely theoretical. His cynical 1962 slogan "he can do more for Massachusetts" was quite the opposite of the international senator he was to become: he has always done a poor job of representing his district, and the great majority of state legislators have never even shaken his hand, let alone had his helping hand on an issue.

Finally, there is the episode, when Kennedy was 36, at Chappaquiddick. From the midnight swim to the main island to the 4:00 a.m. appearance at the hotel desk in dry clothes, nothing in the accounts of his behavior that night permits any other conclusion than that his concern for the life of the girl was secondary to his frantic effort to escape and establish an alibi. It is not, as he often said in retrospect, that he acted irrationally, it is that he acted too rationally.

That probably disqualifies him from becoming President — it certainly does as far as my vote is concerned. But it does not disqualify him from redeeming growth, growth of which I think the signs are unmistakable. One hopes for him that as his powers and maturity grow, the opportunity to create a more meaningful legacy will not flee him. For the mature persona the Senate is, in a way, a dead end, for while Kennedy has influence there, he has no power. Perhaps he should run for governor in 1990. He would make an interesting successor to Mike Dukakis or, um, Greg Hyatt, and the governorship would give him the power to make his legacy in a way that his hand-me-down Senate seat never will.

At any rate, one hopes that in the remaining years of Kennedy's career both friend and foe will extend the man the supreme courtesy of treating him and judging him as a man and not a figurehead.

Turnpike Authority chairman pleased with transit articles

Dear Mr. Mittell:

I read with great interest two of your three articles on Transportation 1986. They were very well done which I am sure took a great deal of research.

I particularly want to thank you for your complimentary comments about my administration of the Turnpike.

Very truly yours,
John T. Driscoll

Art in travel, garden & home subject of So. Shore Art Center mini-series

The perception of "art is all around us" is the central focus of a new April mini-series—Design for Living—which explores the concept of art expressed through many different forms. This year's three evening lectures at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, explore art in travel as in Japanese architecture, art in the garden by creating unique landscapes and art in the home through interior design. Advanced registration is required for the lectures.

A discussion and slide presentation of Japanese urban, temple and ancient architecture will be led by Meg Hickey, head of the design department at the Massachusetts College of Art, on Monday, April 7 at 7:30 p.m.

She will show the Ninth Century villages of Tokyo, Kyoto and Takayama; the canal town of Kurashiki; and the villages of Tsumago and Magome on the Eku Trail through the Japanese Alps. Hickey is a mechanical engineer, a registered architect and a renovation consultant for the City of Cambridge.

Landscape architect Mary Smith comes to the Center Wednesday, April 16 at 7:30 p.m. to give a workshop on "Color in the Garden, the Art of Seeing."

She will concentrate on how to create a uniqueness in the garden by using color and textures effectively in landscape design. Smith is the principle of Mary A. Smith Associates, landscape architects.

For the last program in the series, Wednesday, April 23, interior designer Gail Bertocchi will discuss "Creating Your Interior—1986." Whether decorating for the first time or refurbishing for the 100th, you will find current ideas and information that will help turn your environment into a distinctive design. Bertocchi of Gails Bertocchi Interiors will discuss current design trends in flooring, walls, furniture and windows and explain how to use American Williamsburg, French, and English designs in tune with 1986.

The Design for Living mini-series is funded by the Joseph Drown Foundation and by the Marion Huse Memorial Fund. For registration call the Center, 383-9548.

FROM THE GARDEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Mother Nature sheds her wintry embrace

They're back! As if awaiting their cue, out of the woods came a flock of robins, landing in our back yard on the first day of spring.

The familiar call of the red-winged blackbird was heard near a swampy area and another of nature's harbingers, the bright red cardinal, whistles loud and clear from the tallest trees early in the morning.

Next on the program will be the evening sing-song of the peepers and though they're only about an inch long, their chorus of bird-like peeps can be heard a mile away from the marsh and swamps where they congregate.

The average length of days come mid-April is 13 hours and 35 minutes. Come the end of the month, we make the happy switch to daylight saving time on Saturday, April 26.

Our indoor plants are responding quickly to the lengthening days. Surprisingly, this is true even when grown under fluorescent lights. With new growth beginning, it's time to resume feeding your plants.

It's also wise to check for insect pests and a light misting with a common aerosol insecticide is usually effective, even on delicate ferns. Isolate an ailing plant and discard it if it doesn't respond to treatment.

Two lucky people were Janet Ingram and David Clapp who saw a bluebird during the first week of spring. Just passing through on its way north, the bird that was once native to this area when some of us were children, is seldom seen anymore. Their cheery warble from the edge of the woods or open fields was another sign of spring, but no more do we spot their nests with blue eggs.

Five years ago when Barbara and Conlan Warren admired a horse chestnut abloom with deep rose flowers, the Humarock owner made them a gift of four chestnuts. Only one took root and they carefully tended it in their greenhouse winters and a sheltered spot in the yard summers.

Finally, it sprouted a chestnut which Barbara put in a plastic bag in the refrigerator before potting. Lots of "TLC" has now resulted in a mini-tree 10 feet high with six leaves. The moral to this tale is that it's fun to experiment like this with unusual things such as pineapple tops, avocado pits, kiwi stones and even carrot tops. The latter's ferns made a pretty showing in a kitchen window exhibit in the spring flower show.

Another imaginative touch at the Mass. Horticulture's annual March show was seen in the Plimouth Plantation's blue ribbon winner where parsley carpeted a little walk lined with boxwood and spring flowers.

A 24-hour bird-a-thon May 16 is a novel fund-raiser for Massachusetts Audubon Society. David Clapp, director of the Marshfield office, says teams from all over the state will compete in seeing who can list the most birds. His team will split up to visit the North Shore, Monomoy and some will even go by boat to Stellwagon Bank. Everyone is invited to join in the fun. Save the date. More details to come!

With a little coaxing, your Easter Lily will live to see another day. After it finishes flowering, cut off the dead blooms, but leave the flowering stalk to wither. Keep the plant growing on a fairly sunny windowsill with a reasonable amount of water.

Sometime after Memorial Day, dig a hole several inches deeper than the pot. Put in a pad of pebbles, knock out the plant and center on the stones. The best location in your garden is a spot where it will get morning sun.

Don't even think about buying your geraniums until you see the beauties Seaside Gardeners will have for sale May 10. In colors of pink, white and red, growing in 4 1/4" pots, you will want to choose many for your home or Memorial Day. Kathy Wolff will have more specifics later, but for now, garden club members in Marshfield would appreciate your remembering them when you think geraniums.

Mother Nature can be very devious at this time of year, lulling us into putting away our woolies one day, only to have us shivering the next. Just think, only two years ago we had the worst spring storm of the century with 60 mph winds and a foot of snow, even though April was only two days away. Perhaps Mother Nature is also fooled into thinking winter lingers on when she sees the drowsy Christmas wreaths still decorating front doors at every turn of the road. Let's have a grand clean-up, banish them to the dump and while we're at it, throw out that droopy red poinsettia in the picture window.

Not only did they walk off with a second place award at the New England Flower Show, but Norwell Garden Club members had the fun of seeing what goes on behind the scenes while they decorated their bay window with plants they grew themselves during the winter. Ruth Russell, Sara Freeman, Jeannette MacKenzie, Marion Dunne and Frances Dunford were among the garden club members who worked on their prize-winning exhibit while seeing the 3½ acres of the Bay State Exhibition Hall transformed into a glorious spring scene.

The big parade is on, so dust off your binoculars and get out your field guide to welcome back the birds. From points as far south as the Antarctic, the mysterious migratory urge brings millions of birds traveling our Atlantic Flyway. The flights build to a peak next month and by June it will be all over until fall. Here on the South Shore, the phoebes have been sighted, Myron Litchfield has seen fox and song sparrows, as well as juncoes.

Warren Harrington reports a killdeer and woodcock, while in North Scituate there were 30 red-necked grebes, two harlequin ducks and three black guillemots. Birding is booming and beginners are buying up about 140,000 copies of Roger Tory Peterson's "A Field Guide to the Birds; East of the Rockies" ($11.95 in paperback.) The first year, 2,000 copies of his guide were published and over the last 52 years, the guide has sold 3.25 million copies, making it the top seller in the history of Houghton Mifflin Company.

Since North America has only one-tenth of the world's species of birds, serious watchers are apt to travel far and wide to such places as Africa, Mexico, or even the Antarctic in search of penguins and other unusual birds.

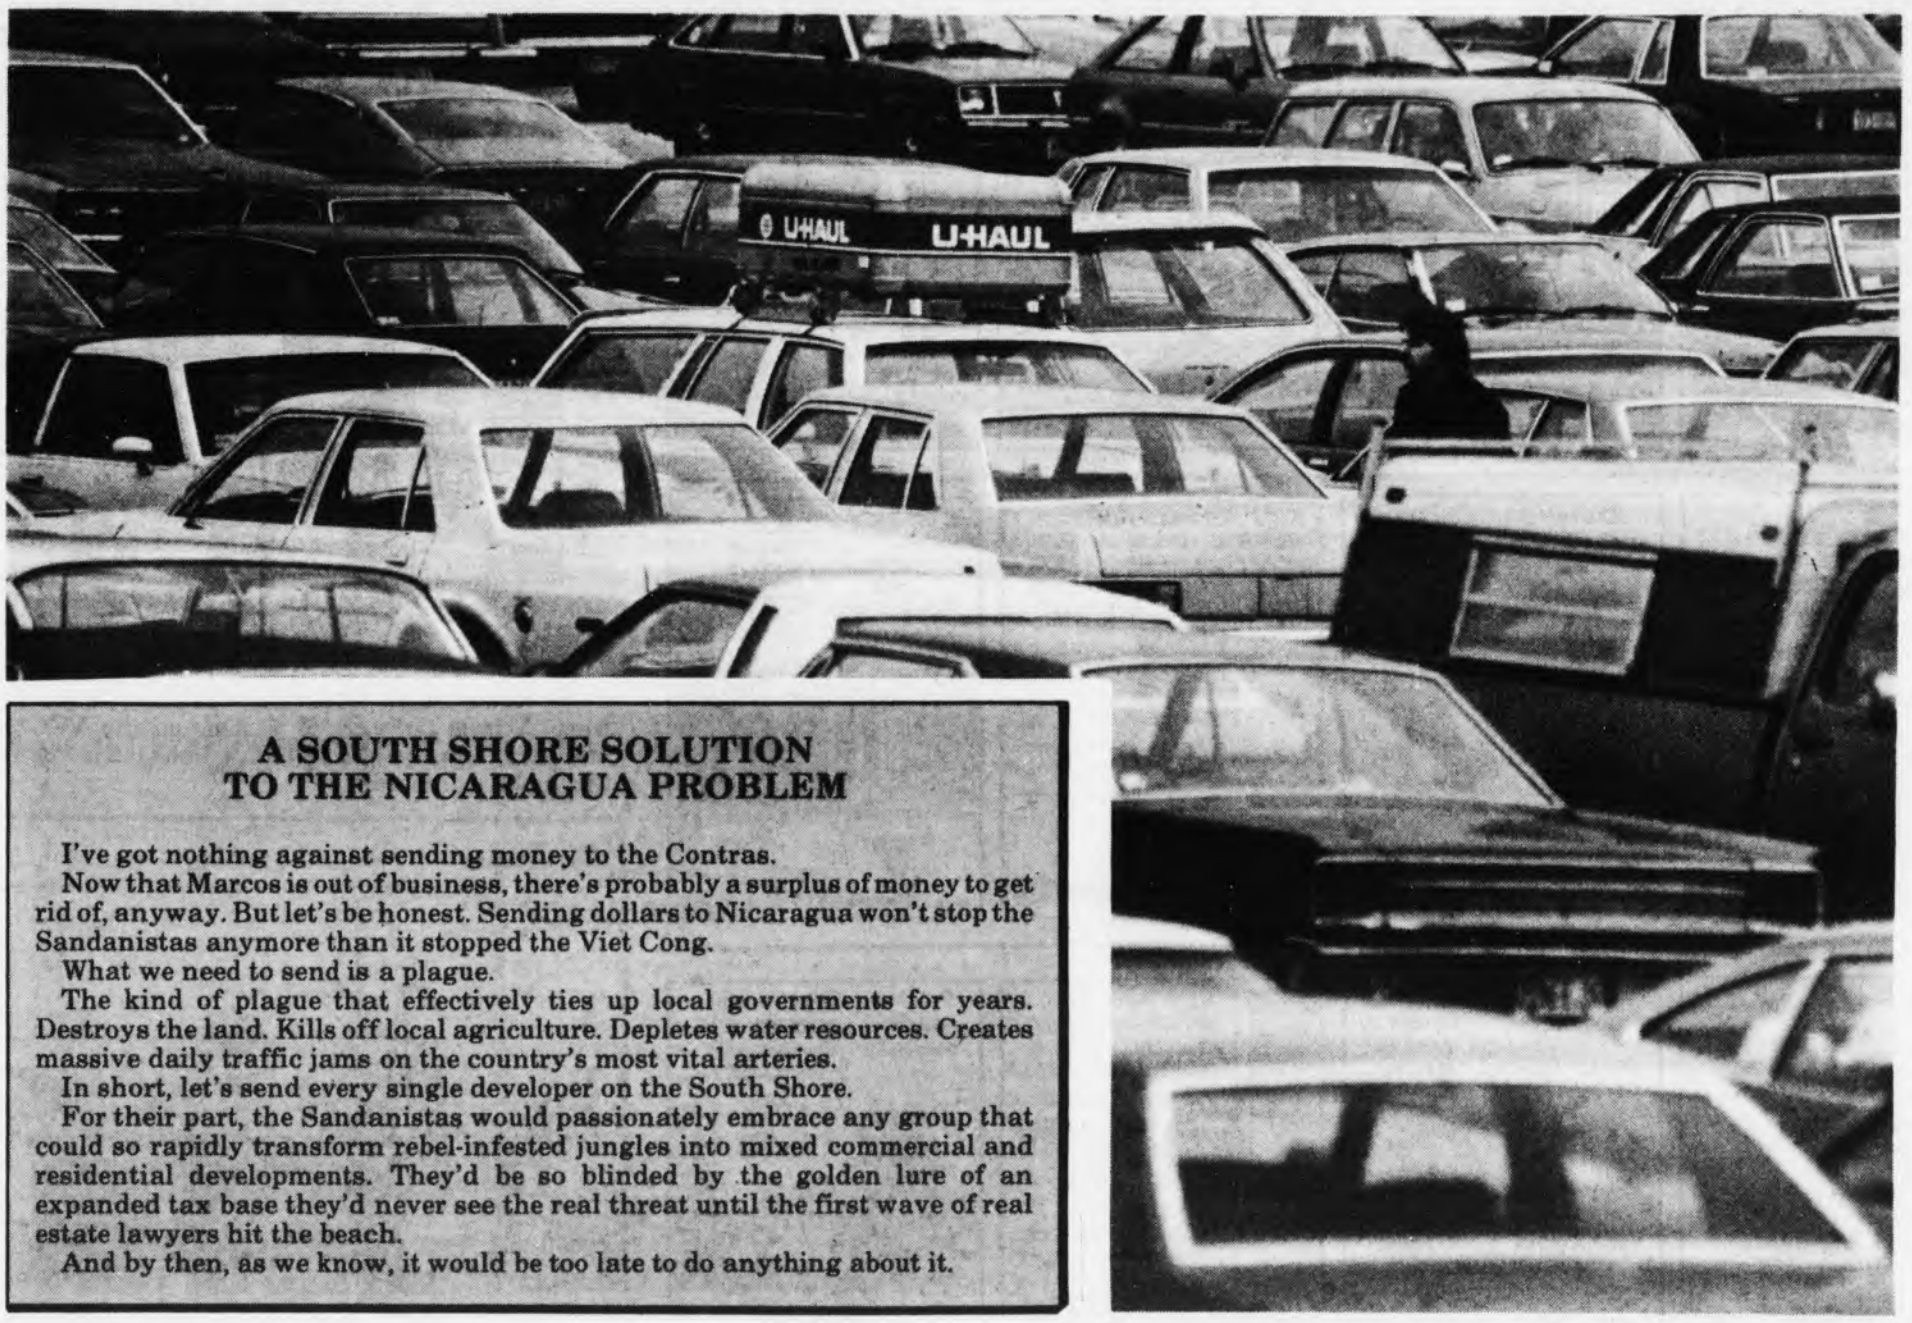
A Stone's Throw

by Paul Steven Stone



A SOUTH SHORE SOLUTION TO THE NICARAGUA PROBLEM

I've got nothing against sending money to the Contras.

Now that Marcos is out of business, there's probably a surplus of money to get rid of, anyway. But let's be honest. Sending dollars to Nicaragua won't stop the Sandanistas anymore than it stopped the Viet Cong.

What we need to send is a plague.

The kind of plague that effectively ties up local governments for years. Destroys the land. Kills off local agriculture. Depletes water resources. Creates massive daily traffic jams on the country's most vital arteries.

In short, let's send every single developer on the South Shore.

For their part, the Sandanistas would passionately embrace any group that could so rapidly transform rebel-infested jungles into mixed commercial and residential developments. They'd be so blinded by the golden lure of an expanded tax base they'd never see the real threat until the first wave of real estate lawyers hit the beach.

And by then, as we know, it would be too late to do anything about it.

Plymouth marketplace needs help-wanted applicants

Despite the rapidly expanding economy, many companies on the South Shore are still having their troubles. It's not that they aren't getting their share of the business. Many firms are busier now than ever before and are growing quickly. It's just a lot tougher these days finding people to work.

"It seems like we've created more jobs than there are workers," said John Spence, Rockland Trust Chairman. "The unemployment rate in this region is down around 3 or 4 percent. When the rate is that low, it's tough getting the people you need."

The 1986 Plymouth Area Job Marketplace will bring employers together with local residents. The free job fair, which will be held Saturday, April 5, at Cordage Park Marketplace in North Plymouth, will highlight the variety of employment opportunities and job benefits, including favorable wages, flexible hours, training and daycare.

More than 600 jobs with more than 40 companies are expected to be listed at the Job Marketplace, including mechanical, assembly, managerial, healthcare, food service, administrative and more. An estimated 5,000 people will visit the second annual job fair, which will also feature free workshops on interview skills and resume writing.

Rockland Trust is one of the firms participating in the Plymouth Area Job Marketplace. Spence said his financial institution is looking for 12 employees, half for the new North Plymouth branch and the rest for the bank's headquarters in Rockland. The jobs vary from managers and mortgage underwriters to customer service representatives and tellers.

"We need more people," he said. "We have a number of full and part-time positions and we'd like to fill them with people who live in this area. I like to think we have a lot to offer. We can provide the training in most cases and we've got a benefit schedule that's darn good."

Despite the low unemployment rate, Spence believes the people are out there. Like most firms at the job fair, Rockland Trust will attempt to attract residents who work in Boston or other places outside the South Shore and women who are re-entering the workforce after raising a family.

Wear-Guard Work Clothes of Norwell has more than 200 positions to fill during the Job Marketplace. The manufacturer of work and leisure clothing is Plymouth County's largest single employer and is growing at a rapid rate. The company is hiring in all areas— from professional to entry-level—and has many part-time jobs on the first and second shifts.

Laura Thompson, a Wear-Guard personnel representative, said it has become increasingly difficult to find workers because of how fast companies have expanded in the region. She noted that her firm has become more creative in its hiring practices by offering people a chance to grow with a successful company and by promoting from within.

Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Massachusetts is another business at the job fair with a strong need for new people. Located in the Plymouth Industrial Park, the Claims Processing Division will be hiring up to 75 workers during 1986.

The health insurance company will try to fill a variety of position in clerical and other areas, according to Karl Scottron, the local division's manager. Blue Cross/Blue Shield offers training and a flexible work schedule on two shifts. Benefits include salary incentive program and health and dental insurance.

Some of the other firms signed up for the event include Jack Conway Realtors, Boston Whaler, Arcata Graphics/Halliday, Ocean Spray Cranberries, Pixley-Richards Inc., Special Care Nursing, Sheraton Plymouth at Village Landing, Plymouth Five Cents Savings Bank, Angelo's Supermarkets, Electro Signal Labs and Metropolitan Life Insurance.

These and other businesses will be hiring full-time, part-time, seasonal and second shift personnel during the 1986 Plymouth Area Job Marketplace, which will be held on Saturday, April 5, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Cordage Park Marketplace. The facility is located on Route 3A in North Plymouth and features a retail shopping mall with a 12 restaurant food pavilion.

People requiring more information about the job fair should contact Tony Lonardo at 746-3377 or Maria White at 746-6680. No fees will be charged to job applicants. Local radio station WATD-FM will broadcast live from the job fair during the day.

The Job Marketplace is sponsored by the following firms and agencies: Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Cordage Park Marketplace, Department of Public Welfare, Employment Training Choices Program, Plymouth Area Chamber of Commerce, Plymouth Development & Industrial Commission, Plymouth-Hanover-Middleboro Job Matching Center, Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, South Coastal Private Industry Council, South Shore Community Action Council and Wear-Guard Work Clothes.

Plymouth County D.A. urges open meeting compliance

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

Any audience member attending a public meeting has the right to know the reason for a closed-door executive session meeting, Plymouth County District Attorney William C. O'Malley said last week.

O'Malley conducted a seminar last week on the state Open Meeting Law for about 250 government officials, members of the media and interested citizens.

"In our democracy, governmental power comes from the people," O'Malley said. "In order for people to make informed decisions, they've got to have access to government and public business.

"The Open Meeting Law says that "all meetings of a governmental body shall be open to the public and any person shall be permitted to attend any meeting except as otherwise provided in except for certain specific exceptions detailed in the law."

A government board can only enter executive session, which excludes the public, for seven specified reasons allowed by the law. They include: discussions of an individual's character or health rather than professional competence; considerations of discipline or dismissal; to hear complaints against an individual, or discussions of collective bargaining or litigation strategy.

"In all open meeting situations you should remember the purpose of the law," said Assistant District Attorney Maryellen O'Sullivan, "which is that all government business should be conducted in public."

"It is unfortunate that discussions of the Open Meeting Law mostly concern the exceptions to the law," said Assistant District Attorney John Corbett. "You can get the impression that the statute tells boards how to have executive sessions.

"This is not a statute enabling executive sessions," he said. "It is a mandate for open meetings rather than a permissive statute that enables executive sessions."

Corbett pointed out that in drafting the law, the legislature realized that sometimes a governmental body can be hampered by having an open meeting. Strict procedures for entering executive session were outlined to prevent abuses of the Open Meeting Law's intent.

Before entering executive session, a government body must first convene in open session and a majority of members must vote to go into executive session through roll call vote.

The board can only go into executive session for one of the seven exceptions provided in the Open Meeting Law, and the presiding officer must cite which exception allows the executive session.

"If the board deviates from the exception given, the executive session is in violation of the Open Meeting Law," Corbett said.

The first exception to the Open Meeting Law allows a board to enter executive session "to discuss the reputation, character, physical condition or mental health rather than the professional competence of an individual.

The board must notify the person in question 48 hours in advance of the meeting, and the board must hold an open meeting if the individual so requests.

"This exception is intended to prevent invasion of an individual's privacy," said Corbett. "It's based on the policy that individuals of a city or town are entitled to access to actions of officials."

The second exception allows executive sessions "to consider the discipline or dismissal of, or to hear complaints or charges brought against, a public officer, employee, staff member or individual. . . ."

"Like the first exception, the legislative intent is to protect an individual's reputation," Corbett said. Again, the individual must be notified 48 hours in advance of the proposed executive session, and the person can request that the meeting be open.

The third exception allows an executive session "to discuss strategy with respect to collective bargaining or litigation if an open meeting may have a detrimental effect on the bargaining or litigating position of the governmental body. . . ."

"Collective bargaining is recognized as a sensitive situation," said Corbett. "We don't want a union leader hearing a board's strategy in an open meeting. We need to protect the bargaining position of a board."

"In considering litigation, everything a board does is something potentially subject to litigation," Corbett said. "There has to be a specific threat of potential litigation for a board to enter executive session."

The other four exceptions to the Open Meeting Law are to discuss the deployment of security personnel or devices, to investigate charges of criminal misconduct or to discuss filings of criminal complaints, to consider real estate transactions where open discussions would negatively affect a board's negotiating position, or to comply with provisions of any general or special law or federal grant requirements.

"This is a statute to ensure openness in government," Corbett said, "not an enabling statute for executive sessions."

Mary Adelman of the League of Women Voters offered suggestions on when to report suspected Open Meeting Law violations to the district attorney's office.

"Is the body in question making a decision concerning something really important?" she said. "If so, and you suspect it is an important decision and you suspect a violation, you should notify the district attorney.

Adelman also said to watch for a repeated pattern of exclusion of the public or a failure to keep records.

"Also, if you need a third party to settle a dispute, then you should contact the district attorney's office," she said. All other complaints should be raised to the board in question, she said.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

The Dragon looked at the mail and shook his head. "Does this envelope with a window in it mean you've been charging clothes? The letterhead says CW&T."

"Of course it does," I told him. "I was saving you money."

"You save me money by buying clothes," he repeated. "Would you mind running that by me again, slowly?"

"Not at all. When the Mariner asked me to cover CW&T's opening, I agreed because we could use the money," I said virtuously.

"Then when I went to the opening I noticed that if you opened an account they gave you a gift from Estee Lauder worth $40. Certainly you wouldn't want me to just leave $40 lying there on the counter. And it didn't cost a thing to open the account."

He sighed. "And was this wonderful free gift filled with things you would have bought anyway?" I thought for a minute. "No. It was filled with things they wanted me to try in the hope that I'd buy lots more later on. And I did."

He took the bill between his thumb and forefinger and held it at arm's length.

"And it was necessary to use the charge? If you don't use it it just shrivels up and goes away? It was essential that you buy everything in the store?"

"Now you're being ridiculous," I replied. "I didn't use the charge because I wanted to keep it open. I used it because I had my colors done."

He looked at me blankly. "I always said that if you ever went completely off your rocker, it would probably be months before anyone noticed anything different. Think back a few months. Did something happen that I should be aware of?"

"Of course not. It happened last Saturday. I went to a Shaklee cosmetics party and the lady there analyzed my skin tone and held drapes up, and everyone agreed that I'm a Spring. Isn't that great? I'm just coming into my own season."

"I'm not even going to ask you to explain that," he told me. "I just want to know the bottom line. How much did it cost?"

"Ha!" I explained. "I was saving money there, too. Some places charge up to $70 to do your colors. The Shaklee lady did it for nothing, and for a mere $5 she gave me this nice color wheel to taking shopping with me. See? I only buy things that are these colors, and I bring out the very best in me."

The Dragon looked puzzled. "Those colors are red, blue, green, yellow, purple, orange and brown. Those are the colors you already wear."

"But not in those shades," I told him patiently. "Aren't you glad I didn't spend $70 to find out I don't have a thing that's fit to wear?"

"Do you mean to tell me you went to a cosmetics party and you only spent $5."

"Not exactly," I admitted. "After all, I am a Spring. The makeup I'd been wearing might have been all right for a Summer — possibly even an Autumn, but for a Spring it just wasn't right at all."

He shook his head again. "Would you believe me if I told you I thought you looked fine before you became a Spring? That I'd love you even if you were Winter?"

"I might," I replied. "But on the other hand I might think you were trying to talk me out of spending more money."

He looked hurt. "You certainly are a suspicious woman. But I'll make a deal with you. If you let me mind your charge card for the next month I promise not to make any "color" jokes."

"Why do you want my charge card," I asked.

"Because," he replied, "if I leave it with you they'll have to color me destitute."

I whipped my card back out of his hand. "You just defaulted," I told him. "Deal's off."
